MEASLES

are very popular in some districts, but the most popular thing in this district are the birds and bird rooms owned by E. L. Storey. There are no birds just like them, none just as good, nor are there any as cheap. When I say cheap, I do not wish you to think I am selling these well-known cock Canaries at 2/6 each which to the purchaser's sorrow prove to be hens. What I offer are genuine high-class birds at ordinary prices. You can get a Hartz cock anywhere for 6/6, or a St. Andreasburg Roller 10/6; but the point is the quality. Unless you hear my Rollers sing you cannot comprehend the high quality of my birds. Every bird is imported direct from the native breeders by myself; no middleman's profits, or the best picked out. I do not sell you any fancy names. I have no necessity to; the birds themselves prove their genuine quality. Take into consideration the hundreds of unsolicited testimonials I am continually receiving from all over the world. My motto is, and always was, every customer guaranteed fullest satisfaction; no humbug or trickery. I send the birds you order on 7 days' approval at my sole risk; this allows you time to prove the birds to be what you require; if not, you send them back. You cannot have anything fairer. The railway books prove that I do not get 1 per cent. of the birds I send out returned; this speaks volumes for my selection and the quality of my birds. Whatever you require, let me send it to you on 7 days' approval. I can satisfy the most sceptical faaciers, for I know the high quality of my birds to be unsurpassable. Genuine trained St. Andreasburg Rollers, with full change of song by day and artificial light, cocks 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/- each; pure bred Roller hens 3/-, 3/6, 4/- each. The above are picked birds, free from harsh or choppy notes. If you want loud free songsters, my Hartz cocks are the working man's friend; cocks in full, loud, free song, by day and gas light, 6/9 6/3, 6/6, 7/- each; mated pairs for breeding songsters, 8/6, 9/6, 10/6. My Rollers are all kept in separate singing room away from all other birds. My stock of Yorkshires and Norwich lead the way for style, quality, and condition; birds bred from and related to noted winners, cocks 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6; hens 4/-, 4/6, 5/6, 6/6; either Yorkshires or Norwich. Goldfinch cocks 2/6, 3/-, 3/6; Bullfinch hens 1/9, 2/- each. All Canaries carriage paid to your door on 7 days' approval at my risk. Neat travelling cages 3d. each. WHAT! YOU?
I am surprised. It seems so ridiculous to hear you mention dissatisfaction. You never hear my customers mention it; the fact is, they have forgotten there is such a thing since they got their birds from these aviaries, the fountain-head of quality, combined with cheapness. The surest way to spell satisfaction is S-t-o-r-e-y-'-s B-i-r-d-s, for I guarantee every customer full satisfaction. Just you call in and inspect my stock; it will do you good, and you will not be pressed to buy, for I know you will see scores of birds you would like to possess. You have no need to pay fancy prices. I have had a lot of experience breeding and selling birds, always breeding from the best of stock birds and winners, and selling the birds at reasonable prices within the reach of all. My matched pairs of Yorkshires and Norwich at 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 17/6, 20/- per pair are unequalled for style and quality, and are birds that will do you good. No breeder can show more and better unsolicited testimonials than the thousands of originals I have open for your inspection. I do not show one bird and sell another; every bird I have is for sale. See my advertisement under Rollers. Call and inspect my stock. You will be convinced. I have the best pure-bred Yorkshires, that cannot be beaten for type, size, and quality; feathers like wax. Cocks, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6 each; hens, 3/6, 4/-, 4/6. 5/- each; matched pairs for breeding, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-; extra fine cobby Norwich cocks 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6 each; hens, 3/6, 4/-, 4/6, 5/- each; matched breeding pens, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-. THOMAS'S WINNING YORKSHIRES have earned a reputation by their consistent winning throughout the season at all the leading shows. The following facts, which can easily be verified, are sufficient evidence in support of this claim.

During this season I have won over 60 first prizes, 40 seconds, 40 thirds, 30 specials in hot competition, including all the leading shows. I have bred birds that secured premier honours at this year's Crystal Palace show. My customers also have had wonderful success on the show bench with birds bred from matched pairs supplied by me. Proof of this is filed, and open for the inspection of all.

At the present time I am in a position to put any fancier on the highway to success in breeding for the show bench. I have 30 pairs which I had reserved for my own breeding, and which I find I have not now room for. These are for sale at 30/-, 35/-, 40/-, 50/-, to 100/- per pair.

I have also recently acquired the entire surplus stocks of certain well-known exhibitors in Yorkshire, who have bred some of the best Yorkshires living to-day. These are all caged off separately, and I can supply some real gems, with the right blood in them, from these reliable strains at following prices:—Cocks or hens, yellows or buffs, in clears and ticks, also a few variegated, at 10/-, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 30/-, 40/-, 50/-, 60/- each upwards; matched pairs, 20/-, 25/-, 30/-, 40/- upwards. Full particulars supplied with birds. Strain and sex absolutely guaranteed. Every pair unrelated, and properly matched to produce the right stamp. This is a genuine opening for anyone to improve his stock. Special easy terms where necessary to bona-fide fanciers. Cages 3d. extra. Every bird on 7 days' approval. For other prices see my adverts. on pages 268 and 269.

LONDON AND PROVINCIAL O.S.

Members were entertained on March 16th to a very interesting lecture by Mr. H. Norman. There was a fairly large number present, and our president, Mr. G. Crabb, presided. Mr. Norman in his opening remarks said he thought "Bird life, within an hour of London Bridge" would be more interesting than the usual British bird lecture. He proposed taking his own village of Carshalton as his base, touching on the rarer birds found there, and in the surrounding country. A day in the country might be spent by anyone fond of birds, and much pleasure might be derived from a day so spent in noticing the habits and ways of the different birds one would come across. Some of the birds Mr. Norman spoke of were:—The Kingfisher, Moorhen, Wagtails, Woodpecker, Plover, Blackcap, Nightjar, Golden-Crested Wren. Mr. Norman related stories connected with some of these birds. Mr. Crabb made several remarks, as did also Messrs. Couzens and Day, and Mdme. Madewell. Everyone present declared this was one of the most interesting evenings the society had held. Everyone was so pleased that Mr. Norman was asked to visit us again during the year, which he said he would be pleased to do. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Norman and Mr. Crabb. Will members please note that on April 6 there will be a lecture on British birds, by Geo. Crabb, Esq., illustrated by limelight views, some 90 pictures in all. It is hoped members will try and be present, as a lecture of this kind means considerable trouble both to the lecturer and the secretary. This is an addition to the year's programme.—C. W. Law, Sec.

The Breeding of the Norwich Plainhead.

By
A. W. CURTIS

Second instalment of this very helpful and interesting paper.

The novice has heard an old hand telling another fancier of a champion he once bred from two buffs. The novice, without seeking further information, rushes home and puts together two buffs totally unfit for double-buffing; the result of this injudicious pairing is the production of young with as much feather as one could desire to find on a Crest, with thigh feather so long and loose that it almost reaches the perch. Double-buffing may be all right, providing the proper material is used, but I cannot help thinking that the pairing of two buffs has been carried on too extensively of late years, and I am afraid the champions are the chief sinners in this direction.

If I thought the question had been thoroughly thrashed out, and that the majority were of the opinion that it was absolutely necessary to double-buff to keep up the standard of the Norwich variety, I would say: by all means proceed. My candid opinion is that if we double-buff we must double-yellow also, or in years hence we may find yellows more valuable than diamonds. Why is it one gets so many applications for yellow cocks and yellow hens, when a buff is seldom asked for? To my mind, the answer is quite plain. It is an acknowledged fact that by pairing yellow and buff we get a larger percentage of buffs; yet a great number of breeders are so far gone on double-buffing that they have no thought or consideration for the future; their one cry is to get size. I very much question if double-buffing can lay claim to the production of size to the extent some would have us believe it does. The fancier who double-buffs will occasionally get a bird a bit above the average in size, and he won't forget to tell you that double-buffing has produced it. Good big birds are also bred from pairs mated in the ordinary way, but no fuss is made over such a bird: it is taken as a matter of course, especially by the double-buffer.

Double-Buffing.

I have experimented with the pairing of two buffs, but have satisfied myself beforehand that the birds mated have been of that tight, silky texture of feather so desirable on a buff. So far as my experience has led me, I certainly cannot agree with those who would cram us with the idea that all big birds are bred from two buffs. Some will so far forget themselves that if they see a good big yellow on the show bench they can be heard muttering to themselves: "Bred from two buffs, I'll bet."

My advice to the novice with regard to double-buffing is to have nothing to do with it until you have become more experienced and able to judge for yourself whether or not it will be beneficial to your stud. I cannot help relating an incident that came under my notice at one of our open shows some three years ago. A novice had two birds entered in the open novice classes, where they stood cardless. The novice was asking a champion what, in his opinion, was wrong with them. The champion answered that he could not see much wrong with them, unless it was that they wanted a bit more size. Pretending to have another good look at them, he turned to the novice with the remark: "If they are cock and hen, you take my advice, and double-buff with them.' I can truthfully say that in all my experience I have never seen two birds more unsuitably matched for double-buffing. After his friend the champion had left him I pointed out to the owner bad points possessed by each bird, and in a very few words convinced him that to proceed on such lines would be jumping out of the frying-pan into the fire.

Now we come to another contentious question, that of double-yellowing. This method of pairing also has its drawbacks, but, in my opinion, the advantages derived quite overshadow its drawbacks, for by double-yellowing you are increasing colour pigment without sacrificing quality of feather. By double-yellowing you are breeding birds necessary to counteract too much buff blood.

One will sometimes find among his stock a yellow with feather more resembling the buff in texture. By this I mean that if you lay the bird on its back and try to blow away the breast feather, you will find that such a bird will carry an abundance of rather harsh feather; it is not so soft and silky to the touch as that found on a nice silky feathered yellow. This is the bird I like to select to double-yellow with; that is, if I can find a partner for him with the same texture of feather. If such a bird is not to be found, then, if possible, I would select a buff that has been bred from two yellows.

Double-Yellowing.

I know some fanciers would have us believe that breeding from two yellows we can expect nothing but wasters; but my experience has been quite the contrary, for the largest bird I ever bred was from two yellows, and the smallest from two buffs. The best bird I ever bred, taking type, quality, colour, and size all into consideration, was bred from two yellows, and that during my novice days.

But I would here, again, advise the novice not to start double-yellowing until he has been breeding and learning for a year or two. If it the end of that time he has confidence in himself, I would say by all means try it; but don't overdo it: be sure the birds you double-yellow with have good, full heads and necks, for it is here you may loose a little boldness. Also see that flights and tails are not too long, for here you may gain a bit.

Birds bred from double yellows matched to those bred from double buffs seem to me to throw feather of a superior quality to that found on those bred from ordinary matings. This is more noticeable on the buffs than on the yellows, for they appear, to my mind, to carry a greater depth of under-colour. A novice must not lose sight of the fact that buffs bred from double-buffs should always be paired to yellows. One will occasionally get a buff from two yellows, and I have heard of a yellow being bred from two buffs; but I have yet the pleasure to see one.

I have tried, without success, to breed a yellow from two buffs, both (cock and hen) that I tried the experiment with being bred from two yellows. The youngsters bred from these two buffs were gems for colour and quality, but were rather small owing no doubt to their parents being too closely related; but for the experiment I should never have thought of pairing two such birds, as they were both on the small side.

The birds a novice should select for stock purposes are those with good bold heads and necks. These are two very essential points which should never be lost sight of. A Norwich Plainhead with a good, bold, well-shaped head and a well-filled-in neck is almost sure to attract a judge's eye.

A lover of a good head could not help but notice the falling-off in head properties of some of the champion Norwich at the late Palace Show. Some of them had that rather long, narrow head, with the eye too near the top of the skull, or, to be more correct, perhaps I should say having no rise of skull above the eye. Since the Palace Show I have had the pleasure of a few minutes' chat with one of our most popular judges, and I happened to mention the fact to him; at the same time, I asked if he had noticed the falling-off referred to, and his answer was that one could not help but notice it.

Hard to Maintain.

I would here advise the novice to be sure and not start with stock birds having heads with the faults described, for once get bad head points in your strain and you will find them most difficult to get rid of. You will have all your work cut out to keep up good head properties even if you start with birds perfect in head and neck.

I trust the novice will not be led to believe that to have a good head and neck only, a bird is bound to win; there are other qualities which are necessary in the making of a good Norwich. You want the birds with that chubby body so often described, but difficult to maintain, for Norwich always appear to develop in the opposite way to what we would have them. You may have satisfied yourself that in matching a certain pair of birds you have selected two with nice short bodies, birds that you feel sure cannot breed you a long-bodied youngster; but pair them as you will, Nature still maintains her mastership, and you have to rest content with one or two long, thin-bodied birds, more resembling the Yorkshire than a Norwich.

With regard to flights and tail, I like to select a hen having them fairly short, for I find that a long-tailed hen seldom breeds a short-tailed youngster. Avoid the hen having drooping wings, for if you should have youngsters from her, you may not see the last of it. I do like to see good, well-carried wings on my stock birds.

Now, for stock pairs you should have good big birds. I say birds because some fanciers (and I have heard it trotted out by those of experience) would have us believe that by having a big cock bird, no matter how rough and ugly he may be, all his imperfections can be counteracted in the progeny if you pair him to a hen no matter how small so long as she is typical and of good quality. I venture to say that to follow such advice, one would be a long time reaching the top rung of the ladder. I feel confident that were those gentlemen who advocate such pairing offered a good big yellow hen or two, there would be such a race to see who could get there first to secure them.

By TAFFY.

It was a foregone conclusion that Cardiff C.B.S. would withdraw from the Cage Bird Union this year. It was only after a great deal of persuasion on the part of Mr. Sampson that they held on last year. This makes two of the principal societies (Swansea and Cardiff) down South which have left the C.B.U. never to return under the present rules and system of the Union.

The dates fixed for the annual shows of Swansea and Cardiff this year are very close upon each other, Swansea fixing theirs for the second week in November, and Cardiff theirs for the third week. For several years Cardiff have taken the first week in December for their show date, giving the South Wales fanciers an opportunity to compete in both shows, but now their following Swansea the week after their date will affect the entries of both societies, for, a large number of the fanciers being working men, they cannot afford to enter their birds in both shows with only a few days between each.

The Llanelly Society are also contemplating running a show in November this year. They believe that by so doing they will have a better entry than they have had in previous years. If this is done, the show season so far as South Wales is concerned will be a very short one.

It is a pity the fanciers around Llanelly do not give a little more encouragement to the officials of their society by a larger attendance at the monthly meetings. It is very hard that the office-bearers should find the same few attending each meeting. I am certain that if the members would only rally to the meetings they would put fresh life into the society, and encourage those who have worked hard to keep the society together.

The Swansea Society has started the year in a progressive spirit, and from what I can gather they intend making it a record one. Several new members have been enrolled, and several more will be made at the next meeting.

What has become of the Welsh National Cage Bird Society, that a few years ago was alive and received such a splendid entry at their open show? It is a pity Wales has not a National show similar to those held in England and Scotland each year. It is not for the want of support that the late Welsh National is dead. Why do not the chief societies here try and come to some arrangement to hold one great National show every year, and let the show be a movable one; that is, Cardiff one year, Swansea the next, and Llanelly the following year? It only requires the combination and co-operation of the Cage Bird Societies to have this one great show every year; and it would prove a great financial success.

The new Border Fancy Canary Society that is being formed for the South will contain a large number of the Border fanciers from South Wales. This variety has become very popular here, and a large number of breeders are being continually added. One of the latest to keep the "little wee gem" is a well-known British bird exhibitor, who, after carrying away the chief honours in the British bird section, turns his hand to them. Will he be so successful in his new variety? Let us wait and see.

The Jay as a Cage Pet.

By
J. T. MILLOTT
(Mansfield).

In scientific language the Jay is known as Garrulus glandarius. "Glandarius" signifies of, or belonging to, acorns; the former means "chattering" or talkative—a leading characteristic of this bird, whose harsh cry is frequently heard amid the stillness of the woods. We seldom have an opportunity of observing it closely, except in confinement, but if taken young and properly trained, it becomes a very amusing pet, having a decided talent for mimicry. The nest is commonly built in a high tree, wood or hedge (generally a fair number of feet from the ground, but seldom near the top), mostly in the lower branches of the oak, hazel, and holly.

The nest is of an open shape, formed of twigs and sticks, and well lined with small roots, grasses, and horsehair; the Jay is a much neater builder than others of its family. The eggs are five or six in number, of a greenish or yellowish white, freckled all over with two shades of light brown, some having a greater degree of polish on them than others.

The Jay is an omnivorous feeder, and has a great partiality for acorns; also the eggs and young of game birds: hence he is shot without mercy by the gamekeepers. My two birds I took from the nest in a young oak tree close to the Butcher's Shambles or Robin Hood's Larder, in the Sherwood Forest, on the Duke of Portland's Estate.

The Jay in Confinement.

A pianoforte packing case I have transformed into an excellent cage for a Jay or Magpie, but, whatever the dimensions, the floor space should not be less than five square feet. Wood should be used for the top, bottom, back, and ends, and half-inch mesh wire netting should be used for the front. The roof should slope sufficiently towards the front to throw off the rain, and project four inches to keep the water from dripping inside the cage. Roofing felt is a very suitable covering, and all seams in the roof, at the back and ends, should be made as though non-existent. The open part of the front can easily be covered with tightly stretched wire netting, the door being made by fitting a wooden framework covered with wire netting.

A tin bottom is best if it is kept thickly covered with peat moss litter, or sea sand is the most suitable; and pigeon grit must be supplied in a tin. A couple of stout perches must be provided, oval in shape, from back to front of the cage. They should be removable for cleaning purposes. A curtain should be made to draw over the front of the cage at night and during inclement weather. Stout holland is the most suitable material for this purpose.

Food and water receptacles should be of glazed ware and kept sweet and clean. They should be made to fit securely with wire brackets, or the mischievous bird will upset them whenever they are refilled. The cage should be cleaned out once or twice a week. It is best to keep the Jay out of doors, where it will be perfectly happy, and save its owner much anxiety.

A Good Staple Food.

A good staple food is made by taking a small teacupful of Spratt's "Maxco" game meal, or of "Melox" or other good dog or puppy food, and a tablespoonful of "Fibrine," making it just crumbly moist by the addition of boiling water. A varied bill of fare is indispensable. Ring the changes on the following, adding same to the staple food: dried flies, ants' cocoons and hard-boiled eggs, boiled carrot, etc.; also the following tit-bits; shelled peas or hazel nuts, green peas, cold boiled potato, ripe fruit in season, chopped lettuce occasionally, a cubic inch of raw beef, nestling Sparrows, young mice, sterile eggs, young frogs, cockroaches, snails, gentles, and mealworms—in fact, any live insects which you can obtain.

If any scraps from the table are given, see that they are quite fresh, or diarrhœa may be induced. If the excrement is at all watery, and diarrhœa is suspected, give some prepared chalk—a teaspoonful to every two ounces of drinking water. Water should be withheld from the bird for an hour and a half, and then the chalky water, well stirred, should be given. When the droppings become more normal, give for a few days five drops of tincture of steel to every two ounces of water. A piece of old mortar or cuttlefish bone should always be in the cage, to keep the bird's bill in order; it is also beneficial to the system. The bath is most useful in keeping the feathers well preened; they are delicate to keep in perfect order—rainwater for bathing is to be preferred.

Choosing an Exhibition Bird.

When choosing an exhibition specimen attention should be paid to size, distinctness of all markings, and brightness of colours. You must first get the bird familiar by talking to it, encouraging it to take tit-bits from your fingers. But do not teach it to battle with your finger or stick, else when it appears on the show bench it will puff out its plumage and appear at a disadvantage before the judge.

The adult cock Jays are very handsome birds. The bill is blackish in colour, and strong; the feathers of the forehead are greyish-white, and each one has a black line down its centre. The back of the head and neck is pale plum or cinnamon; back, reddish grey; rump, white; tail, upper surface black, the outer feathers faintly barred at the base with blue; under-surface of tail, greyish; wings, greater flights black, edged with white, and each one has a broad white edge near its base; the lesser flight feathers are black and the wing-coverts are bright blue, regularly barred with black; eye, pupil brown, iris pale blue; a black mark, oval in shape, stretches down the cheeks from the base of the bill under each eye; throat, dirty white; chest, pale dove; sides of body, pale cinnamon; vent and under coverts of tail, white; feet and claws, flesh colour.

The crest is generally held erect. Adult specimens are, say, at the third moult a brighter shade of blue. From the exhibitor's standpoint, in a mixed class provided for large British birds at most shows, a large, well-coloured Jay put down in good condition is most certain to be in the prizes, sometimes competing unsuccessfully with the popular Chough.

The show cage should be of the box pattern with door in one end, the top sloped to prevent a shadow from falling on the bird. The wires should be 1½ inches apart. The interior of the cage should be coloured a light green and the exterior black. The two perches should be low down, about five inches from the floor and nine inches from each end. Food and water should be supplied in hooded glass dishes made to hang on to the front of the cage lower down than the perches. Suitable dimensions for the show cage are: Length, 30in.; depth, 13in.; height, 20in.

In conclusion, let me advise all who intend taking up this delightful and fascinating hobby of keeping, taming, and exhibiting large British birds to secure the best birds you can lay your hands on, and we will hope with patience and perseverance that your labours will be rewarded with many trophies.

First Steps in Foreign Bird Keeping.

By Henry J. FULLJAMES.

It is now considerably more than a quarter of a century since, in a misguided moment, I accepted a birthday present consisting of a large wagon-cage stocked (overstocked, in fact) with small foreign Waxbills and Finches. At the time I looked upon my present as a most delightful one, but it was the cause of my contracting bird-fever to a degree, and in its course the complaint has found me in the possession of an alarming variety of species—from Avadavats to a Bird of Paradise, and the rarest of fruit-eating foreigners, and from Budgerigars to Queen Alexandra Parrakeets and a Black Cockatoo.

Over my experiences with some of the most expensive of these it were better, perhaps, to draw a veil, just mentioning, in passing, that the Bird of Paradise lived a fortnight, and the Black Cockatoo proved to be a confirmed feather-eater; suffice it to say that I have many times wished that I had never seen my first cage of foreigners, but still I would rather have my troubles and trials all over again than never to have had them at all, and I have no hesitation in making the statement that no more pleasurable hobby may be recommended than the keeping of foreign birds.

A Unique Field.

Canary breeding has its joys for thousands of fanciers, yet, after all, excepting in the matter of producing champions, it is the same thing over and over again; one year's work is the same as another. The breeding of Hybrids has its own individual fascinations, but these are mostly the struggling after the hitherto unaccomplished. The keeping of British birds has its limitations, for the species that may be kept in cages are numbered. In foreign birds, however, there is no end to the possibilities, and unlimited choice for the individual fancier. If his ambition be large enough, and his purse long enough, there are opportunities continually arising of becoming possessed of something that has never before been seen in this country. If he would make a profit out of his hobby, he may breed Java Sparrows, Cockatiels, or Budgerigars, as easily as Canaries, and with the hope in the case of the Budgerigars of one day establishing a strain of Albinos or Blues. If he would rest content with a collection of the commoner birds, many of which are quite as beautiful as those which are worth considerably more than their weight in gold, then there are birds which may be bought for a shilling or two, and which will afford him never-ending delight, whether he keeps a few in a cage as an ornament to a room, or whether his ambition extends in the direction of inducing them to breed.

Surely here are outlined alternatives which make one wonder why the keeping of foreign birds is not taken up even more extensively than it is. Perhaps if show committees were awake to the fact that gate money is all profit, and that to the paying public the most interesting part of any show is the foreign section, they would be less niggardly in their classification, and, by offering more inducements to the keepers of foreign birds, would multiply the number of exhibiting fanciers, add immensely to the attraction of bird shows for the general public, and reap their reward in a good "gate" which would more than recompense them for a few shillings lost in a small excess of prize-money over entrance fees.

But this is not what I started out to write. My purpose is to treat on the proper keeping and feeding of the cheaper foreign birds, either in cage or aviary, indoor or outdoor, and although, in these days of widespread information, I may not be able to say anything which has not before been said, and better said, perhaps some new readers of CAGE BIRDS may be novices in foreign bird-keeping, and may find something herein which may be helpful to them.

A Considerable Choice.

The amateur with limited aspirations, or with limited purse, will rest himself satisfied, at least for a time, with such birds as may be bought without undue expense. Even at this, there is quite a considerable choice, and there is a great variety of species from among which he may set himself up with, say, a dozen birds, singly or in pairs, for something less than a sovereign, not, of course, including the cage. The latter item is rather an important one, for a cage for a dozen small foreigners may either be of the well-known "Crystal Palace Aviary" type, an all-wire wagon cage, or a box cage. The box cage is immensely to be preferred, for more reasons than one. An all-wire cage, of whatever type it may be, is generally hung or placed in a window which is absolutely the worst place for a bird of any kind, especially for birds from tropical countries, such as are those now under consideration. In such a position the birds are subjected to a continual draught, and occasionally exposed to the rays of a scorching sun. Further, the seed husks from such a cage, wherever it may be placed, are scattered about the floor of the room, and the birds become a nuisance.

In a "Crystal Palace" cage there is not sufficient floor space as compared with its height When birds are kept in cages it is floor space which counts, and a cage of a certain superficial area would accommodate scarcely any more birds if its height were doubled or trebled, providing its ground space remained the same.

Box versus All-wire Cages.

All-wire wagon cages are generally of more proportionate dimensions, but they have the same objection of exposing the inmates to draughts. A box cage, on the contrary, at once calls for a position against a wall, on a sideboard, or in a recess, and its structure as well as its position, affords shelter from draughts, while, if the bottom rail be made sufficiently deep, seed husks and sand will not find their way to the floor. In size, it must be large enough to allow of plenty of exercise, for Waxbills and foreign Finches are essentially active little creatures, and must have room to use their wings.

The very least dimensions of a cage for a dozen of the smallest of foreign birds are: 3ft. long, 2ft. wide, and 2ft. high; 4ft. long is much better. It should be furnished with plenty of perches of varying thicknesses, so arranged that the birds on one perch cannot soil those on another by their droppings; the wires should be of fine gauge and close mesh, and the pot holes must be small; this last is important, for in most cages the pot holes are large enough to permit of a small bird getting through and being drowned in the water vessel; at one or both ends of the cage a seed trough should run from front to back, so that all the birds may feed at once if so inclined; plenty of sand on the bottom is a necessity—a good quantity of this does not necessarily mean extravagance, for if it is passed through a rather fine sieve when cleaning out the cage the seed husks and the soiled sand will remain in the sieve, and a handful of fresh sand added to the rest will make all fresh again.

Foreign birds delight in the bath, and will not keep healthy without it; the best way of offering it is to have a spare bottom drawer to carry a shallow zinc vessel, and to insert this for a while daily in place of the sand drawer; when the birds have taken their bath, and they will all want to do it at once, with much fuss and splashing, the whole may be removed, and the sand drawer replaced.

The Birds to Buy.

Now for the birds for our cage. "Mixed small foreigners" are sometimes advertised at so much per dozen, generally from nine to twelve shillings, but it is not at all advised that the beginner should start with such a collection. The birds so advertised are generally in a more or less dilapidated condition, and there are sure to be some that would not agree with the rest. Far better to make one's own selection. Species that are cheap, pretty, and peaceful are to be had in plenty. A selection of a dozen may, for instance, be made from the first list given below, either as single birds or in pairs, the latter being by far the more advisable, for if the birds are kept in pairs, many pretty little love scenes will be indulged in, to the happiness of the birds and the amusement of the owner. What, for instance, could be more comical than to watch a pair of Bengalese or Silverbills, the cock sidling up to the hen on a perch and entertaining her with a "song" that is almost inaudible to human ears, but evidently a pride to the "musician," and a delight to his mate?

It is perhaps necessary here to say that it would be useless to expect breeding from among a collection of birds kept in such comparatively close quarters, for they would interfere one with the other. Nevertheless, the cage must be provided with "nest boxes" of some kind or another, for it is characteristic of these tiny birds that whether kept in pairs or otherwise, they love to nestle together in their resting periods or at night; quite a variety of contrivances are now to be obtained for the purpose, cheap enough to be thrown away when they become soiled, and replaced by new ones.

Some of the Cheaper Species.

Among the cheaper foreign birds suitable for a mixed collection may be named Common Avadavats, Orange-cheeked, Golden-breasted, St. Helena, Grey and Zebra Waxbills, African and Indian Silverbills, Bengalese in three varieties (Fawn, and White, Brown and White, and All-White), Nutmeg Finches (Spice birds), Zebra Finches, Ribbon Finches (Cut-throats), Cordon Bleus, Mannikins of sorts (Black-headed, White-headed, and Three-coloured being the three cheaper kinds, and the Rufous-backed, Bronze-winged, and Magpie somewhat more expensive) African Fire Finches (not the Australian, the latter being more expensive and very pugnacious), Grey Java Sparrows, Green and Grey Singing Finches, Combassous, etc.

A lot which would cost in some instances considerably more may be selected from Green Avadavats, Cherry Finches, Parson Finches, Alario Finches, Bicheno (double-banded) Finches, Masked and Long-tailed Grass Finches, Parson Finches, Nonpareils and Pin-tailed Nonpareils, Diamond Sparrows, White-throated and Lavender Finches, Indigo Buntings, Weavers of sorts, Gouldian Finches (Black-faced and Red-faced), Cuba Finches, Dwarf (or Bih) Finches, White Java Sparrows, etc.

A collection which would include some of the rarest of all could be made up from the following; this would, however, be an expensive lot: Painted Finches, Olive Cuba Finches Melba Waxbills, Red-headed Finches, Pectoral Finches, Red-vented Finches, Aurora Finches (or Crimson-winged Waxbill), Wiener's Waxbills, Parrot Finches, Tri-coloured Parrot Finches Diuca Finches, Rufous-tailed Finches, Pileated Finches, Violet-eared Waxbills, Blue-breasted Waxbills, Dufresne's Waxhills, Black-cheeked Waxbills, Sydney Waxbills, etc. The owner of this little lot would be one to be envied.

A beautiful and rare collection would be one of Whydahs only, but many of these carry long tail coverts when in breeding plumage, and are best kept in a large flight or aviary.

A Simple Menu.

The food necessary for the keeping in health of a cageful of any of the delightful little creatures named above is of a very simple nature. That most appreciated of all is Spray or "Indian Millet" (so-called) in the ear, and the birds derive considerable exercise and amusement in the extraction of the tiny seeds. A mixture of white millet and Canary seed is all else they require as staple food. Grass in the ear will always be appreciated, and a tuft of seeding grass placed in the cage will soon have its appearance altered, or the ears of grass seed may be gathered and tied in a bundle. Most of the birds will also be delighted with a spray of rose growth or of some other plant infested with "green fly," but care must be taken that such sprays are not from poisonous plants. The aphides from a spray of laburnum, for instance, would probably kill off the whole of the inmates of the cage.

Green food of some kind is, of course, a necessity, and one of the best ways of providing this is to sow some Canary seed in shallow pans, and place these in the cage when the grass has grown about an inch. A piece of cuttlefish bone should always be hung in the cage, and a lump of rock salt is also beneficial. The Indigo Bunting the Nonpareils, the Weavers, and some of the others will be the better for a small mealworm or two or some well scoured gentles.

Wild Bird-Life.

March Notes.

We have had a week of most inclement weather, with frost, snow, rain, and high winds; and had it come earlier in the year the wild birds would have been considerably inconvenienced by it. But now they are all in such fine health and condition that it would take much more than a week of bad weather to affect them. It is when we get severe weather directly after the moult that wild birds suffer, and many perish. The moult is a trying time, and birds do not recover very rapidly from it. Bird song is a sure indication of their condition, and it is seldom we hear much music until the turn of the year. Here and there a Thrush, Blackbird, or Robin is setting, but the eggs will take no harm from the cold. The writer has seen the snow lying thickly upon a sitting Blackbird. The nest was partly sheltered from the storm by being placed against a rough trunk in the hedge, but still a good deal lodged against the nest, and partly covered the bird. The whole made a most perfect picture. But then one is not always able to depict these sights at the right time, and memory will not serve to get details. Sparrows are, it is well known, particularly precocious, yet out in the open fields there are still big flocks to be seen, and in spite of their precocity, one is inclined to wonder if all these birds nest in their first season. Flocks of various sizes are to be met with practically all the year round, and it is no uncommon sight to see quite a big gathering in the open fields when one would expect every adult bird to be busy over household duties. Of course, it is just possible that before the less forward birds begin the nest, the first batch of young ones has taken to wandering. We may possibly be able to clear up this point during the coming season The wary Plovers have returned to the uplands in all the glory of their nuptial dress. Very handsome they look, with the black gorgets, glossy green wings, and flowing crest. In watching these birds one requires particularly strong glasses, for they are so exceedingly shy just now that it is impossible to get within reasonable distance of them without expending a lot of time, and some stratagem.

A Family Likeness.

Birds' nests are a study in themselves; they are so beautifully constructed, and each family follows the same pattern year after year. This applies not only to our own country, but holds good all over the world. The nests of the Doves of America resemble those of our own birds. The American Robin and the English Blackbird both use mud in their nest. The Kinglet and Gold Crest build a suspended nest, although the wide Atlantic separates them. There are many other examples too numerous to mention.

CAGE BIRDS, 154, FLEET STREET, LONDON.

The Earliest Cuckoo.

The Cuckoo as a rule does not appear in this country until the second week in April, but there is just one record of its having been seen and heard on the last day of March. This occurred in Sussex, which, being in the extreme south, was one of the most probable counties to secure an early record..

Strength of Birds' Beaks.

Although some birds are able to do considerable damage by means of their thick beaks, we do not as a rule think they can sustain any direct blow without injury. A wild bird in a room can easily kill itself by dashing against the window pane, yet a Kingfisher has been known to fly against a plank placed across a stream with such force as to become firmly fixed by the beak, and yet manage to survive the shock when released.

Do Ptarmigan Eat Snow?

In a paper devoted to country subjects, it was stated that the Ptarmigan must suffer severely from thirst during wintry weather, when every stream was covered with snow. But if Finches in an aviary have sense enough to eat snow when their water is frozen, why should not the Ptarmigan do the same, especially as he is a bird of the North, and has been bred for generations from birds which have had to subsist on snow-covered ranges?

OBITUARY.

Mr. V. HORWOOD (Luton).

I regret to have to inform you of the sudden death of one of our members, Mr. V. Horwood, who passed away on March 13th, having been at business, I believe, on the Saturday, writes Mr. E. Bloomfield, Hon. Sec. of the Luton C.B.S. He will be much missed by us in Luton. There are a few of his birds still for disposal if any of your readers would like to take them off the hands of the widow. Information can be obtained of Mr. F. J. Webb, Frederick Street, or of myself.

Mr. J. CASEY (Bradford).

We regret to announce the death of our esteemed member of the Laisterdyke B.F.A., Mr. J. Casey, of 363, Sticker Lane, Dudley Hill, Bradford, writes Mr. J. E. Hudson, the Secretary. Always genial and straightforward, his death is regretted by all who came in contact with him. We are sure his many friends will join us in offering kindly sympathy to the widow and child.

I should like to mention that I am having an extraordinary rush for my boards and cage sets, writes Mr. H. Orford, the well-known cage specialist, of Manchester. Besides having had to start two more men this last week, we are working almost night and day. I hope this will serve as an explanation to those of my customers whose orders may be somewhat delayed. I may also mention that the success I have derived in my business is due almost entirely to advertising in your most valuable paper CAGE BIRDS.

The March issue of "Bird Notes" the journal of the Foreign Bird Club—contains an interesting article on the Loo-choo Robin by Mr. Hubert D. Astley, M.A., which is accompanied by a coloured illustration from an original by Mr. Astley himself. Mr. H. V. Johnson contributes some notes on the Pintailed Nonpareil, Mrs. A. Mahon writes on the breeding of Bulbuls, Shamas, and Pekin Robins, and Mr. J. Easton Scott, M.A., on "Freely imported species and their treatment." The British birds at the Crystal Palace Show form the subject of a contribution from Mr. G. E. Weston.

I regret to state, writes Mr. V. Wynn, hon. secretary of the City and Suburban A.C.B., that our esteemed member, Mr. C. Prior, will no longer be able to render us the magnificent service which he has done at all our meetings held for the last two years, in consequence of his removing into Hampshire. His loss will be severely felt by the members, and more especially by myself, as he was quite a "father" to me. His long years of exhibiting and his wide experience of the Fancy, coupled with his quick discernment in reading a man's character, were no small boon to me in my official capacity as secretary.

The following dates have been fixed for our annual show, writes Mr. W. Hodson, hon. sec. of the Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S.:—April 4th, British Birds, judge, Mr. A. Silver; June 13th, Young Birds Show, judge, Mr. G. Gardner; Nov. 21st, annual Autumn Show, judge, Mr. J. Robson. Amongst other interesting fixtures for the year, Mr. J. W. Ramsden will open a discussion on colour feeding, in July; Mr. Robson will deliver in May a lecture entitled "Advice to Novices," and a washing exhibition will be given by Mr. F. J. Martin in September. I am very pleased to add that Mr. F. Hall, M.P. for Dulwich, has kindly consented to become patron of the society, sending a cheque to the funds.

Price 6½d. post free, or with any 6 Nutshells 1/8 complete.

Mr. Law, the secretary of the Highgate, Hampstead and Dist. C.B.S. writes: We are to have a paper, entitled "Hints on Canary Breeding," by Mr. Geo. Gardner, at Spencer Hall, on March 30th, at 8 p.m. All are welcome. It is hoped members will note this. Rule books will be given out at this meeting, also prize money to those who were not at social to receive theirs.

Allow me to tender my thanks to Mr. W. Lloyd for his valuable information concerning the going "thick" of Goldfinches and its treatment, writes Mr. J. J. Bull (Grimsby). About the time of Mr. Lloyd's answer to "Hybrid" I had one myself that had gone "thick," and by following the advice given to "Hybrid," I managed to pull him through all right, and he is now a fine bird, and nicely on song. I have noticed that as a rule they are more or less subjected to this ailment at first, but once they get over it they never look back again. Previous to my seeing this article, I had lost one through the same complaint. It went off song, became "thick," and then was not long before he was at liberty once more.

The members of the Holywood and Dist. C.B.E. find it would be advisable for them to alter their annual (open to all Ireland) show date from the 17th and 18th November, 1911, to the 24th and 25th November, 1911, owing to the Crest, Norwich, and Yorkshire Society of Belfast holding their show on that date, of which we were unaware at our first decision. Our judge, Mr. W. Mundell, of Bradford, has kindly consented to change his booked date. We would take it as a great favour if other societies would please note our date, so as not only to avoid clashing, but save everyone else concerned a great deal of unnecessary inconvenience. Further information can be got from me.—F. Cole, Hon. Sec., 7, High Street, Holywood. Co. Down.

It was rather a pleasant surprise to me when I got my CAGE BIRDS of March 18th to find one of my birds occupying such an honoured position on the front page of our beloved weekly budget. There is no doubt she has earned her place of distinction by sheer merit, having won fifteen firsts and many other honours, all at leading shows. She was also one of the team that won for me the handsome silver cup given by the Green Canary Association for competition in Green Border Fancy classes for most points over ten patronised shows. I might say that Friday, March 17th, was rather a red letter day for me, as only an hour previous to my getting the above-named pleasant surprise the above-mentioned cup was handed in; it is a real beauty, and I would strongly advise all breeders of the wee green gems to forward their names for membership of the Green Canary Association to the esteemed secretary, Mr. Geo. Green, of 36, Lord Nelson Street, Liverpool, and have a try to win one of those beautiful cups given by the club. The Green Borders are particular favourites of mine, and I would like to see them a bit more popular than they are at present, although, judging by the demand there has been for them this season, they are likely to be well to the fore this next show season. "Let them all come"; there is plenty of room for hundreds more, as most of the cage bird societies of any note are now putting four classes on for them. I will conclude by tendering my most sincere thanks to your very able artist, Mr. Norman, for his lifelike portrait of my champion hen, and I wish all readers of CAGE BIRDS a very successful breeding season, and trust that CAGE BIRDS may go on prospering and reap the reward it so richly deserves; this is the wish of a staunch supporter—James Johnston (Wallsend-on-Tyne).

Yorkshire Canary Club.

Nominations of officers for 1911-12 must be sent to the secretary not later than March 31st, forms for which will be found in the centre of the club's handbook.—John Greaves, secretary.

Early House Sparrows.

The precocious House Sparrow is determined that his species shall not die out in spite of Sparrow Clubs, for already young birds have been seen in a Surrey village looking as happy and chirpy as they do at midsummer.

A Presentation at Plymouth.

At the close of the last meeting of the Western Counties O.S. (Plymouth)—held March 21st—Mr. J. E. Rowe, as one of the oldest members, in a very witty and appropriate speech presented Mr. Dart with an illuminated address subscribed for by the members in recognition of his four years' chairmanship of the society. He said he was sure no one present could disagree with him when he assured them that Mr. Dart had won and still held the esteem of all the members of the W.C.O.S. The credit of collecting and suggesting this presentation really belonged to Mr. Hoar, who, unfortunately, was too modest to make the actual presentation; but he could assure the Chairman that the whole society had been practically unanimous in their desire to subscribe. In reply, Mr. Dart said he had not had the slightest inkling of anything being done to recogniso his services. He was far from sure he deserved it. As Chairman, he always tried to be fair and impartial to all, and he was quite convinced he had the goodwill of all the members even before receiving their kind appreciation. He thanked Mr. Hoar and all who had joined with him, and he should value the address as one of his most precious possessions. He had not had the best of luck with birds, but he felt proud of the fact that his efforts as chairman for the welfare of the good old W.C.O.S., however unworthy they may have been, were appreciated by its members.—Thos. Pope, Hon. Secretary.

CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE.

Promises of Support from all quarters: Numerous helpful letters received.

The announcement of the formation of Cage Birds League has evidently aroused intense and widespread interest amongst bird-keepers. Letters in large numbers continue to reach us from all parts of the British Isles, many of them containing helpful and appreciated suggestions (now under consideration), and all of them complimentary in tone, the possibilities for good in such a scheme as the League being recognised on every hand.

Members have already been enrolled in fair numbers, although the precise constitution of Cage Birds League has not yet been definitely settled—more on this point in the near future. We hope also to have the League badge ready for members in a few weeks' time. A pretty and appropriate design has been selected that will, we think, be approved by all.

We ask members of cage-bird societies to give our League scheme their earnest attention. It is not only the "regular" bird-keepers we wish to enlist—we want to get at and capture the sympathies of all bird-keepers and lovers of birds who are not "fanciers" in the accepted meaning of the term, and we are looking to the fanciers for help in attaining this end. How they may do this and at the same time benefit both the League and their own Society will be readily seen by a perusal of the details of our scheme printed on this page.

Sir,—I trust the Cage Birds League will meet with the support and success it deserves.—J. E. Atkinson, Secretary, Newcastle C.B.S.

Sir,—Kindly enrol me as a member of the Cage Birds League. I enclose a 1s. subscription, and an extra 6d. for the badge, to be forwarded to me when ready.—E. Deaton (Potter's Bar, Middlesex).

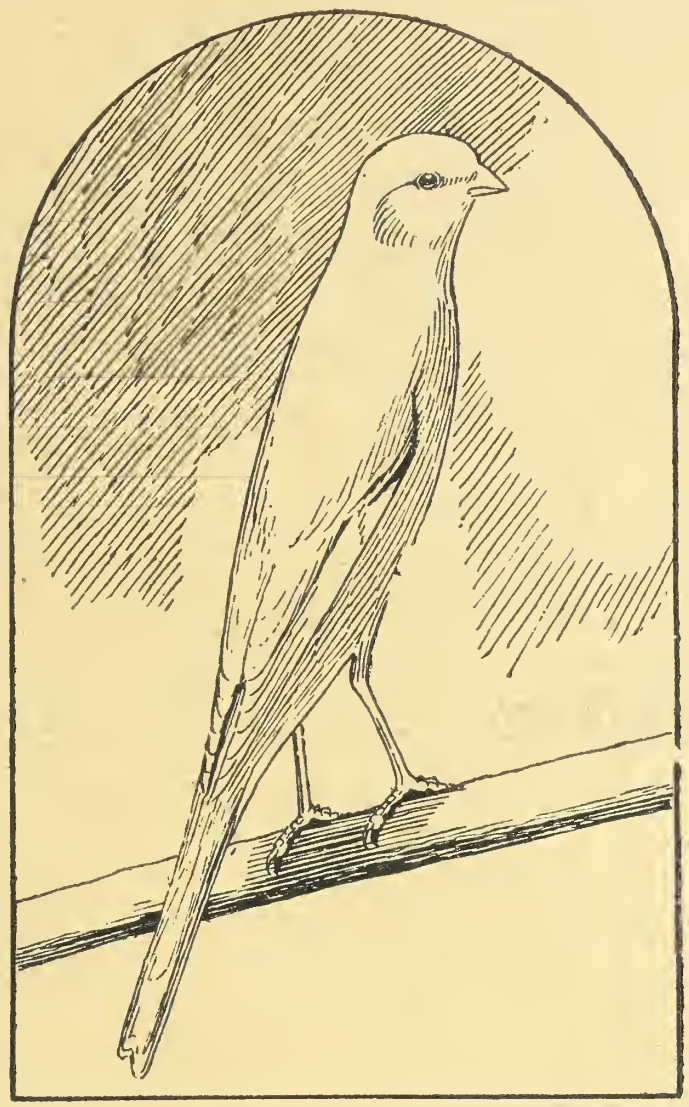
Sir,—I am very pleased to see you are forming a Cage Birds League. I think it will be one of the best things ever done for cage bird-keepers. I shall be pleased to join as soon as possible. I wish Cage Birds and the Cage Birds League every success. You may, I may add, rely on me as a worker for the League in our district.—Wm. Ralph (Haslingdene).

Sir,—I have read with interest your announcements re the Cage Birds League, and wish to congratulate you on your scheme, which I am sure will be of inestimable benefit to all bird fanciers. Your scheme, as detailed in Cage Birds, should induce cage bird societies to join, offering, as it does, half the subscription in prizes, to say nothing about other benefits which may be obtained, such as reduced railway charges, higher compensation for the loss of birds, and the protection of the interests of fanciers generally.—J. Jeffrey, Hon. Sec. of the Sunderland C.B.A.

Sir,—I have been a reader of Cage Birds for this last six years. I notice you are forming a Cage Birds League. I think it is a capital idea, and would be a great boon to every fancier. I for one will become a member if you will let me know when your subscriptions are due, also your badges; and I think I will be able to get a few fanciers around here to become members, as I think there are about 40 members in our society (the Carlisle and District C.B.S.). I shall be happy to put it before our members at our general meeting and try to induce them to join it.—Chas. Cranston (late chairman of Carlisle and District C.B.S.).

Sir,—We noted with interest your announcement with regard to the Cage Birds League, also the very useful hints contained in your issue of March 4th, especially the letter by Mr. Claude St. John, with whose suggestions, as far as they go, we entirely agree. But we think it would be advantageous to the success of the League for it to be divided into two sections, the "Canary" and "British and Foreign" respectively. Our reason for this suggestion is that, in common with thousands of other Canary fanciers, we only take a passing interest in Britishers and their wants. Speaking plainly, the functions of that department of the League relating to defence and protection, against misrepresentation of the law under the Wild Birds Protection Act, does not interest us greatly. On the other hand, we are immensely interested in the question of railway facilities, losses, delays, etc., which questions are really only of secondary importance to British bird keepers, owing to the menacing attitude and unlimited resources (in comparison with the individual fancier) of the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and kindred societies. In the event of its not being possible to divide the League into sections, as proposed above, we think that at least separate committees might be formed, composed of men who are, as far as possible, in complete agreement one with the other on the needed reforms which are most urgent in their respective sections of the cage bird Fancy. Of course, as founder, Cage Birds will be the official organ of the Cage Birds League. Speaking frankly, we think that a League (in which an influential paper like Cage Birds has a great and personal interest) has a long and successful career before it, providing fanciers only rally to the support of it, as they should, considering what advantages they will reap from such a League. We think a scheme such as this should be well supported from north, south, east, and west, then, and only then, can it really be a "Union of Friendship," with sufficient strength to combat and withstand the insidious dangers which are slowly, but surely, being directed against their hobby, as Mr. Claude St. John says in his letter.—W. and H. Gibbons (Shepherd's Bush, London, W.).

Sir,—I am one of those who think that the Cage Birds League is one of the best things brought forward. But I am sorry to say that there is no bird club at Creswell now, all the bird fanciers having lost all heart in keeping birds. But I wish to become one of the noble League fanciers. I shall forward my subscription on as soon as you are ready for it. I have been a reader of good old Cage Birds for seven years.—H. Kidd (Creswell, nr. Mansfield).



Sir,—The institution of "Cage Birds League" is an admirable action. We have your assistance and encouragement in the first place, then the Fancy is called upon to provide sinews of war, partly for their own battles, and partly for the maintenance of an institution of democratic government. It is evidently your desire that the mutual and collective energies of the Fancy and Cage Birds should be combined for further efforts towards the advancement of the various interests that concern all bird lovers.—Barker Clegg (Manchester).

Sir,—I think it is about time a league like the Cage Birds League was formed. It was with great pleasure I read of it in Cage Birds (good luck to "C.B."; it has helped me over many a stile). I am looking forward to joining the League in a week or two; and it won't be my fault if I don't get you a few more members. If you have anything for distribution in connection with the League I shall only be too pleased to have it, as there are a lot of fanciers in Leek. I wish the League and all who are connected with it success.—J. P. Pegg (Leek).

Sir,—Every lover of bird pets will welcome, as I do, the formation of Cage Birds League. It is quite time it was formed to defend the hobby and pleasures of "the man in the street" against the aggressive action of silly sentimentalists, or good-for-nothing busybodies of the well-to-do classes, who try to make war on the enjoyments of those who, having to work for a living, have no time or money to spare to protect their interest in birds. Such a League will be a wholesome checkmate upon intermeddling faddists, and will, no doubt, grow powerful enough before long to defend the poor man's hobby against the rich and idle man's affectations and fads. I should like to help in Dublin, with Dublin readers, in forming a local branch.—P. A. Hogan (Dublin).

Sir,—Allow me to congratulate you upon your scheme for the formation of a Cage Birds League. It is a most desirable step you have in view under the present day conditions. If a strong society were formed it would strengthen the bonds of good-fellowship and stop the tyranny of fanatics who are creeping round us trying to do away with the Fancy. Such fads are the ones who know nothing about birds and know not what they are talking about. I feel sure the majority of fanciers would be willing to join. I have heard great praise of it from the North, and shall do my very best to get every fancier around our district to join. The button or badge seems to be a very good idea, as one will see at once what the wearer belongs to, and many a good chat will come of it. With good wishes for the ever-welcome Cage Birds.—Jas. Barrass, Secretary, South Shields C.B.S.

Sir,—Being a reader of your most valuable paper, Cage Birds, and a lover of birds, I pass many an hour away in the hobby of breeding Canaries and Mules. I think that the proposed Cage Birds League is what is really necessary, not only for bird lovers and fanciers, but dealers, such as keep, for instance, Britishers. The one great view is, I feel sure, that there would be more unity amongst our bird lovers, and where there is unity, I mean to say, there is also strength; and we should be more attached to one another in many ways of interest. Supposing, Mr. Editor, as you say, we wear a badge of our League; the young fancier or novice would gain far more experience by getting to know his brother fancier (which, no doubt, he would come across in every-day life); and, what is more interesting than to be in company with a good bird fancier? To do this we must have rules and regulations, and also a contribution, yearly or quarterly, such as the rules may denote. I feel sure that not only myself, but all bird lovers and fanciers, would be only too pleased to contribute to the League, and abide by the rules; it would be an honourable institution for the safe keeping of our feathered pets. I wish Cage Birds and Cage Birds League every success, and trust all fanciers and bird breeders will have a good season.—F. W. Nethercleft (Fireman), Canning Town, E.

A NOVICE BIRD AT THE PALACE SHOW.

Yellow Yorkshire Cock, first prize in the Novice Section at the 1911 Crystal Palace Exhibition for Mr. T. Farnish, of Tong Park, Baildon.

SOME DETAILS OF "CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE."

£1,000 worth of Prizes to be distributed amongst its Members

Every bird-keeper and exhibitor of cage birds must "catch a pal." That is to say, he must make it his business not only to join Cage Birds League, but to enlist a brother bird-keeper.

Every member of the League may, if he chooses, assign half the value of his annual subscription in special prizes to any society or show in which he takes a special interest. The other half will go towards the progressive and protective work of the League. By catching a pal from the ranks of outside birdkeepers, a member is thus enabled to materially help the special prize list of his particular society.

Cage Birds will underwrite or guarantee special prizes under this scheme to the value of £1,000.

The practical result of this idea in a society whose membership total's some forty fanciers may be seen thus:—

The annual subscription to the Cage Birds League will be 1s. (cost of membership badge, 6d. extra)

Forty members of local society each join the League and donate 6d. to the special prize fund of their society	£1
And each "catch a pal" for the League	£1
Total value of Prizes for Local Society	£2

A local birdkeeper may be disinclined to join a local bird society, but may like the idea of subscribing to Cage Birds League.

On the foregoing basis there would not only be Two Pounds' worth of prizes for the local society, but Two Pounds' worth of funds for the work of the League.

An independent paid Secretary will be appointed to Cage Birds League, and if necessary, clerical assistance will be given him to see that letters are promptly attended to and the work of the League discharged in a businesslike manner. An Advisory Committee of responsible fanciers will be selected to superintend the aggressive and defensive movements adopted by the League in the interests of birdkeepers.

The allocation and division of the special prizes due to each society will be left entirely to the League members in the society concerned. The prizes will be selected from £1,000 worth of real oil paintings and water-colours handsomely framed—constituting magnificent ornaments for the fancier's home.

To encourage secretaries and fanciers to enlist members in the new League, we shall offer the following

CASH PRIZES AMOUNTING IN ALL TO TWENTY POUNDS.

£5 cash to the individual fancier who, between the dates of March 10th, 1911, and March 11th, 1912, secures the greatest number of recruits to Cage Birds League.

£5 cash to the Society whose nominations to the League between March 10th, 1911, and March 11th, 1912, are the most numerous.

£3 cash to the individual fancier who nominates the second highest number of members to the League between the same dates.

£3 cash to the Society which nominates the second highest number of members to the League between the same dates.

And Four Cash Prizes of £1 each to societies whose total nominations to the League show the best average per member.

SOME ALTERNATIVE PROPOSITIONS.

But a League member who is not interested in show matters is not bound to contribute his quota to the development of the exhibiting interest. He may donate half his annual subscription to the League to any one of the following ideas:—

LITERATURE FUND.—For the dissemination amongst poor bird-keepers of useful literature calculated to enlighten them and improve the conditions under which their birds are kept in domestication.

DEFENCE FUND.—For the protection of bird-keepers by legal or other process from swindlers, or unjust attacks by moneyed faddists and sentimentalists. For the general protection of bird-keepers' interests.

Failing any specific instruction from a League member as to how his donation is to be expended, it will go towards the GENERAL PURPOSES FUND. For the development and progressive work of the League, advertising its objects and promoting its ideals.

All expenditure under these heads will come under the control of the Advisory Board.

BADGES.

A neat and unobtrusive design for members' badges has been approved, and will be ready in about three weeks' time. These badges will be sold at sixpence each.

We hope members will wear their League badges at every possible opportunity. They will be found to be attractive yet subdued and refined in appearance, with no suggestion of "advertisement" (except of the C.B.L.), about them. The badge will serve as an introduction between bird-keepers—an outward and visible sign, so to speak, of the "bond of good-fellowship" it is the object of the League to establish—and to bring the fact of the existence of the League into wider notice.

BRANCHES OF THE LEAGUE.

It is hoped from time to time to form in the different centres branches of the League, but this work must be left for the moment, until the main body is in a thoroughly sound financial and operative state.

The temporary Offices of Cage Birds League are at 154, Fleet Street, Lond

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

Swelling Under Wing.

C. W. E.—The swelling appears to be one of those tumours which eventually form nodules of caseous matter, and which in most cases may be quite safely excised with a little knowledge of the anatomy of the parts when they have reached the proper stage. Give bird a proper seed diet as you frequently see advised here, and in addition give a morsel of bread and milk with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it and sprinkled with maw seed every second day for two or three weeks, and on the alternate days a scrap of banana. Give a leaf of dandelion daily. In the drinking water give six drops each of syrup of rhubarb and dandelion juice, and a pinch of Epsom salts every second day for a week, and every third day in the following week give 10 drops of syrup of iodide of calcium in the water. If the skin is not sore with the bird pecking it, paint the swelling daily with tincture of iodine. This may cause it to be absorbed without operative treatment. If it does not, wait until it has formed a nodule, then carefully open the skin with a sterile instrument, remove, wash with a solution of Jeyes' Fluid (1 in 100), put in a suture if necessary, and anoint place daily until well with lanocyllin ointment.

Continually Moulting.

Muriel.—You should have said where the birds are kept, as I am strongly inclined to think they are exposed either to draughts or damp. Look into this point and remedy that first of all. Then give the Rollers a staple diet of two parts Canary to one part summer rape. In addition, give each half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it every second day, and on the alternate days a pinch of maw and a morsel of banana or raw carrot. Give a leaf of dandelion daily. In the drinking water give a pinch of Epsom salts and ten drops of lemon juice for two days, and then dissolve half a teaspoonful of crystals of ammoniated citrate of iron and quinine in one ounce of sherry, and give 20 drops of this mixture in the water two days in every three for a week, and every second day afterwards until the moulting ceases. Even if the birds are cocks, which I am a little inclined to doubt, they will not sing until the moulting is stopped. The screeches at the end of the song of the Norwich are what is called "chopping" a very serious fault in a songster, and you can do nothing at all to cure it, or rather, to break it of the habit. Supposing the two Rollers are cocks, they will almost certainly prove "choppers," and be ruined as songsters after such a tutor as the Norwich.

A Physical Wreck.

Æolus.—I think this is about the correct description of your bird, and expect it will simply go from bad to worse until it goes off altogether. The loss of the claw is probably due to constitutional causes and not accidental, and its inability to crack seed or quite close its beak is due to the same cause. Notwithstanding your opinion to the contrary, I believe this is so, and that you will eventually find the beak getting in a bad way unless the following treatment improves matters. Give it a supply of a mixture of equal parts Canary and summer rape, but in addition to this give a piece of bread the size of a small walnut soaked in cold milk and sprinkled with maw seed daily. Every second day for a fortnight slightly dust the bread and milk, with flowers of sulphur, and on the alternate days add two drops of cod liver oil emulsion. Give a leaf of dandelion, varied occasionally with a morsel of banana daily. Keep it in a comfortable temperature, neither very warm nor on the cold side, but let it be as equable as possible. Bathe the foot, or feet, daily in a fairly hot solution of boracic acid for a few minutes, then dry, and anoint with carbolised vaseline. In the drinking water give ten drops each of dandelion juice, and lemon juice, and a crystal of sulphate of soda, the size of a split pea, every second day for a week, and for a fortnight afterwards dissolve every second day a crystal of sulphate soda the size of a small pea, ditto of sulphate of iron half as big, in the drinking water, and add six drops of dilute sulphuric acid. Follow this treatment for a month and then report progress.

Clicking and Wheezing (Aviary Bird).—You must try to discover the cause—most probably cold draughts, or extremes of heat and cold, or, possibly, foul or impure air by hanging near or over burning lights in the evenings. Any or all of these causes must be quite removed. Keep in a cosy place, but not necessarily a very warm one. In addition to the staple seed diet give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it every second day for a week, and on the alternate days a scrap of green food. In the water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts for two days, and afterwards twenty drops of whisky, six each of spirits of sweet nitre and oxymel of squills, and two of eucalyptus oil well shaken together, two days in every three for a week, and every second day for another week afterwards. If it quite recovers so that no trace of the wheeziness is heard at night you might breed with her—otherwise it would be best to avoid doing so.

Pecking the Wires (Edina). — This pecking and worrying of the wires is quite a common habit with many young birds, and some older ones too, at this season. It is simply the excitement of the approaching breeding season that is upon them, and they adopt this harmless though sometimes annoying habit to "work off steam." It will pass off in a few weeks, or sooner, if you give ten drops of syrup of buckthorn in the water for two or three days, and give a spray of green food daily. Nothing more is necessary.

Stopped Singing (Birdie). — Sorry, but I cannot tell why your bird should have stopped singing so suddenly without some data to go upon. As it seems in perfect health and is not moulting there cannot be anything seriously wrong with it. Have you introduced another bird to its society, or a cat to the household which frightens it? Also you might see if its cage is quite free from insect pests. Add ten drops of lemon juice and a pinch of Epsom salts to its water for two days and afterwards 20 drops of whisky and ten of glycerine for a few days, and give a small scrap of bread and milk sprinkled with maw seed and a leaf of dandelion daily for a week.

Reducing Fat (G. Thomas).—Stop all luxuries and give a diet of plain Canary seed only, with a liberal supply of green food daily for a fortnight. During the first week you might limit the supply of seed to a teaspoonful per day. Twice in each week, only, add half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts inga, maw, gold of pleasure, and teazle. Every second day add ten drops of syrup of buckthorn to the water. At the end of the fortnight give six drops of tincture of gentian and four of aromatic sulphuric acid for a day or two, and if the hen is sufficiently reduced gradually go back to the usual diet, but be quite sparing with all soft foods and luxuries, or the trouble will quickly recur.

Voice very Hoarse (T. D., Dublin).—(1) The bird is almost certainly exposed to draughts. Look well into this, and see that it is kept in a comfortable, but not overheated, temperature, as equable as possible, and quite free from draughts. Also see it does not hang near or over burning lights in the evenings. Then treat it as advised to "J.W.W." elsewhere. Your previous treatment was a great deal too drastic. There is no fear of your other birds getting the complaint from this one, but if exposed to the same causes they are just as likely to fall victims as this one. (2) It is quite a common thing for cocks to cease singing and sit quiet as you say, whilst the hens are sitting, so I do not think you have any cause for anxiety about this bird.

Indoor Aviary (J. J. D.).—(1) No, you could not breed with more than one pair in your aviary unless you separated it into distinct and separate compartments. In the latter case you could keep one pair in each of the compartments, or a hen in each, and run one cock with them both, alternately. The only other method open to you is to turn two hens and one cock into the aviary as it stands, but this would probably produce less results than having a single pair. Address a query to our Mr. Weston, re British birds. (2) Yes, a Roller cock and a Border hen would breed some very nice songsters, but if good singing is your only object a Roller hen would be still better.

Becoming Bare (Scotch Fancy).—You do not say anything about the age of the birds, though I suspect they have at least begun to leave their youth behind them. Feed them a little more generously, and see they are kept in a fairly comfortable place, away from draughts and chills, yet not overheated. In addition to the plain canary seed as staple diet give half a teaspoonful of summer rape every second day, and on the alternate days for the next two or three weeks give a piece of bread and milk slightly dusted with flowers of sulphur and sprinkled with soft sugar. Twice a week also give a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts inga, linseed, millet, maw, and yellow mustard, and on each of the remaining days a little green food, banana, or raw carrot. In the drinking water give 20 drops of whisky, ten of lemon juice, and a pinch of Epsom salts every second day for a week. Anoint the bare places three times a week with carbolised vaseline.

Not Singing (G. C. R.).—You do not say whether he is in apparently good health and condition. If he is, and the position is such as you describe, I should be inclined to doubt his being a cock. In addition to the staple diet, you are giving, give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it every second day for a fortnight. On the alternate days give half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts maw, gold of pleasure, sesame, and inga. Give a leaf of dandelion daily. In the drinking water add 20 drops of whisky and 10 of glycerine for a few days. If a fortnight of this treatment does not start him singing I fancy the introduction of an active singing cock and facilities for housekeeping would soon reveal the cause of this bird's non-singing.

Not Moulting (W. I.).—If the bird appears to be in good health, and active, the best thing you can do is nothing at all. You say absolutely nothing about the health or condition of the bird. It is quite possible it may have moulted very gradually, so that you have not noticed it, but even if it has not, you will do no good trying to enforce a moult at this season. Keep it in a comfortable place, free from draughts. Feed on a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer as staple. Twice a week give a morsel of bread and milk, or sponge cake; on two other days a half-teaspoonful of a mixture of two parts each hemp, inga, and millet, and a half-part each maw, gold of pleasure, linseed, and yellow mustard. Give a little green food daily. Allow him to bathe freely in mild weather.

Pairing and Hand-rearing (H.J.—(1) It depends solely upon the general features of the birds whether you would do well to intermingle the pair of small Norwich with the pair of large birds. So far as mere size is concerned it would certainly be best to make up each pair with a large and a small bird. But before doing so you must see whether the pairs would match in colour, shape, markings, and that any pronounced failing in one bird was not also a weak point in the other. As I know nothing about these points you must see I cannot advise you more definitely. But this I would say, if the two small birds are both buff, and match each other in general features, and the large birds are yellow and buff, and match in most other respects, you would probably do best to leave the selection as it is. (2) To hand-rear Canaries, take the young from the parents at 14 days old, keep the nest in a snug place, and cover lightly with a piece of flannel, and feed every two hours from dawn to dusk with the ordinary egg food made into a soft paste by the addition of a little water. Now and again put the least dusting of powdered cuttlefish in the food, and each day add a little very finely chopped chickweed to several of the "meals." A penholder, or a thin strip of wood, trimmed to a spatula shape, makes the best feeding implement, and the food should be mixed just moist enough to pick up conveniently on the tip of this stick. It's a tedious job, but amply rewarded, as I know well from experience, when one wants a tame pet bird.

Pair of Norwich (Novice).—Am afraid you have started wrong this time. You have not only put the birds too early, but also before the cock is in anything like breeding condition, and as the hen is clearly very forward, this will incite her to commence nesting quite uselessly. If she has not begun nesting, when this appears, separate them for a week or ten days, and give the cock, in addition to his usual seed diet, half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion, and four of sherry mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed every second day, and on the alternate days a similar quantity of a mixture of two parts each hemp and inga and one part each of gold of pleasure and sesame. Give a leaf of dandelion daily. In the drinking water give ten drops of syrup of buckthorn for two days but afterwards 4 drops each tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid, two days in every three for a week. Then, if he is in better condition, and has commenced to sing you may mate them again with better prospects of success.

Seed Samples (C. Frostick). — You have quite omitted to say what you want to know about the birds, or what mischief you think the seed did them. The canary seed is small, but nice and plump, and of very fair quality. Nothing about it to do your birds harm. The hemp contains a rather large proportion of small and unripened grains, but the remainder is quite sound and of good quality, so the birds would probably simply reject the unripened stuff. If you could riddle out this small stuff, it would make a very good sample. The inga is rather dusty and old, and of only moderate quality. The linseed is a very poor quality, and also appears to be infected with mites. I should reject it altogether. If there is anything wrong with the birds, write again and describe how they are. Meantime, it can do no harm to give ten drops of syrup of buckthorn in the water for two days. There is no charge for these replies. Glad to help any reader.

From Warmth to Cold (F. J. K.).—You must on no account remove your birds to a cold, unheated room from a heated one, in which they have been brought up, without very carefully "hardening them off," as a gardener would say. You must keep up your present conditions until, say, the middle of next month, when the average normal temperature will be more mild, and then gradually drop off all heat, only putting a little on occasionally if there comes a very cold day or two in spring, and finally dropping it altogether during the summer. Then when the breeding pairs are broken up you can draft them in to the other room, where the young may be taken when able to do for themselves, and moult them there, and let them remain permanently. Place the old birds in the cosiest part of the room, and see that all are quite free from damp and draughts. If you find any of the adults becoming wheezy, cover their cages over at night for the first winter, or remove to a slightly warmer room, and continue the gradual hardening process in their cases for another season. A certain proportion of these failures will most probably occur, and a few of the older birds you may not succeed in acclimatising at all.

In a Bad Way (G. N.).—The bird has had a severe chill in some way, and I almost fear you will not be able to save him. However, try what the following treatment will do for him. Keep him quite quiet, in a fairly warm place, but not too much overheated. Give plain Canary only as staple, and every second day give a morsel of bread and milk with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and on the first two occasions slightly dusting it with flowers of sulphur. On the alternate days give a quarter teaspoonful of maw seed with a morsel of banana. Give a leaf of dandelion daily. In the drinking water give six drops each of syrup of rhubarb, dandelion juice, and a pinch of Epsom salts for three days, and afterwards dissolve a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea, ditto of sulphate of iron, half as big, in two teaspoonfuls of drinking water, and add six drops dilute sulphuric acid. Give this every second day for a fortnight. Do not give cold baths until bird is quite recovered. Do not interfere with the foot. It may very probably come right as the bird recovers, and if it does not I doubt the utility of any mechanical means of rectifying the trouble.

CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

A Report (G. K.).—Thanks for early report of progress. Glad to hear bird is responding so well to treatment, which is very hopeful of your saving him after all by the time you have gone through the full treatment.

Accommodation (A.B.C.).—You have now quite as many birds in the aviary as it will accommodate for any success in breeding to be hoped for. It would therefore be decidedly unwise to introduce any more birds of any kind.

Birds Dying (H. Phillimore).—It is quite impossible to tell cause of the birds dying, as you say, from the mere fact of their having done so. It may very probably be some derangement of the egg-producing organs due to the snap of cold weather, but the real cause could only be got at by sending a body to our Mr. Yates for a post mortem in case another dies. This might easily be the cheapest course in the end for you to adopt. Sorry I cannot reply more definitely on present data. Why not get the Nutshell booklet on "Ailments," which our manager would send you for 2½d. post free.

Pair of Norwich (Scotch Lad).—No. I cannot venture to explain the cause of the seam down the bird's breast without having seen it or knowing more of its general condition and plumage. It may be partly due to a collection of adipose tissue about the breast, or to the nature of the plumage. It is quite possible for such a bird to be a very good stock bird when suitably mated, provided only it is neither puffed out with superfluous fat, nor in an emaciated condition. From the general particulars you give I should imagine the pair are pretty well matched to counteract each other's failings. But if the cock is overloaded with fat, you should put him on a spare plain diet with plenty of green food for a week or two, or, on the other hand, if in a very low condition give a little bread and milk daily, with an occasional bit of banana, hemp, or mixed seeds for a short time.

Turning birds in Attic (no nom-de-plume).—Your query in the main concerns Mr. Weston's department. See in column for reply next week. Three cocks would be quite enough to put in with twelve hens—too many cocks only cause trouble. Put up about twenty nesting-places. Supply canary and rape in unlimited quantities in separate vessels, and give a mixture of two parts each hemp, millet, and inga, and one part each teazle, broken groats, linseed, and maw, in limited quantities three times a week. Give a little green food daily. When young are about give hemp daily, and also a supply of crushed plain biscuit, sponge cake, bread and milk, or ordinary egg food.

Sucking His Feathers (Daffodil). — See reply to "Edina." Same cause induces your bird to suck and pull at its feathers. Give it ten drops of syrup of buckthorn in its water every second day for a week, and a spray of green food daily. Feed on a mixture of two parts canary to one part summer rape as a staple, and give a small piece of bread and milk slightly dusted with flowers of sulphur and sprinkled with soft sugar every second day for a week. There is nothing you can put on the feathers to prevent the habit that would not be as great a disfigurement as anything the bird makes of them. You might try anointing the skin at the root of the feathers with cold cream to allay the irritation caused by the pulling of the feathers, which may possibly help to stop it.

A Trio (Dot).—(1) Provided the scullery is well lighted, free from draughts, and damp, and yet sufficiently ventilated to avoid any "stuffiness" in warm weather, and is not being frequently disturbed or scared by many different persons in the course of ordinary daily occupation, it should answer very well as a place to breed a few Canaries in. But you must not overlook the great value of quietude and privacy during the time the birds are nesting and rearing young. (2) All other things being equal, facing the window would be the best position for the cage, or cages. Do not forget the weekly fire in choosing the position, as the cage should not be where it would get a high temperature for a few hours and then revert to cold again. (3) Of the two named, I prefer the Yorkshire, though there is but little to choose.

Effect of Removal (J. H. Read).—The removal of the bird was probably ill-timed, or the bird was previously in a too warm position, which made the change to the cold room too great to mate all at once. It should have coincided with a spell of nice mild weather, or otherwise have been delayed another month. See that she is now quite free from draughts, and in addition to the seed diet give a scrap of bread and milk, sprinkled with soft sugar, every second day for a week. In the drinking water give 20 drops of whisky, six each of oxymel of squills, and ipecacuanha wine, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together two days in every three for a week, and every second day for another week afterwards. If she quite recovers there is no reason why you should not mate her, but do not do so until she is quite well.

A Guzzling Pair (J. W. W.).—There seems not much puzzle about this pair. It seems clear their condition is mainly, if not solely, due to fluctuations of heat and cold in the kitchen, where they were probably too near the fire, or gaslight, or both, and your previous treatment failed simply because you did not remove the cause. Now, if you are satisfied they are not exposed to any draught, and are in a fairly bright position, you will find the following treatment more successful. Give a staple diet of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Every second day for a fortnight give each half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed. On the alternate give a pinch only of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, teazle, and gold of pleasure. Give a leaf of dandelion daily. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts for three days, and afterwards 20 drops whisky, six each of oxymel of squills, and sweet spirits of nitre, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, two days in every three for a week, and every second day for another week after if necessary. Do not put them together until quite recovered and in condition even if you have to wait until the middle of April.

What is it? (A. E.).—"Unflighted" is a term applied to a yearling Canary which has not had its flights—that is, the large quill feathers of its wings—drawn at first moult. Young birds do not shed these feathers naturally until the second moult, and formerly it was a common practice to draw them out at the first moult, which was called "flighting" them. The practice is not very prevalent now, and hence the term "unflighted" to describe a bird not so treated. A "Sib hen" is a hen which has been inbred on consanguinous lines by mating together birds having blood relationship with each other for several generations. Therefore sib-breeding is synonymous with in-breeding, and the birds so bred are termed "sib" hens or cocks, as the case may be. "First feather" is a term used to denote a bird in its first, or infantile, plumage which it acquires in the nest. After its first moult it is no longer a first feather bird. First feather shows are, of course, shows for the exhibition of young birds prior to their first moult.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

Identity of Bird (J. C. F.).—The bird you have obtained (caught in your neigbbourhood) must be a cock mealy Redpoll. This species bas been very common just recently. It can be tried for muling purposes, but so far as records go, up to the present, tbe Lesser Redpoll (a smaller edition, broadly speaking, of the Mealy) is the more reliable fertiliser of eggs in captivity. You will find very full information concerning the feeding and management in "Nutshell" booklet No. 22 (post free 2½d., from "Cage Birds" Office).

Breeding in Cages (Rocbdale).—I think your stock of cages a real good idea, and have no doubt that you will breed many mules (the birds willing) in its various compartments. The methods you outline are quite correct. I certainly should not leave tbe birds in the aviary. The Bullfinch, Chaffinch, and Bramblefinch are very doubtful breeders, if mated to Canary hens; if you utilise tbem, look upon it as in the nature of an experiment, that is to say, don't build hopes ou fertile eggs. If the latter come, and young are reared, tben you will be a fortunate man. Leave the pair of Goldfinches together in the aviary; maybe they will go to nest. If you get good eggs it would be best to transfer them to the care of a hen Canary.

In a Conservatory (H. J.).—I have beard of birds being successfully kept and bred from in a lean-to glasshouse (conservatory). But where the atmosphere is moist (owing to the presence of many plants), and the temperature very high during the sunny months, or fluctuating considerably, then the use of such a place is not conducive to successful bird-keeping. Your own place, however, seems to be well situated, and if you can avoid the above conditions you will no doubt find your birds tbrive therein.

A Pair of Mules (R. N.).—I have never heard of young being produced from the mating of cock and hen Mules, but cases are on record of young coming from a cock Mule paired to a hen Canary. It is a rare occurrence, however, up to the present, and even now is a disputed possibility by many bird-breeders, who will not have it that Mules can breed. Keep your eye on CAGE BIRDS for something interesting on this point next week.

Sex of Goldfinch (C. V. H.).—If your bird is a hen according to the rules for sexing laid down in the "Nutshell" booklet, then this, I think, settles the point. Why doubt it? The information given therein is very good and up-to-date. Here are some sexual differences: The beak of the hen is shorter (not so thickset); the black on the wing-butts (shoulder of the wing), at top of the head, and round the "muzzle" (base of beak), is a grayish ashen colour, instead of a deep jet black; the under blaze extends backwards only to the middle of tbe eye (or thereabouts)), and is small in area all over—in the cock it reaches to the far side of the eye, and in a good specimen beyond it.

Skylark's Clogged Feet (A. Y.).—Instead of sand on the cage floor, try granulated peat-moss that is broken up very finely. It is obtainable at corn-chandlers' stores — is largely used by poultry-keepers, etc. Give the bird a "dust-bath," frequently (half sand, half road-dust, with a liberal dash of insect-powder in it). It can be arranged to hang on the cage door.

A Linnet's Trouble (R. Barber).—Possibly you are not keeping the bird under proper conditions—you give me no information on the point, unfortunately—maybe in a hot living-room, which favours the production of red-mites, and these pests can soon put a bird "out of condition." You must exterminate the latter, if present. You cannot do wrong by giving the Linnet a course of tonic medicine. The best, in my experience, is compound syrup of hypophosphates, B.P. This is not Parrish's Chemical Food, but a much stronger, and quite different preparation, of the nature of Fellow's Syrup. Get one ounce from a high-class chemist, and stir half a teaspoonful in two tablespoonfuls of drinking water, fresh daily. Give for three days, then on alternate days (plain water in between), for a fortnight.

The Case of A Mule (J. Bush).—If the stomach does not look reddish and inflamed then I am of opinion there is nothing the matter with the bird, tbe explanation being that he has come into breeding condition, this accounting for the "sharp cry" he gives, and for the prominent appearance of its vent. You should give the egg-food and milk once or twice a week only, and mix some teazle and a little summer rape with the bird's canary-seed.

Greenfinch Mules (J. C. B.).—1. As a mate for a Greenfinch a cobby Norwich-type hen Canary cannot well be beaten. Either a buff or a yellow would produce good Mules for singing purposes. 2. Cock Greenfinch Mules are excellent songsters, loud and free. They should be "trained" under a good noted cock Canary, and if allowed to hear a Linnet or Goldfinch, will also acquire some of its notes, and thus get variety. 3. I have often successfnly bred Mules from steady Greenfinches, in field plumage—that is, not house-moulted.

A Nightingale (Anxious).—If you keep the bird snug and out of draughts you have nothing to worry over—the feather casting will soon cease. Moisten its food supply daily for 12 to 14 days with a little good malt extract, half to a teaspoonful, commencing with a small quantity and gradually increasing it. Gentles will keep for a long time buried in damp saud, and stored iu a cool, dark place.

The Redstart (V. A. G.).—Tbe hen Redstart is a plain, greyish-brown bird, with a reddish tail. The cock bas a white forehead (in the spring this is very noticeable), a lovely reddish-orange breast, a large black patch in the region of the throat, and a fiery red tail. So you will see tbat the sexes are readily to be distinguished. No precise time can be given for them to commence singing—it depends upon how soon the bird becomes steady. The cocks sing very sweetly and prettily in the spring. Give the bird you mention a teaspoonful of Dinneford's fluid magnesia in two tablespoonfuls of drinking water—three or four doses on alternate days, plain water in between.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

Foreign with British.

Amateur.—It would have been much easier for me to have given you a useful reply if you had described size, aspect, etc., of your aviary. The essentials are room for flight, and a well-lighted and weather-proof shed. Zebra and Ribbon Finches, Long and Rufous-tailed Grassfinches, Bronze and Magpie Mannikins, Red-billed and Napoleon Weavers, Golden-breasted and St. Helena Waxbills, Java Sparrows, Diamond Doves, Silverbills, Spice Birds, Grey and Green Singing Finches, Red-crested Cardinal; the above will all stand our winter out of doors. You can keep with them the following indigenous species, Goldfinch, Bullfinch, Siskin, Redpoll, Linnet, and Twite. The following are dangerous in mixed series: Chaffinch, Bramblefinch, Robin, and Tits. I cannot assist your choice further as I know nothing about your aviary.

Amazon with Growth.

T. W. Lenton.—As soon as you see this reply, well cleanse the wound and anoint with a little zinc ointment not sufficient for it to ruu in the eye, and continue this treatment till the wound is properly healed. If there should be any recurrence of tbe growth you had better repeat query at once with full details. It will be necessary to keep the bowels moving freely while the trouble lasts; a dose of Dinneford's Magnesia (one teaspoonful in the drinking water) twice weekly should keep them well regulated. On the intermediate days well colour tbe drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. Confine it to the regulation diet; do not give slops and messes, and it will probably soon be all right again. The breaking off of the head of the growth, and the consequent exusion of the pus, should lead to the speedy disappearance of the growth. Please report progress.

Senegal Doves.

D. J. W.—(1) The cage is really too small for them, for they are good-sized birds. I take it they are newly-imported, and have not yet got over the hardships of the voyage to this country. Get the following, all in powder, and well mix them together, equal parts of each: Gentian, cinnamon, anise and ginger; lightly damp the seed mixture and then lightly dredge it with the above mixture. Also give two doses of Dinneford's Magnesia, one teaspoonful in the drinking water, with three days between each dose, and on the intermediate days well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. These are largeish birds; add a little small maize and crushed oats to their seed menu. Crush some cuttle bone to the size of millet, and put a pinch daily, with the same quantity of grit, in the daily supply of seed mixture. (2) Yes, and freely once they get settled down. If you have not been keeping them in heat, turn them into the cold room at once. They will take no hurt if there is no draught, and the exercise will help the ailing bird. (3) Canary and millet, with green food, grit, cuttle bone, and water for drinking and bathing will suffice for the Bluewings. No species of Parrakeets are permanently safe with Finch-like birds, and you will certainly be running a risk if you so mix them; but as your aviary is large, casualties should be infrequent and few.

Foreign Bird Querists will find in our handbook, "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1/1, and "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," 6d. post free; a mine of information of use and interest.

An Ailing Parrot.

C. M. B.—It is really a case for a veterinary surgeon, and I certainly advise you to let one see it. This is certainly the best course to take. It will probably save the bird needless suffering, as if its case should be hopeless it had far better be destroyed, or a slight operation may mean a speedy recovery. If the bird can still crack and eat seed I certainly consider it best not to give either tea or milk sop. The former I should not give in any case. Moisten the bread or biscuit with tepid water, slightly sweetened. I do not make visits for the purpose of inspecting birds, but where I consider such to be necessary, always refer the correspondent to their local vet. Examine its mouth, and if the tongue is badly furred, or there are any white specks on it, then put a little boney and borax into the bird's mouth twice daily. It will keep the bird's mouth clear while you are making arrangements with the vet. It will, of course, be cheapest for you to take the bird over to the vet. than to get him to come and see it. If you still wish to attend to the bird yourself, you must try and get at the swelling under the neck. Bathe it if the bird will let you; then dry it, and while the skin is moist rub in a little iodide of potassium ointment daily. If the skin should be broken you must describe nature of the sore before I can advise you. Keep me posted as to progress.

The Golden Oriole.

G. A. Baker.—As your bird is evidently a newly-imported one it would be better to keep it in a room which was slightly heated, as just at this period of the year many of the nights are very cold indeed, and the bird before it gets acclimatised may take harm therefrom. When it has passed one summer in England and gradually become accustomed to our variable weather, the temperature of an unheated room will suffice for it all the year round. The food you name will suffice for it, but it would be the better for an increased proportion of ants' eggs. Diet: Soft food, ripe fruit, live insects, and milk sop; the latter will be good for it, at any rate at first; also a liberal supply of mealworms or other live food. It is just as important to vary the live food as it is the other portion of its dietary, and if you watch our advert. columns you will be able to get quite a variety during the course of the year; moreover, it is possible to obtain cockroaches, beetles, and spiders to a greater or lower degree all the year round, and these, varied with the mealworm, will carry you through the winter. Later you can give caterpillars, gentles, wasp grub, etc. Newly-arrived Orioles are often very wild at first and difficult to tame, or steady; if such is tbe case with your bird you must keep it where it will not be continually scared by too much company or movement in its vicinity. Otherwise the temperature of an ordinary living or sitting-room will suffice for it. It does birds of this class good to have a fly round the room occasionally, and they can usually be got back to the cage without difficulty by the tempting bait of a few mealworms.

Senegal Doves (Senegal).—Yes, they are free breeders, and will agree with small birds in an aviary. Description: Head, neck, and breast vinous; abdomen, vent, and under tail coverts white; back chestnut, with a lilacine sheen; lower back and rump lead-grey; the wings are an arrangement of black, brown-grey, lead-grey, and grey, in which the latter line predominates; the tail coverts of similar hues; bill blackish; feet crimson. The female is similarly clad, but is slightly inferior in size and richness of colouration. The colouration is soft and beautifully harmonised. Give the following seed mixture: two parts each canary and white millet and one part each crushed oats and small maize; well mix before supplying to the birds. Otherwise treat as advised to "D.J.W." in this issue, but do not give the drugs—tbese are only for an ailing bird. Doves appreciate a piece of rock salt in tbeir aviary.

Parrot with Sore Foot (Highams Park).—If the growth is sound—that is, skin not broken—well cleanse it with tepid water, dab dry, and then lightly touch with tincture of iodine so long as the skin remains sound. In the case of skin being broken well cleanse with hottish water, dab dry, and then anoint with a little zinc ointment, to be continued daily till the sore heals. In the event of it healing up, and the growth remaining, treat as above with tincture of iodine, and repeat query with full particulars. It is well while such troubles last to keep the bowels moving regularly by occasional doses of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water, and also some such tonic as Parrish's Chemical Food. (See reply to "T. W. Lenton" in this issue.)

Amazon with Growths on Tongue (R. West).—I am glad you consulted a vet., as it is impossible to properly diagnose such cases by correspondence, though when the case is a serious one, the treatment I recommended for your birds has wrought wonders in many cases, and with any Parrot having a furry mouth, honey and borax acts like a charm in many cases, and often checks serious trouble; but whenever any case does not yield to the treatment, or if the growth is very pronounced, a vet. should be consulted—this procedure often saves the bird needless suffering. I am glad to note tbe bird is progressing towards recovery, which I hope will be complete.

An Untameable Bishop (Wild Bishop).—For a time keep one half the cage permaneutly screened, as a retiring place for the bird. Bishops are fond of mealworms, and if you offered one of these two or three times a day, he probably will soon learn to take it from your fingers. Do not deprive bim of the worm if he will not take it; drop it into seed tin or cage. The other precautions are to be as steady and still as possible when in its vicinity, and do not let your young people romp about near its cage. He would be likely to get tamed quicker if you could knock together a box, with netting front, double the size of its present cage.

Lovebirds and Budgerigars (Amateur).—Get a pair of Blue-wing Lovebirds, more properly Passerine Parrakeets. These will not breed so freely as the Budgerigars, but they will make a pleasing variety and should bring off an occasional brood; value 7s. 6d. to 10s. per pair, according to number on market. Keep an eye on our advert. columns and you should soon procure a pair; but if you get them before May, keep them in a cage indoors, and do not turn them out of doors till first or second week in May, according to whether season is forward or late.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must he sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

Squabbling (J. T. Lloyd).—We quite agree with you that mere "squabbling," whether over shows, or show reports, or anything else, is not calculated to do much good. At the same time, we are not prepared to debar fanciers from giving expression to their personal opinions in our correspondence columns when they wish to do so. Stick to the birds, avoid personalities, and then the free exchange of opinions cannot fail to be of benefit to bird-keepers and breeders.

Cuttings (J. T. Pegg, A. T., Miss Young, and others).—We are very much obliged to you for the newspaper cuttings.

A Photograph (S. Sykes).—Thanks; we will see if we can utilise the photograph in an ordinary issue, but are afraid it is hardly clear enough.

In Transit (Norman).—In our opinion the whole case rests upon whether you can prove that the delay, which resulted in the death of the bird, was avoidable—28 hours certainly seems an unreasonable time en route. What view the County Court judge would take of it we cannot, of course, say, but we think the case good enough to consult a solicitor upon.

Breeding the Lizard Canary (H. S. Waters).—Thanks for the paper you have sent us, which we shall hope to publish in the near future.

Crest Breeding (F. Litchfield).—Right; we will have this point touched upon.

No Egg (H. A. S.).—We will certainly endeavour to deal with this matter; thanks for suggesting it.

A Greenfood Holder (G. Warrillow).—This is quite a common "dodge," we think, amongst bird keepers.

Suggestion for a Plate (P. Morris).—We are much obliged to you for writing us, and will give your suggestion consideration.

Stationery for Bird-keepers (P. Linley).—We publish special books of letter-paper (with suitable blocks of birds and wording) for use with carbon copying paper. Our publisher would be pleased to quote you terms if you wish it. We cannot do them free of charge, of course, but the price is cut to the absolute minimum.

In the Courts.

A Metropolitan Case.

Frederick Green was summoned, at Thames Police Court on March 16, for knowingly and wilfully using a net for the purpose of taking wild birds. Police-constable 87K stated that at half-past six on the morning of the 3rd inst., he saw the defendant and another man in a field in East Ferry Road, Millwall, with two nets pegged out and three decoy birds. The other man said, "I did not know it was the close season." That man claimed the decoy birds, and Green said that they were only after Sparrows. The defendant was ordered to pay the costs of the summons.

The Persecuted Woodpigeon.

Wood Pigeons are birds whose lives are anything but quiet. Every man's hand is against them, and although they breed as a rule only twice each year, laying a pair of eggs on each occasion, their numbers do not appear to diminish. Probably the destruction of Hawks and Owls has something to do with their numbers.

Difference in Nesting Habits.

Rooks will nest in February and March, but the Crow and Jackdaw are comparatively late breeders. It is generally a month after the Rooks have commenced before these birds think of household affairs, although the Jackdaws are constantly seen at the old nesting site from the turn of the year onwards.

Grey Wagtails.

The Grey Wagtails still linger in some of their winter haunts, although the time has arrived for their departure to the upland moors and stream, where they nest year after year. These birds evidently pair for life, as they can be seen together at all times, both winter and summer.

A Thrush-like Vulture.

It is well known among bird-watchers that the Song Thrush breaks the shell of the house snail upon a stone, using the stone like an anvil. In Spain (the land of many rare birds) there is a Vulture which makes use of large rocks to smash the bones of large animals, so that it can get at the contents. This it manages by dropping them from a great height.

How Booth Produced Specimens.

In procuring specimens for his museum at Brighton, Booth had to resort to many stratagems to get some of the most wary birds. The Peregrines, for instance, were caught in the following manner: "The birds were so wary and the position of the nest so exposed in the bare face of the precipice of at least one hundred feet in height that it was impossible to get a shot at either of them; so, removing three of the young, I stumped the remaining one down, and set a couple of traps on each side of it." In this way he Thrush Imitates the Bugle.

A Cardiff man (according to the "Western Mail") owns a Thrush with a history. The bird was caught in Windsor Great Park, and went with the Second Life Guards to the Boer War. It went right through the campaign, was away three years, and returned to Netley Hospital. This bird was highly mimetic. It lost its original song and piped imitations of the bugle calls. Eventually it could imitate nearly all the calls in use. The owner was offered £18 for the bird at Hounslow.

Wellington (Salop) Show.

Sir,—Having read in our interesting and most forward fanciers' paper, Cage Birds, that the Wellington, Salop, C.B.S. is running a show on March 25th, 1911, may I call their attention to the fact that they have not yet paid last year's prize money? If they cannot pay up and be respected, how can they expect to successfully run another show? Salopian.

Mules at Bangor and Menai Bridge Shows.

Sir,—At Bangor members' show my first prize winning Goldfinch-Canary Mule was wrongly described as a Linnet Mule, and well commented on as being a good bird, as it is a light Mule, and its feathers are white. I would like to know if a Mule which is half light should be placed after Dark Mules in a class, as it took premier honours in Bangor, and did not get a card at Menai Bridge show. I am at a loss to know why Light Mules are bred, if they do not get in the cards. W. Aitken.

An Appeal for a Port Glasgow Fancier.

Sir,—Allow me to thank you for publishing letter in your valuable paper, Cage Birds, re an appeal on behalf of a brother fancier—Felix Grahame. I may say I have received several letters from England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales, which goes to show the great value of Cage Birds, and proves how eagerly it is read amongst fanciers. I have disposed of some sixty subscription books among the secretaries of different societies, but so far I can't say anything on the sales of same. May Cage Birds flourish is the wish of the fanciers of Greenock, Port Glasgow, and Gourock.

G. Forrester,

New Cage Bird Society for Durham and District.

Sir,—We have started a new Cage Bird Society, to be named the Dubmire Workman's Club Cage Bird Society. President, — Hall, Esq.; vice-president, Mr. G. Grahame; chairman, Mr. J. Fenton; secretary, Mr. D. Hann; assistant secretary, Mr. Barrass Robinson; treasurer, Mr. J. Henderson. We will have our meetings on Sunday mornings, the last of every month. We hope to have a very good membership. We had a very nice meeting for the first one, and hope for a better next one, as we will have to consider our first feather show, etc. D. Hann.

The Marking of Migratory Birds.

Aberdeen University Migration Inquiry.

Sir,—We should like to draw attention to the work of the "Aberdeen University Bird-Migration Inquiry." This aims at collecting more definite information on the subject of the migration of birds by means of the method of placing rings on the feet of a large number of birds in the hope of hearing of the subsequent movements of some proportion of them. To this end the rings are inscribed with the address "Aberdeen University," and a number (or number and letter combination) different in each case. The rings are placed on young birds found in the nest, or on any old ones that can be captured without injury. The rings are of aluminium and extremely light, and do not inconvenience the birds in any way. The co-operation of all who take any interest in Natural History questions is earnestly solicited in order to secure the best results:—1. It is particularly requested that all who may shoot, capture, or kill, or even hear of any of our marked birds, should let us know of the occurrence. As accurate particulars of date and locality as possible are desired, above all, the number (or number and letters) on the ring. Indeed, except where it has been possible to deliberate the bird uninjured, the ring itself should always be sent; or the ring and foot, or even the whole bird. We always refund postage if asked to do so. 2. We invite the co-operation in the actual work of marking of any who are specially interested, and have some knowledge of birds, and also time and opportunity for the work. The necessary rings, schedules, postage stamps, etc., are supplied by us without charge, and we undertake to let the marker know of each case of a bird marked by him being recovered, and to let him have copies of printed reports as far as possible. The following results obtained at an early stage of the work will serve to indicate what is to be expected from it; these are merely a few records which happen to be of considerable individual interest: (1) A Wigeon duckling (Marecca penelope), one of five marked in June, 1909, on Loch Brora, Sutherland, Scotland, was taken in a duck-decoy in Province Groningen, north-eastern Holland, on September 3rd, 1909. This bird was thus only three months old when it was found more than 500 miles from its birth-place. A second member of the brood was shot on the Trent near Redford, Lincolnshire, England, in January, 1911, having worn the ring for a year and a half. (2) An adult Swallow (Hirundo rustica) caught and marked at a farm near Tunbridge Wells, Kent, England, in June, 1909, was recaught at the same farm in June, 1910. (3) Five Lapwings (Vanellus vulgaris) marked as chicks in the north-east of Scotland, in the summer of 1910, were shot respectively in Counties Tipperary, Roscommon, Cork, and Limerick, Ireland, and in southern Portugal, during the winter 1910-1911. (4) A Song-Thrush (Turdus musicus), one of a brood marked as chicks in the nest at Skene, Aberdeenshire, in early June, 1910, was shot near Leiria, Portugal, in early November of the same year. The two localities are about 1,250 English miles apart in direct overseas line, and this Thrush thus made a journey of probably more than 1,500 miles within the half-year of its life. (5) Seven Herring Gulls (Larus argentatus), out of over a hundred marked as chicks on the cliffs about twenty miles north of Aberdeen in the summer of 1910, were shot at the following localities down the east coast of Scotland and England in the following autumn and winter:—Aberdeen, Tayport, St. Andrews, Sunderland, Grimsby, Mablethorpe, and Hunstanton; and an eighth at Manchester. (6) A Guillemot (Uria troile) marked at a newly-hatched chick on the Aberdeenshire cliffs on July 11th, 1910, was shot on November 29th, 1910, a dozen miles north of Gothenburg, Sweden. This bird was thus 4½ months old when it was killed more than 500 miles due east of its birth-place.

How to Solder with Resin.

Sir,—"Linnet" in your issue of Feb. 4th, asks of some fellow readers of Cage Birds, "How to solder with resin." Since then some have advised him to use "Fluxite," spirits of salts, buy a blowpipe, etc. Now if "Linnet" requires to use resin why run him into expense of the above-named articles? If "Linnet" uses spirts of salts (killed with zinc until the boiling of the spirits has finished, and not killed with block tin, as Mr. Archibald Stinson in Cage Birds of March 18th states), and, it is not properly cleaned off after use, he will find it disastrous, as the spirits are poisonous. If "Linnet" will purchase ¼lb. resin 1d., and ¼lb. tallow, 2d., making 3d. in all, it will last him months. First smear the part to be soldered with the tallow (as there is no salt in tallow), then add some powdered resin and use the soldering iron in the usual way; "Linnet" will succeed in solderiug with resin. He must understand he cannot solder zinc with resin. "Plumber."

The Breeding of Norwich Plainheads.

Sir,—No novice could be more pleased than myself for the valuable information contained in the two contributions relating to Norwich Plainhead and Yorkshire Canaries which have appeared in your recent issues from the pen of that well-known judge, Mr. J. C. Barnes, of Sheffield. Would it be asking too much from the said gentleman to kindly let us know (also through your columns) the number of birds, and how marked, he would recommend a novice to commence with, in the formation of a stud. I am now thinking of the Norwich Plainhead, which is the variety I purpose going in for. Also how he would pair up the following season; also his method of pairing to produce suitable marked show birds, what are the best markings, and last, but not least, his detailed method of feeding each day from the nest onwards. Concerning the last item, we are told over and over again to feed on hemp, egg-food, etc., but no mention whatever as to the quantity to be used—and this, to my mind, is the rock on which we novices perish. A Grateful Novice.

Wake Up, Leyton!

Sir,—The members of the Leyton and District C.B.A. will indeed be amused by the letter signed "Alivo" in your last issue. The report of the last meeting will be found in the same issue, and the manuals were all in the members' hands previous to the letter appearing in print. We are enclosing a copy of the manual, and we think you will agree that we are not far behind other clubs in getting them out, especially when the amount of work is taken into consideration—canvassing for advertisements, etc.—by which we greatly reduce the cost of production. Taken as a whole, "Alivo's" letter is as ridiculous as it is contemptible. The same opinion is expressed by quite a dozen members (not all officials) whom we have met since the letter appeared in print. One and all, after a hearty laugh, have made some disparaging comments on the writer. It is hardly necessary to inform members, but we would like to inform the Fancy generally, that the Leyton and District C.B.A. is still progressing on the upward path. The membership still exceeds 100, although a number of names have been removed for non-payment of subscriptions. Perhaps "Alivo" comes under the latter category; in that case he will not have received a manual. In conclusion, we would just like to say that if any member has a grievance, either real or imaginary, our committee will always be pleased to give it their best consideration providing he addresses it to them in a proper manner. By doing so he will be acting more like a man should act. Any further effusions by "Alivo" will be ignored by

Do Goldfinches Wilfully Waste Good Seed?

Sir,—I am no novice in keeping Goldfinches, but much as I love these handsome birds, I am sometimes sorely tempted to give up keeping them on account of the extravagant waste of seed, which seems to me inseparable from caging them. My mixture is mainly one of sound Canary, hemp, and teazle, but I find more than half of it uncracked on the floor. The birds pick up a seed, and it is ten to one on their throwing it on the floor instead of cracking it. I have tried glass bottles, and troughs with round holes here and there, without success. The seeds, whole and sound, often cover the cage bottoms, or the floor, in spite of every precaution. I feel pretty sick to see so much sound Canary seed swept up amongst other rubbish, and I feel sure it is no exaggeration for me to say that, out of a mixture weighing one hundredweight, less than half is eaten. Using a sieve and trying to gather it is not a success. I would like to hear the experience of others. Canaries will eat Canary seed. Goldfinches only do so in a last extremity, and the majority do not thrive on it, say what one will.

"Disgusted."

A New Cage Bird Society for Chester-le-Street.

Sir,—Notwithstanding the unfavourable climatic conditions, a large muster of fanciers and friends met in the Butchers' Arms, and formally inaugurated a Cage Bird Society for Chester-le-Street (radius 10 miles). An attempt was made to make it a Fur and Feather Society, but Biddle men were in the majority, and carried the day. The following were elected to the offices: Chairman, Mr. W. Forster; committee, Messrs. Bendalow, Davison, Tarn, Dobson, Hughes, and Ward. A paper on the Norwich Plainhead will be given at next meeting, April 15th, at 7p.m., by Mr. W. Forster. Discussion will be invited. Fanciers and friends are welcome. The subs. were fixed at 5s. per annum, and 1s. to join. Sixteen members were enrolled, and a good prospect of as many more next meeting. Any communication or inquiries to me.

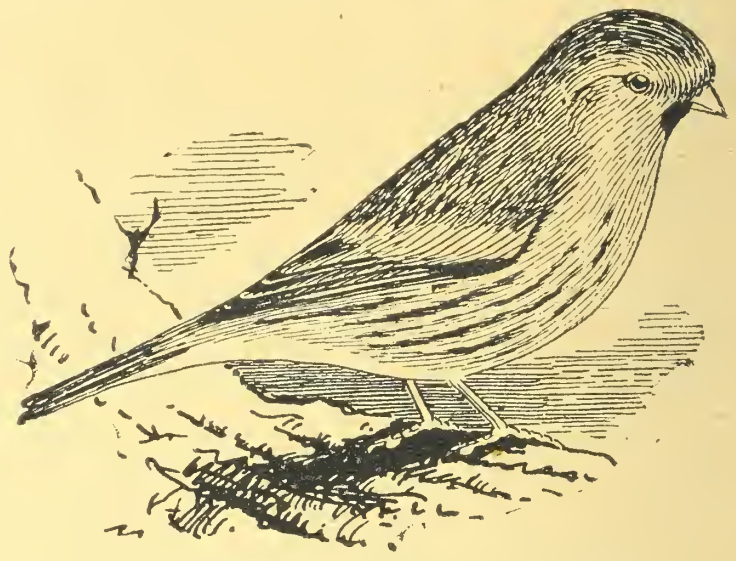
Sir,—In 1908 I won 1st, silver cup, special and vhc in Novice Roller Class; 1909, 2nd, 4th, and special; and 1910, in champion Young Bird Class, hc. On the two first occasions I wrote for the cards, but did not get them—just the gummed labels that were put on by the judge. I did not trouble to write for card at 1910 show, as I thought, like "Exhibitor," no cards were given, until Mr. Firth enlightened us. It seems a strange thiug that exhibitors do not get their cards, even after writing for them. I have never had to write for cards only when exhibiting here, as at all shows, including the Palace, they are sent with the birds at the close of the show. Like "Exhibitor," I like to have what I am entitled to, as when we sell our birds customers naturally want the cards birds have won. A. G. Pattison.



Sir,—Seeing that Mr. Andrew M. Firth is surprised to heard that "Cardos" has not received his prize cards, I should like to inform him that I also have not got any as yet. I showed four birds, and got 2nd and two 3rds, and a 4th with them. My prize money came all right, but no cards, only the "mutilated tram tickets." Then you see other exhibitors letting people know they have got both. If I am not mistaken, the 4th prize money in the half-classes was withheld, and a card was to be given. I hope these few lines will catch the eye of some of the L.C.B.A. members, who may try and give exhibitors more satisfaction for sending their birds at their own risk.

The Destruction of Rare Birds.

Sir,—During the latter part of the year just past two examples of the Hoopoe were obtained within a few days of each other—one at Elham, on the South Coast, and the other at Pitlochry, in the North of Scotland. The Elham offender was fined 2s. 6d. and £1 7s. costs, the bird being ordered to be forfeited. In the meantime, the owner of the Pitlochry Hoopoe remains in undisputed possession of his specimen, as it seems that in Perthshire the bird receives absolutely no protection during the six months ending March 1st, and no penalty attaches to its destruction. Such a state of things shows all too plainly that the existing protective measures are quite inadequate for the protection of the casual feathered visitor. Even when the offender is caught, red-handed, shooting a legally protected bird, and the charge is fully proved, as in the Elham case, he is not infrequently let off with the payment of a paltry fine and costs, which amount to much less than the market value of the dead bird. What is wanted is a general law protecting all rare and beautiful birds which visit our shores, and giving magistrates power to suspend the gun licence for some years in the case of a first conviction for killing any such protected species, and, on a second conviction, the revocation of the licence altogether.

Loud Song from Skylarks.

A Hand-rearing "Tip."

Sir,—I noticed in your issue of March 11th a novice asks for information re the loud singing of Skylarks. I waited to see if there would be an answer in your last issue from an abler pen than mine, but seeing only a short note, I thought I would send my method along, trusting it will meet the needs of "A Novice" or any other reader. My method is as follows: Get two pounds of Trower's "Cecto" and to that add three 3d. packets of a good maker's packet of Lark food, Spratt's for preference. Use that as a staple food. Write to Mr. H. Allen, of Leeds, who advertises in Cage Birds, for one of the books, for after I had been doing as the book said for about a month there was a great difference in the song of my birds. I also give my birds Hemp, Canary, White Millet and Rape seeds—not all at once, but on separate days and in separate pots. I give all sorts of flies, caterpillars and grubs as I find them, and a fresh turf whenever the weather is dry and free from frost. The cages I use are 18 inches long and 16 inches high and 11 inches deep inside measurements, with a bow extending to within two inches of the whole length of the fronts and end, back three-ply wood. I make them myself, but buy the wire fronts. I noticed last year a number of queries addressed to your Mr. G. E. Weston (from whom I have got many a tip by studying his replies to others), re the hand-feeding of Larks. Here is a tip I picked up long ago, and I have never known it to fail: Get an old cock Lark, no matter whether he sings or not, or is tame or wild; put him in a large cage or a grocer's box with fine mesh wire in the front, and the first Lark nest you can find. When they are about a fortnight old (the young I mean, of course), bring them home and put them in with the old cock Lark, then leave him alone. Be sure to give him plenty of food, and he will do the rearing part. I have one which reared seven last year. I kept one of them, and he has turned out a fine young cock, and sings nearly as good as the old cock. The only thing is to keep them well supplied with food, or otherwise sand off the cage bottom or anything that is in the cage will go into the open beaks of the young ones; but do not try an old hen Lark, or she will kill the whole lot very quickly. I trust some reader will find this tip of some use to him during the coming season, and I wish Cage Birds and Cage Birds League every success.

The Lizard Canary.

Sir,—I note in Cage Birds of March 18th, a report of a lecture on the Lizard Canary, by Mr. H. Cooke, in which he uses the whole of the L. and L.F.A. standard when speaking of his ideal bird, but omits to give the source of his information, or to credit our Society. We are at all times pleased to see the merits of our favourites put in print, hut when anyone has to rely on outside assistance to make a lecture complete, the least he could do when using such information would he to give credit for same when using it. John Rukin.

New Cage Bird Society for Shepshed and District.

Sir,—A meeting was held on March 16th at Mr. Watson's, the Hall Croft, when it was unanimously carried that we form a cage bird society, and that it be called Shepshed and District Cage Bird Association. Membership is open to a radius of ten miles. Proposed and seconded that A. Edwards be secretary pro tem. A good number were enrolled as members, and two donations were given of 2s. 6d. each by Messrs. G. Smith and W. Watson, and several specials promised for the coming show season. Proposed and seconded that the next meeting he held on March 26th, at 7.30 p.m., at the same place. Business: Election of committee, etc. A hearty invitation is given to all fanciers. Full particulars can be had from me.

The Cage Bird Fancy in Devonshire.

Sir,—I have read with interest the letter signed "Devonian" in your current issue, with a reference to the Cage Bird Society formed at Tavistock two years since. I always hesitate to reply to anonymously written letters, but as the writer is definite in naming "Tavistock" as one of the districts which ought to "run a very good society," I write to inform you of the "great interest taken by the local committee." At the annual meeting, convened last year, for the purpose of receiving the financial report, and the election of a committee for the year, the only persons who attended the meeting were the chairman, the hon. treasurer, and myself. "The great interest taken by novices" (I quote your correspondent's words) and of the committee may be appreciated when I say that the society has a good balance in hand. All prize monies won at the first show were paid out at or before seven o'clock on the day of the show, and the only question for the "novices" and committee to consider was the further carrying-on of the business of the society to secure a show which may have been held in December of last year. If "Devonian" is resident at or near Tavistock, he may aid the Fancy locally by calling upon me, when I shall he very glad to be relieved of the secretarial duties, which I am sure he will be delighted to take up. Wm. Hy. Parsons,

Hon. Secretary, Tavistock and Dist. C.B.S.

The Lancashires and Lizards of To-day.

Sir,—I am sure a great deal of good would be done if friend Fuller would explain his ideas to an audience of Lancashire fanciers. Perhaps if Mr. Fuller was asked by either the Rochdale or Oldham Society he would respond and give a lecture. Then we could get to know something of the Lancashire variety. I hope this matter will be taken up in the right spirit.

John Henry.

Sir,—I was surprised, and may say annoyed, on readmg my "C.B.," to find my name appearing in print, and in so prominent a manner, and whilst thanking my unknown critic for so kindly mentioning my birds so favourably, I at the same time wish he had left me out of the question altogether, as I don't believe in so much bolstering anyone's particular strain. Now, in regard to Mr. Fuller saying these hard things about the judging: it is quite a hobby of his, and nobody wonders when Teddy gets riding it, as his heart is in his hobby, right from the geegee down to the harness, etc., necessary to equip it. I think Mr. L. B. has got a bit mixed in his criticism of Rochdale Show, and is too severe on Mr. House's judging there, as, with the exception of the broken cap, silver cock and silver hen class, there was not much to grumble at—in Lizards, at any rate. Lancashires I can leave to others to thrash out for themselves. Re the Palace Show, he is again at fault in saying Mr. Dewsnap was first in Golds, as I was first, Mr. Dewsnap being second. However, no big harm has been done. In regard to Mr. Donnelly's letter, I can assure him that I can take a fair beating with anyone, and seldom grumble, even at mistakes or bad judging, when I am a victim. However, I will try and enlighten him in regard to my saying I was beginning to think it was time to keep our birds at home. This was not in connection with the judge at the Scottish National, hut in regard to complaints made by some of our members, and also owing to the officials of the above-named show promising to give us four classes, and then, at the last minute almost, giving us two only, without advising us of the alteration as regards the judge. Well, I contend it is as fair to one as to another, and far more exciting. Mr. Fuller's sentence referring to my best Gold being out of the cards; I can assure Mr. Donnelly that I don't need to send a postcard to the judge, as I think Mr. L. B., in referring to this bird, has given the reason; it had knocked a few feathers down middle of back, and this must have put him out of action; and, when telling Mr. Fuller, I told him I expected this was the reason. I think Friend Teddy also gives the reason of Mr. Oliver's Silver being so far down, as surely it is a big disadvantage to have a new tail in, much less winning without a head, another of Teddy's extravagant expressions. Mr. Donnelly is quite right in saying that Rochdale fanciers were not disappointed, as far as Lizards were concerned, as they had little or no Rochdale exhibitors showing, as of late years they seem to be an unknown quantity; and yet there are several breeders of Lizards in Rochdale. For my own part, though I have never done very much under Mr. House, I am quite satisfied he can judge a Lizard with anyone, when he likes, and I feel sure, in my mind, that some of his awards have been purely and simply mistakes, as I am confident some of his awards have not been his best judgment. I trust that the discussion may do some good.

The Norwich Plainhead Club of Ireland.

Sir,—I would feel thankful if any of your Irish readers could inform me what has become of the above club. In your paper of last April a notice appears of this club being in a good position, and also to the effect that the cups would be offered for best exhibits in unflighted birds amongst its members at shows obtaining the club's patronage. The past show season is now gone, and on referring to all the show catalogues I can't find one show that had the club's patronage. Personally, being more inclined to show Norwich birds than the Yorkshire type, I would indeed be sorry if this club should fall through. Perhaps if the cups were offered to birds that had, say, a club ring, it would be preferable. Also a novice cup might do a lot of good to obtain more members. Any information will thankfully be received by the writer, Catch-my-Pal.

Two Useful Cramps when Cage-making.

Sir,—To the readers of Cage Birds who at times make their own cages, I thought the two cramps shown in the accompanying illustrations might prove useful. They are serviceable appliances for many jobs, and they are also very simple to make; and will be found specially effective for cramping wide boards together. The first cramp shown is the simpler of the two, and consists of two blocks of larch wood, and some cord. The blocks, which, by the way, should be about ¾in. square, and 6in. long, are placed one on each edge of the boards, as shown, and the cord is then wrapped round two or three times and tied. A small strip of wood is now placed between the strands of cord and twisted, which action gradually presses the boards closer together. In cramping thin boards together, a weight should be placed upon them before finally tightening the cords to obviate the risk of the boards buckling up. The second appliance can be made any length according to the number and width of the pieces it is required to cramp together; but a convenient size is about 2ft. 6in. long. Any odd length of stuff will serve the purpose, providing it is planed flat on the top face. At one end of a board, say 6in. wide and ¾in. thick, screw on a piece of stuff 2in. wide, as shown at A, Fig. 2, and at the other end another piece tapered, as shown, is fixed that may be adjusted to any distance hy the movable pins, B, which fit in holes made equidistant along the board. When the wood to be cramped is placed on the board, as in Fig. 2, the block C is pinned in the hole nearest the edge of the pieces to be cramped, and the wedge is then driven home. It is advisable when cramping up to use a packing piece, D, in order to prevent the edge of the wood being damaged by the wedge. Two of these appliances should be used when cramping up stuff that is more than 1ft. 3in in length.

A Quick and Effective Method of Making Perches.

Sir,—Cage Birds' readers will now be busy cleaning and fitting up breeding cages for the coming season. Making perches is not a very difficult task to the small breeder, but when some considerable number are required some standard should be used to get a uniform section. You can obtain the timber, ¾in. by

¾in. in running feet. Using a joiner's ¾in. heading plane, take off the edges as shown in sketch. After sawing down the line "A B" and sandpapering over, your perches are ready. This method is both quick and effective.

Proposed United Nest Feather Show.

Festival for Birmingham and District.

Sir,—I would like to draw the attention of all fanciers and members of the City of Birmingham C.B.S., West Bromwich C.B.S., South Birmingham O.S., and, if possible, Wolverhampton C.B.S., to an effort being made for a United Nest Feather Show to be held in the evening of June 22nd (Coronation Day), and ask the secretaries of each society to give the matter their best attention. Perhaps they will place such an idea and the following scheme for holding same, at the earliest possible date before their members. To give thought for discussion, I should propose as follows: To invite all the secretaries together to form and co-operate for the best possible result, after the members of each society have agreed upon same to he carried through. To obtain a levy equal to 30s. per club; this, we would say for argument, would realise £6 for the four clubs, or £4 10s. for three, which same would pay for judges' fees and special cash prizes only, the same to be allotted by a committee of four, including the secretary from each club. Special meetings to be held for this show as would be satisfactory to all. That the entranee fee be at the rate of 6d. per bird, each society guaranteeing not less than 10s. for 20 birds to be entered, shown or not. The prize money to be allotted, not on a sliding scale, but fixed at 1st, 2nd, 3rd, with cards from 1st to 3rd. That it be held at the City of Birmingham's rooms, that society heing the senior one, and allow them 10 per cent. on total receipts for expenses, viz., judges' refreshments, cleaning of rooms, fixing staging and use of same. That all birds be on staging at 6.30 o'clock, with one hour allowed for judges to allot awards; open to all 7.30 or 8 p.m. That the chairmen of each society act as show managers and umpires, as needed in complaints or disputes. Then, failing a United Show at one room, perhaps it would be possihle to hold one Nest Feather Show at each society's rooms—two in June and one or two in July, under similar conditions. I trust interest will be shown in my effort to bring together a record gathering for a record year.

The Proposed Lancashire Union.

Sir,—In reading your excellent and entertaining report of the splendid gathering of societies in the Yorkshire district, one paragraph particularly arrested my attention. I refer to a part of Mr. Hammond's speech, in which he said "that at the end of a twelvemonth he hoped to see a Union as strong as their own in Lancashire." And why not? There ought to have been such a Union in Lancashire this many a year. Perhaps now that it has been suggested from outside we may get one. The advantages to be derived from such an institution are innumerable; to name a few—the value of hoth show and stock birds would appreciate, it would promote healthy and friendly competition, and would prevent the clashing of shows if worked on the same lines as the Yorkshire Union. It perhaps would not be quite so easy of arrangement as the Yorkshire union, owing to the more numerous varieties which are kept and exhibited, but even that difficulty could be surmounted, given a few men with brains (and, in spite of "Bird o' Freedom," there are a few such in Lancashire) at the helm. In my opinion, Mr. Lythgoe's suggestion, "That the Yorkshire Union take the wholo of the North under its wing," would never catch on. I think they would be very foolish to adopt any suggestion which would interfere with the present splendid working of their Union. No! there are enough societies in Lancashire and that part of Cheshire in close touch with Manchester to form a Union which would become in time even as strong as the Yorkshire Union. There are no fewer than 24 strong societies in the district, in addition to a host of smaller societies, who, although unable to hold an open show of their own, would yet have an inducement to join such a Union. This union of societies need not be antagonistic to, nor is it being sugested by me to supersede the Cage Bird Union, which, as Mr. Lythgoe said in his speech, is not dead yet, hut even so optimistic a fancier as himself must admit that it is in need of artificial respiration. What the complaint is, Goodness only knows; it certainly is not troubled with congestion, and will be troubled with that complaint even less now that they have adopted the suicidal policy proposed by the Liverpool O.S., i.e., the deletion of Rule 22. If I may be allowed to digress even a little farther, I would like here to point out to the Liverpool Society that they held last year the best show ever held in Liverpool, and created a record for the United Kingdom, so far as I remember, with the splendid average entry of 18.55 per class, and no classes cancelled. This remarkable feat was achieved under the C.B.U. rules, and under the hated Rule 22. Will they beat it next year without the Union? But to revert to the original subject. I hope some of the leading lights in this district will give us their views on this subject (not the C.B.U.) in your next issue. If the idea meets with favour, I don't see why the Union could not be got in working order before next October. Now then, secretaries, waken up, and don't all write at once. Optimist.

The Pegging of Chaffinches.

Sir,—Seeing that Mr. E. Grantham is asking through your valuable paper of March 11 how to peg Chaffinches, I will endeavour to give him my experience. First, he must have a stout-singing Chaffinch that will sing freely tied up in a black handkerchief in a cage—one that does two or three changes of song for preference, and will do battle with any wild Chaffinch he may meet on the road. Then he requires a dummy cock Chaffinch set up so as to show the whites of the wings well, a case of bird-limed twigs, made of whalebone, with a strong needle and a piece of lead hound on one end so as to be able to stick it in anywhere, and weight it. When he has these things he is ready for a day's pegging. When he gets into the country with his Chaffinch singing, the wild ones will soon show themselves hy darting about in an excited manner, and "pinking" or singing in answer to his own bird. When he has found one showing the above-named signs, he must get his dummy stuck up quick at the butt of a tree or in a hank close hy; then stick a limed twig so as to be straight up or across the back of the dummy about 2 inches away. Then stand the Chaffinch a few feet away, and if the wild Chaffinch is fit, he will soon strike at the dummy and get caught on the limed twig. If he does not strike at first, hut still darts about excitedly, you can shift the dummy into several different positions to try him. In most cases, when the hird is fit, one set will be enough to catch him. But some are very fussy how they have the dummy before they strike, and some will not strike at all, though they show every sign of it. I know of some districts where you could take a good hird and pass dozens of wild Chaffinches singing, but could not catch one. I know also of others where you could catch them as fast as you tried.

Marking Canaries, and the Making of Egg Food.

Sir,—I thought some chemist would have replied to your correspondent re the liquid he asked about for marking Canaries, or I would have done so sooner. I cannot lay hands on the report which mentioned the solution in question, hut if my memory serves me aright, it was a chemical solution owing its staining properties to the action of one chemical upon another. I have a hazy recollection of thinking at the time that it was very similar to some of the bichromate solutions used in photography, and I am rather sceptical of its utility for marking the feathers of Canaries. Your correspondent would find a strong solution of violet aniline quite serviceable for his purpose. This seems to be the ink used to mark birds for dealers' trade purposes, and is sufficiently durable to remain legible for several months. If anything more permanent were needed, though, of course, twelve months is the limit of usefulness for any such method of marking on account of the moult taking place, I should imagine a good marking ink, as used for marking linen, etc.—one that requires no heating to fix it—would be all that could be desired. Whilst writing, I should like to refer to the recent report of the egg-food making competiton, at the City and Suburban A.C.B. It will be noticed that two competitors used Standard bread for making the egg-food. Just now, whilst Standard bread is booming, this was only what one might expect, so intimately do fact and fashion affect every phase of our existence, but in this case I believe the fashion must and will be wholly beneficial to the health and stamina of the birds reared with its aid. I have for many years at intervals suggested the wisdom of employing what has formerly been known as wholemeal bread in preparing food for rearing young and lately repeated the idea in the chapter on feeding in "Our Canaries." But wholemeal bread, as it was termed, never caught the popular fancy or got the boom which appears to be running on Standard bread, consequently it was not so readily available in the fancier's household as it may be for some time to come. I am convinced that provided a proper Standard bread is procured, and not merely a dark, so-called Standard, it would be wholly to the fancier's interest to use it in preference to the ordinary white breads of to-day, or biscuits. The Cage Bird Union.

A Secretary Appointed Pro. Tem.

Sir,—Will you kindly announce that the Secretary (pro. tem.) of the Cage Bird Union is Mr. S. Hadwin? Several other gentlemen were nominated for this office, but were unwilling to stand for election. Mr. J. Tyler Leicester) and Mr. G. J. Warley (Brixton) were the only nominees for president and treasurer. Replies to my last circular letter to societies, and all communications re the Union, should be addressed to Mr. S. Hadwin, 137, Copperas Hill, Liverpool.

A Mule from a Foreign Bird.

Sir,—Perhaps readers would like to hear that I have got two young birds out of a nest of four eggs (hatched on the 11th inst) from a South African Blackhead (cock) and a hen Canary. The cock bird is a splendid songster, and has beautiful plumage. I am not certain of its name, but the description is as follows: Jet black head and neck, brown wings and tail, white belly from neck, with black marks forming V from tail. I might say it is the third nest I have had from this pair, but I have never had any eggs fertile until this year. This is the second nest this year; in the previous nest I had one young, but they killed it. Would any reader tell me whether I have the bird's right name?

The Exhibiting of Borrowed Birds in Ireland.

Sir,—I have read in the correspondence columns about the exhibition of borrowed birds in Ireland, and with much of what your Northern correspondents write I am in accord. That this pernicious system prevails, and that, too, to a great extent, is known to most of us, but those who indulge in it and thus sacrifice this personal honour for the honour (?) of winning a card, cover up their tracks so carefully that it is absolutely impossible to bring their guilt home to them. There is only one way in which this wholesale swindling can be successfully combated, viz., by the universal adoption in Ireland of the closed ring and the systematic keeping by the specialist clubs of a register of all closed rung birds. For a club to have a rule which states that birds (Canaries) exhibited must have been bred by the exhibitor is nonsensical, and it is more nonsensical to add to it that, if necessary, an exhibitor must make a declaration to the effect that the bird was bred by him, for under existing conditions there is nothing to prevent a man from purchasing a good closed rung bird out of a selling class, cut the ring off, and then enter it and win with it as his own breeding at a later show. And, as for "declarations," well, I think it will be acknowledged that a man who does that would swear the cross off an ass's back. Stringent measures will have to be adopted to checkmate these unscrupulous exhibitors, some of whom one would never suspect of such dishonesty. By all means let the use of closed rings become general, and a register be kept by the specialist bodies of all rings issued, and all birds sold and exchanged. Let every close rung bird's number be printed in the show catalogues, and then will cease the showing of borrowed close rung birds and of close rung birds purchased a day or two before the show "on approval," on the "if-it-doesn't-win-send-it-back" principle.

Climbing the Yorkshire Exhibition Ladder.

Sir,—In reply to Messrs. Blackburn and Mitchell's letter, allow me to point out to them that sarcasm does not overcome the truth. When I sent you my last letter for publication, Mr. Editor, I also sent you the gentleman's letter (which I had filed) for your inspection as proof of my statements, which perhaps you will substantiate. Who told Messrs. Blackburn and Mitchell that I confused your readers? Are they the only readers of your valuable paper? They seem to have put the cap on as being the "confused" parties, as they have made nothing but confused statements in all their letters without yet having given your readers one word of proof. They state that their bird was marked on both wings, of which I was quite aware when I wrote my last letter; and having set them a bait, they, like a foolish fish, came up and swallowed it, and thus acknowledged to all your readers that their bird never won at the Palace Show, as the bird that did win was only marked on one wing! Now, Messrs. Blackburn and Mitchell, seeing that you have not yet denied any of my statements, perhaps you will be able to convince the readers if you can deny (with proof) the following: Can you deny the gentleman coming to my house in November, 1903, and buying the hen which I bred, and which won at the Crystal Palace Show in February, 1906 (not 1905, as you stated)? Do you deny writing to the gentleman (unknown to me) in February, 1906, after the Palace Show, telling him you had bred the hen and sold her to me, and at the same time asking all particulars about the hen and what honours she had won before the Palace Show? Can you deny that the gentleman wrote you back telling you when he bought the hen from me, and also giving you all particulars and markings of the hen? Can you deny that the gentleman showed the hen at Manchester Show, October 28 and 29, 1904, while at the same time your bird had not left your possession, as you showed it at Halifax November 4 and 5, 1904? Can you deny that your bird did not come into my possession till November 23, 1904? Can you deny my statement of Mr. J. Broadley and Mr. Hewson coming to my house in December, 1905, and buying the hen which came from you, as you have had every opportunity of writing to them? Now, if Messrs. Blackburn and Mitchell (after the statements they have made) have any manliness left in them, they will answer the above questions instead of beating about the bush and trying to evade the truth.

The Problem of Markings.

Sir,—As I have been much interested in Mr. Norman's plate and Mr. House's description of ticked birds, in the issue of Feb. 18, there are a few points I am not clear on. But as a novice I am sure I shall be forgiven if I have come to a wrong conclusion, i.e., that such birds must have only one of the technical marks laid down by the Yorkshire Club's rule, together with any other ticks or marks on the body; or dark or Cinnamon ticks and marks without any technical points; or one technical point only—such birds I understand are of the ticked variety. The unevenly marked, two technical points, and one body tick or mark, I understand. But the question is, what do the following come under? (1) Two or more technical points, with two or more body tick or marks; or (2) two or more of the same technical points, with two or more body ticks or marks. Neither Mr. Gardner nor Mr. Weston states whether the bird discussed by them had two of the same technical points or two of either of the said technical points, or if there were any body marks or ticks. I suppose I must wait and see what will constitute an even-marked bird, whether it is 2, 4, 6, or 2, 3, 4, 5, 6 technical points on a clear body, as I do not know. But as a novice I am anxious to know these details before the show season, and so many eminent judges read your valuable paper that I am sure someone will put me right.

Arthur H. Cowell.

The Yorkshire Club's definitions read (1) An evenly marked bird must be four-pointed (both eyes, both wings), or six-pointed (both eyes, both wings, both sides of tail; (2) an unevenly marked may have two, three, or five technical marks on eyes, wings, or tail, separately, or in addition to any other variegation on its body. A bird with four or six marks, if variegated on the head or body, is also considered an unevenly marked bird; (3) a ticked bird is one with dark feather on thighs, rump, or any part of an otherwise clear body; it may also have a mark on one eye, wing or tail, but not more than one such technical mark separately or in addition to any other variegation on its body. These definitions should enable Mr. Cowell to decide the points he mentions. In the two cases he cites the birds are unevenly-marked. He is quite right in stating that a ticked bird can have only one technical mark. The Mule recently under discussion was two-pointed (evenly marked on both wings); if it were marked on the body it could not be two-pointed. A three or five-pointed bird cannot possibly be "evenly-marked."—Editor.

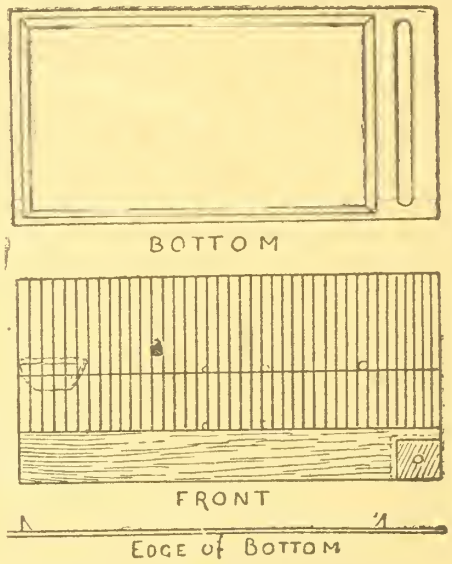
How I Treat my Canaries during the Breeding Season.



By J. I. MACKIE. (Edinburgh).

A Lecture delivered before the members and friends of the Loanhead and District C.B.S. on March 11th.

Mr. Chairman and brother fanciers,—Needless to say, I am delighted to be present to-night and to give you my mode of procedure during the breeding season. At the same time, I cannot understand what tempted your worthy secretary to ask me, as I feel sure he might have selected a more influential and popular breeder than I. However, if I can assist you or pass along any suggestions worthy of your consideration and trial, I shall feel amply rewarded.

Cages and Accessories Considered.

So much appears in the Fancy Press and otherwise nowadays that lecturers and writers of articles feel, as I have felt, that it is difficult to know how to proceed and how to serve up anything quite new and original. I have, however, decided to depart for a moment from my text or title and deal with the matter of the cages and accessories of the bird-room.

Details of Mr. Mackie's All-wire Cage.

During the winter evenings I am either overhauling old cages or making new ones, as I consider it essential to have all in perfect readiness for breeding operations to begin: I do not consider it at all advisable to be messing about the bird-room, doing repairs, etc., when breeding has been begun; a certain amount of quietness is undoubtedly desirable at such a period. I may, too, at this point state that I do not believe in having many visitors to the bird-room when the breeding is in full swing.

I have brought with me one of my cages, so that I may convey to your minds more clearly how it is made and the various advantages it possesses. I am not, it should be noted, criticising other cages which fanciers may use with equally as good results. As you will observe, it is an all-wire cage, with a sliding door at each end and one in front, the seed box cover and bottom being movable. I use the double-holed nest board. The size of the breeding cage over all is 22 inches long, 10 inches wide, and 11 inches high; it is simplicity itself. I know the ideas introduced in the cage are by no means original, for I have personally traced the idea back for three generations in one family of fanciers, with probably several minor alterations.

I have several reasons for using and recommending this cage to you. It is very easily cleaned, and offers no encouragement to our friends (?) the red mites. I have, I may add, successfully reared all varieties of the Border Fancy, also Norwich and Mules, in these cages, my total last season being somewhere about 80.

So much, then, for the cages. Having them all in order, I affix, by means of a piece of cage wire, a piece of cardboard to the end of the cage; this answers a double purpose: it divides each cage, and does for writing the proceedings on of the pair which occupy the cage for the season. As time permits, I transfer the particulars off these various cardboards into my register, which is kept for future reference. I have also a piece of cuttle fish bone tied on a wire at the back of the cage, at a height which the birds can comfortably get at, and sufficient to do the whole season. I also tie a piece of string to the top of the cage near the front; I unravel the end, which I find keeps the hens in amusement, and is also a preventative of plucking their young.

Introducing the Birds.

All cages in readiness, I put the hen, about the last week in March, in the cage allotted to her, having previously cut her tail, also the loose feather at vent, which gives her more freedom, and insures cleanliness in her plumage. I place the hen's partner at the end of the breeding cage in his own cage, which is 14 inches by 7 inches by 10 inches in size; in this position they become better acquainted, and will soon be observed feeding, and talking love. I allow this to go on for several days, or even longer, until I observe the hen wishing to nest, and crying for her partner. I then introduce him, and as a rule they usually agree well.

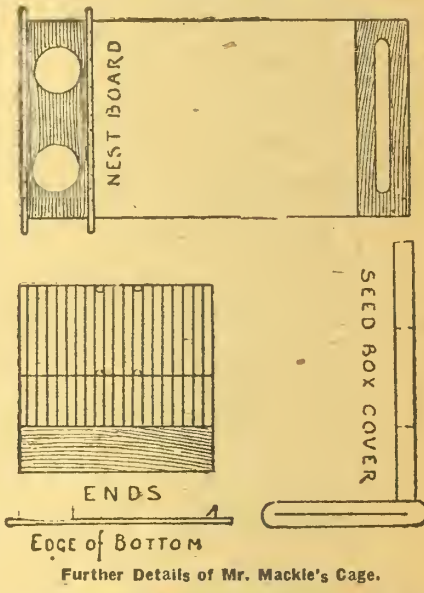
I make an allowance of half a teaspoonful of egg-food per bird every day, which is composed of three crushed Osborne biscuits and one hard-boiled egg. I endeavour as far as possible to have several pairs set up at one time, so that in the event of any casualties or disappointments, I can depend on one or other of the pairs. I remove the eggs as laid and substitute dummies, setting the hen on the evening of the day on which she lays her third egg, taking care to enter particulars on cardboard. I also mark on the face of the cage with chalk the date the young are due, this being constantly and conspiciously before me. I am not then so much indebted to my memory.

Humouring the Hens.

I allow the cock bird to remain with the hen while she is sitting her first round, feeding only on plain canary seed; unless, of course, I wish to run him with another hen. Some hens don't care about their partner being taken away, and, like human beings, have to be somewhat humoured. I have usually found, however, that she takes to her duties better in the morning, having to go to the nest to deposit her fourth egg. Again, we find that some cocks are rather forward and are continually molesting the hen, and consequently have to suffer separation. These irregularities do crop up, and have to be dealt with according to circumstances.

On the thirteenth morning I supply egg food—just a small quantity to begin with. Thereafter I usually supply egg food four times daily—at 5.30 o'clock a.m., nine o'clock a.m., one o'clock p.m., and six o'clock p.m.

Dandelion is my favourite green food. I start supplying the hens with same after the young are three or four days old. I also give plenty of crushed hemp seed separately, and a sprinkling of rape seed in the egg food at midday, and a sprinkling of maw seed in the evening egg food. I never give green food after midday. When the young are about ten days old, I give them a new nest, well sprinkled with Keating's powder.



About this time the nest board gets somewhat dirty with the youngsters' droppings. I usually clean the board every evening—just lifting with a knife the dirt which is lying around the nest. I sometimes find the hen is somewhat out of sorts when the young are about a week old; I have, however, found that a slight spray and a drink of salts do a lot of good.

I let the young remain with the hen until she has laid the third egg of her second round, when I remove the cock with the young, allowing him to remain with them until the young of the second round are several days old; by this time the first brood are usually doing for themselves.

The third round is carried on in the same fashion, with the exception that I endeavour to get the hen to rear the last young herself. Three nests per hen is my allotted number from each; in fact, sometimes less, according to the condition of the hen.

While I have mentioned dandelion as my favourite food, I only use it when it is young and tender; thereafter I have recourse to lettuce; the same applies here with leaves only about two or four inches long, as I find my birds feed and eat off these with great avidity. I also give chickweed and mouse ear—the nice seeding stuff. I never supply green food to the young after they have left their parents.

I have never been unfortunate enough to have an egg-bound hen, but I believe in the use of olive oil, applied to the beak and vent in such emergencies, having found this treatment successful in the case of a hen belonging to a fancier of my acquaintance.

Further Details of Mr. Mackie's Cage.

I never give niger seed to my birds. I once tried it, and I had the impression that my birds were the worse for it. I have also found that fanciers who use it have egg-bound hens galore. It is stated by some that niger seed is a preventative of egg-binding; my impression, however, is that if the seed is used, the utmost discretion should be exercised in its use. Personally, I get my "better half" to keep all the egg shells used for household purposes; these are put in a tin and placed in the oven and thoroughly dried; they are then easily broken up, which I serve up to birds among their sand regularly every week.

Here is a hint which I got from a friend, which may be passed along; by placing a ring (a curtain ring will do) below the salvage edge of the nests before putting the nest into the board, it allows the droppings of the young to go clear of the nest on to the board; they are then more easily cleared, and it keeps the nest much fresher.

I understand that you are all expert nest-makers out here, but I may be allowed to suggest to you that the addition of a weak solution of Jeyes' Fluid and glue may be added with success to the water in which you soak the felt previous to putting it in the block.

I usually wash out my cages thoroughly once a week, adding Jeyes' Fluid to the water, thus insuring strict cleanliness and a refreshing smell; in fact, I know a fancier who supplies it regularly in the drinking water of his birds. It will be found to keep the water pure and free from germs. But the greatest care will need to be taken in the matter of the quantity mixed with the water; a much safer antiseptic to use with drinking water or washing drinkers is permanganate of potash, or Condy's Fluid, which gives no smell and keeps the water fresh, which otherwise is liable to become contaminated with dirt where a large stock is kept. I use these two drugs myself in large quantities.

No. 1: The Bearded Tit.

No doubt some amongst the many thousands of readers of Cage Birds may wonder why these articles are to begin again. Do you remember the story of Dr. Vaughan and flogging? Something was said about flogging in public schools. Dr. Vaughan was once flogging a young nobleman, who, not being used to such rough treatment, presently got up and asked the headmaster how many cuts he was going to give. Vaughan replied in his most mellifluous voice: "That is for me to decide, Lord F., kneel down again." Apply this little fable to yourselves. The Editor has asked me to write an article weekly for Cage Birds. It is for him to decide; for me to obey. The number of cuts is to rest with him—I beg your pardon, the number of articles.

I am going to begin with a very interesting little bird, the Bearded Tit. These birds are only to be obtained at one time of the year—the autumn—when they are fairly cheap; coming over from the Continent in considerable numbers. The price is usually about fifteen shillings a pair, though I have seen them offered as low as ten shillings; but this will be for ragged and pecked about specimens. Usually they get their tails both frayed and broken, so that the first thing I do is to pull out the stumps and begin afresh. It only takes about six weeks to grow a beautiful new tail, and I don't like to see a bird going about with a stump.

Last year I got hold of a particularly perfect pair; indeed, the cock was the finest specimen I ever saw, and in perfect show form. The hen was a little pecked about and deficient in flights, but otherwise quite healthy. She could not fly, however, so I arranged a lot of branches in her house, rising gradually from the floor, so that she could scramble up them and so get out of danger of mice and draughts. In a month she got her new flights and could fly as well as the cock.

Regular Love Birds.

These birds are very affectionate, and are always to be seen sitting side by side, preening each other's heads in the most affectionate and embarrassing way to a mere human onlooker. They always remind me of a pair of very newly engaged lovers!

Bearded Tits, in fact, have never nested successfully in captivity, but I determined that I would try and make them. It is always my ambition to do what somebody else has never done. I made the aviary as attractive as possible from a Bearded Tit's point of view, and even succeeded in getting some tall bulrushes which I arranged in, what I thought, a most scientific manner along one side of the sleeping house. Now, I thought to myself, if that doesn't attract you, nothing will.

The Tits seemed deeply interested in my plans, and the moment I cleared out they were creeping and climbing all up and down the rushes, like a couple of mice. This went on for a long time, but nothing came of it. I determined to try another plan. I fixed up an ordinary German Canary cage and covered it with twigs and made a hay nest in it. I did not think much of my handiwork, but in the bird world it is always the unlooked for that happens. It was so in this case. The Tits took to the makeshift at once, and were hardly ever out of it, sitting side by side like a couple of small owls.

One day I saw a regular hunt going on, the cock pursuing the hen all over the place; twisting and turning and doubling in the most wonderful manner. It was evidently the lady that was leading him on. I thought at once of the old, old story of the young lady who was told to write an essay on the Fall of Man and commenced in these words: "Man was born and lived in innocence, but he"—at this point she was suddenly called into another room. Dean Swift coming in, found the MS. and added the words—"ere long fell in with woman, and she—." It was so here, man had fallen in with the woman, and the result was the same as usual—she was leading him on. Woman, you know, as the schoolboy said to the examiner, was made a little after man, and she has been after him ever since.

For a few days the chase continued; and then things began to settle down. I saw the cock carrying bits of hay about, and any feathers he could find, and about a week later I noticed him sitting close near the cage, and the head of the hen just visible within. Of course, if I had been curious I should have frightened her off and had a peep, but not being a fool, I did nothing of the sort, but refrained my soul in patience. If you meddle with nests you are always sorry for it—afterwards. A Roman Catholic priest on the Congo once told a legend he laughed much over, of how a fellow priest had enterprisingly settled himself one night in the middle of a Bilbi village with intent to devote the remainder of his life to quietly but thoroughly converting it. Next morning, when he rose up, he found himself alone; the people having taken all their portable possessions and vanished, to build another village elsewhere. The worthy Father spent some time in chevying his flock about the forest, but in vain, and he returned home disgusted, deciding that the Creator had for some wise purpose dedicated the Bubis to the devil.

I have often seen the story illustrated in the birdroom; the zealous owner, like the priest chevies his flock about, and then wonders why they desert their nests. I don't!

Joy Unrestrained.

About ten days after I first saw the hen on the nest, I happened one morning to go into the aviary to feed, and I noticed the hen was off feeding. I slipped quietly across and took a hasty look. The cage was about on a level with my eyes, and to my intense joy I saw there were three or four eggs laid. I knew this must be about the complement, so I carefully watched to see if she was going to sit. Alas, I soon found she was not. She hardly ever went near the cage, though the cock sat and called her diligently. I knew that I must quickly do something or the eggs would be ruined. My only hope was to find a nest.

I went out into the garden and had a good look round, and after a time I was fortunate enough to find a Green Linnet's nest in a big thorn bush. The next thing was to get a ladder and see what it contained. This was soon done, and to my joy I found three newly laid eggs, not yet begun to be incubated. I quickly returned to the birdroom and took the Tit's eggs and carried them as quickly as possible to the Linnet's nest, and deposited them therein. I came back in the evening, and to my great joy I found the owner on the nest.

My only fear now was that some stray cat would climb up and find the nest. Fortunately this did not happen, but at the end of ten days I began to get uneasy. Supposing the Greenfinch did hatch but did not feed right, all my work would be ruined. After hours of agonising indecision, I determined to take the eggs and transfer them to a Hedge Sparrow's nest I had found. I did so, and fortunately the owner did not object, but went on setting as if nothing had happened, in spite of the difference in the eggs.

On the right morning I went and looked. As I came near the bird had slipped off the nest, and to my joy I saw two ugly bluish little birds in the nest, like an unshaved chin, and holding up great goggle heads, on a very thin and weedy neck. Again my fear was cats, as the nest was in a low bramble bush, but once more the gods were propitious. For about four days the little beggars lived. I can't say they thrived, for although I tried to think so I saw that they remained horribly thin and cadaverous. Evidently the hen did not feed them, or she did not give them the right sort of food. Hour after hour they grew visibly weaker, the heads waggled more and more feebly, and at last when I went at night they had ceased to waggle, and at the bottom of the nest lay two leaden coloured little corpses.

All Blinds Drawn.

Gloom, deep and sepulchral, as of Phlegethon, settled down on my spirit. I tried to think I had not done wrong in taking those eggs. Things might have been so different if I had left them with the Linnet. I suppose the only wonder was they had lived so long. The dinner that killed the Duke of Wellington was a cold pie and salad. I picked out the corpses gingerly with a pair of pincers and held them up to view. They were not exactly inviting—dreadfully emaciated. The saying of John Fisher, journeyman carpenter, came back to me, who, when he saw the bust of Voltaire in the Cambridge Library, said, "Kinder sickly like, isn't he?"

And now for a brief description of the Bearded Tit. The body colour is a delicate fawn, merging to yellowish white beneath; the wing coverts are tinged with black, as are the tail feathers, and the under coverts are quite black. The beak is yellow and the throat and neck nearly white, which shows off to great advantage the beautiful black moustache. The total length of the bird is, I should say, about six inches, of which the tail occupies four. The hen has no moustache, and her tints are far less distinct and delicate.

Bearded Tits do well in a cage of fair size and of the box pattern, but I think it is cruel to keep such active little things in a cage at all—an aviary, to my mind, is the only place for them. I have often thought that if I were very rich I would contruct a big outdoor aviary with a pond and growing reeds, and then I have little doubt that my friends would sit and rear their young successfully on the minute aquatic insects they would be able to catch and which always hover over water. As I never shall be rich, I don't suppose my plan will come off, but I give it away to some more fortunate brother.

Bearded Tits do well on any ordinary good soft mixture, but they are very fond of mealworms, and some of these must be supplied daily if you wish to keep them in form. They will eat maggots, but, as the American hunter said of "crow," they don't hanker after it. They are exceedingly fond of bathing, and in hot weather are taking baths more or less all day.

They are rather fond of hemp seed and eat it like all Tits, but I am not sure if it is very good for them.

I have found that my Bearded Tits usually die suddenly, I expect of fits. They make lovely corpses, as the old farmer's wife said of her Rouen drake when he died. To some even this may be a consideration. For my own part, I do not care for stuffed specimens, so I always give them decent burial.

THE PURPLE-CAPPED LORY.

A love'y and interesting member of the Parrot family exhibited at the Horticultural Hall (L.C.B.A.) Show by Mr. T Miller (London, S.W.), where it was very highly commended.

The Linnet in Captivity

By J. H. O'NEILE.

Linnets are nice Britishers, though admittedly not so bright or handsome as Master Goldie, my favourite. I had the honour of being second at the Palace with one in a class of 42. They are, I think, more delicately constituted than the Goldie, but when they get over the first touch of house sickness they go on well in confinement, and if it were for their song only they would be well worth keeping.

Treatment of Fresh-caught Birds.

When I get fresh-caught Linnets I treat them the same as the Goldies. That is to say, I give hemp, Canary, teazel, flax, cracked sunflower, etc.; and a good supply of clean sand, which they enjoy very much. Only I give them in addition cabbage, gold of pleasure and plantain, charlock, etc.

When I notice any of them taken sick I at once give in the drinking water as much Epsom Salts as you would lift twice on the blade of a penknife—a threepenny or sixpenny piece is the usual measure, but the knife is sometimes more handy.

Breeding.

In breeding with the Linnet I have found no trouble with them. I refer more especially to breaking the eggs. The Linnet is a much more docile bird than the Goldie, and mates readily with the Canary. The young are also easily reared, and make what many consider the best songster to be had, either trained under the Linnet or Canary.

In moulting for show, I induce the Linnet to bathe. If you fail in this you will require to spray the bird. When moulting the birds for show the only extra I give in addition to the seeds and screenings (the latter may always be had of farmers, who will be only too glad to get rid of them), is a plentiful supply of the weed known as "rat's tails"; this has the tendency to enhance the colour of Linnets, and is, I believe, the best means of getting Linnets the sound brown colour so much looked for when on the show bench.

A Splendid Seed.

Flax seed I also find is splendid for the Linnet. It is the flax that gives the finishing touch in the shape of a nice glossy coat. I always give my Linnets a good supply of this.

I use the same stock cage for Linnets as for Goldies, and find they do well in them. This consists of a cage made on the breeding-cage principle, but 18 inches long, 12 inches high and 9 inches wide. This gives the birds plenty of room and allows you to have two perches a third can be made on the trough. My breeding cages, I may say, are of pine-wood, and are 12 inches high, 11 inches from back to front, and 24 inches long, being finished inside with enamel.

The Sexes.

Now, as to the sexes: The cock Linnet is a much bolder bird than the hen, better marked (though not in all cases) on the breast; and if he is an over-year bird, if you turn up the breast feather, you will see a red hue that is not in the hen. The hen is, if anything, not so full in the head and brows as the cock, and shows no sign of the red referred to. If in doubt, hold over until they sing. Any friend would lend you a singing Linnet, and if you have good healthy cocks in your stock you will soon pick out the cocks from the hens.

A lecture was given by Mr. Rouse, of Heywood, on March 1, on "British Birds and their Eggs," before a very good attendance of members and friends. After the lecturer had finished a good number of questions were asked and answered in a very straight-forward manner. A most interesting meeting closed with a vote of thanks to the lecturer for his kindness in coming. Fanciers, don't forget April 5, when a lecture will be given on the Yorkshire Canary, by Mr. E. Faulkner, the well-known breeder and exhibitor of that variety.—E. Hartley, Hon. Sec.

At the close the questions came thick and fast, keeping him busy until a late hour. Everyone felt he had spent a most profitable and enjoyable evening. Mr. Tringham was accorded a most hearty vote of thanks, to which he briefly replied.—W. Hodson, Hon. Sec.

WINDHILL, SHIPLEY & DIS. O.S.

A very good attendance of members and friends heard Mr. P. Mason lecture on the pairing and breeding of the Yorkshire Canary at headquarters, Blue Bell Hotel, March 18th. The first subject was: How to keep the hens in condition; then, what kind of birds to breed with for mark breeding. The lecture was very interesting to all present. The subject was thrown open for discussion. Several questions were asked, especially by novices, who were eager to learn. Mr. Mason dealt with the questions in first-class style, and gave satisfaction to all. The Chairman (Mr. W. B. Atkinson) called upon Mr. R. Garnett to propose a vote of thanks. Mr. G. congratulated Mr. Mason on being the first member to have the courage to lecture to his own society. Mr. W. Rushworth seconded the vote. Mr. Grange, secretary of Manningham C.B.A., responded. Mr. Mason replied that he was glad to see so many present, and thanked them for their kind attention.—J. Cook, Sec.

SCOTTISH CRESTED C.C.

Annual general meeting held Nelson's Temperance Hotel, Ingram Street, Glasgow, 11th March, Mr. Noble occupying chair before a good attendance of members. Balance sheet next submitted, showing a small balance on right side. This was, however, under the circumstances considered satisfactory and passed accordingly. Club gold and silver medals were then distributed by President to the successful exhibitors present, when each received hearty congratulations, with expressions of "more to follow." A motion (in writing) was forwarded from Mr. Cairns (Edinburgh), asking the meeting to consider the advisability of improving in some way the present club drinker tin, this being backed up by a similar suggestion from Mr. W. McNaughton (Larbert). A discussion followed, in which several of the members expressed their opinion as to the drawbacks of the present drinker; unanimously agreed, that members be asked to send on to Secretary suggestions or designs to be considered at first Committee meeting some time in May. Mr. Campbell moved, supported by Mr. Cram, that the minute in relation to "Club Novice" be rescinded and the following substituted: "A novice shall mean a person who has never won a first prize in open competition previous to Club's A.G.M. (March, 1911)." This ultimately became the finding of the meeting. The following gentlemen were duly proposed and elected to membership, viz.: Messrs. R. Lambie (Whitburn), J. Shanks, Jr. (Coatbridge), and D. Barrie (Croy). This being all the business, a cordial vote of thanks to Chairman concluded meeting. New members are now being enrolled, and I trust all interested in the Crested Canary will join us in furthering the interests of the variety north of the Tweed.—John Young, Hon. Sec. and Treas.

BURY AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held March 14th, Y.M.C.A. A good attendance. Decided, to hold F. F. Show July 1st, and the Rev. R. P. Hudson, M.A., our President, be asked to judge. DERWENT VALLEY C.B.S.

Meeting held Church Hall, Hamstley, March 18, Mr. G. Barkas in chair. There was a fair turn out of members. Mr. A. Brown (Gateshead) was engaged to judge the Canary classes at open show, Oct. 28. Decided to hold a first feather show, June 24, and to have same classes as last year, the sec. to write a few judges for terms, which will be dealt with next meeting, April 1. We enrolled a new member (Mr. H. Nicholson, Westwood), and will be very pleased to enrol a few more at April meeting. We are sorry our hon. sec., Mr. Lindsay, could not attend meeting owing to an operation which he has undergone, but we are pleased to hear he is on the mending side.—Wm. March, Asst. Sec.

COVENTRY O.S.

At meeting held March 15th a presentation was made by the President (Mr. G. Peters) to Mr. J. Shaddock, who was secretary during 1910. It took the shape of a silver cigarette case, suitably inscribed. Mr. Peters remarked the pleasure it gave him to make Mr. Shaddock a small acknowledgment for his good temper and geniality during the past year, and the way in which he had conducted the business of the Society. Mr. Shaddock in accepting the beautiful present, said that he hardly knew what he had done to deserve it, adding that he had received pleasure in the business of the Society. At some future time, when not pressed so much by his business, he would, if asked, be delighted to take up the duties of secretary again. —A. J. Barratt, Hon. Sec.

BRIGHOUSE & DISTRICT C.B.S.

Annual general meeting held Mar. 14, Wellington Inn, President, Mr. H. Stake, in chair. A good number of members were present. Balance sheet read and passed unanimously, showing the society to be in a good position financially, despite the heavy loss at the last open show. Decided, to hold meetings at Wellington Inn the next twelve months; also to alter meeting night to Monday in place of Tuesday. Election of officers: President, A. Dearden; vice-presidents, J. Tattersall and J. E. Hargreaves; secretary, F. Mitchell; assist. secretary, J. B. Saunders; treasurer, H. Kaye; auditors, N. Sykes, and Sykes, and A. Gill. A hearty vote of thanks to the retiring officers, proposed by Mr. C Morrison, seconded by Mr. A. Dearden, and responded to by the late president, bringing a very pleasant meeting to a close.—F. Mitchell, Hon. Sec.

NEWCASTLE C.B.S.

Annual social, whist drive, and dance, held Mar. 9, when a large company of members and friends spent a very enjoyable evening. We started with a whist drive till 9.30, and the fortunate winners of 1st prizes happened to be Mr. and Mrs. Taylor, father and mother of one of the committee—a most remarkable coincidence. Mrs. T. Robson won the lady's sealed prize, and Mr. Gill the gentleman's sealed prize. Mr. J. Atkinson presented the prizes, 1st gent's being a handsome umbrella, 1st lady's a silk blouse; gent's sealed, an aero muffler; lady's sealed, an umbrella. After supper we had dancing till 1 o'clock, which came only too soon. The music by Mr. Saunders was of the sort which cannot be resisted: Messrs. Reed and Partner gave a very fine banjo duet, which was greatly appreciated. Messrs. Taylor, Potts, Bertram, Petterson, and Atkinson were M.C's. and carried all arrangements through in a very able manner.—J. E. Atkinson, Sec.

Thompson (Hyde), and A. Wellings, jun. (Prescot) become members. Mr. F. Hamer was also proposed as a member. There is still room for more. Owing to balance sheet not being quite complete, it was decided to have a special meeting at Glossop, April 1st, Messrs. Fuller and Oliver to make all arrangements. Owing to the Treasurer (Mr. J. Swalwell) going holiday-making to America early in April, the presentation of prizes will be later than usual; all arrangements for same will be made at Glossop. Hearty wishes to Mr. Swalwell for a safe and enjoyable holiday. Vote of thanks given Mr. Garner, as chairman, concluded meeting. Ramsden's special: J. Rukin 3 points, J. Dewsnap 2, V. J. SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

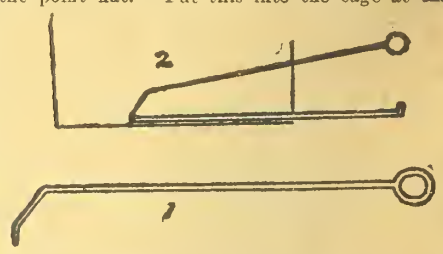
Meeting held Fawcett Street Cafe, March 18th, Mr. W. F. Swan presiding over good attendance. A letter and petition form received from the Hon. Secs. of the National British Bird and Mule Club was read; agreed, to sign petition, the members expressing their sympathy with its objects. I shall be glad to receive suggestions from members with a view to making our meetings more instructive and entertaining, and to promote the interests of our Association. A hearty invitation is given to fanciers in the town to join; entrance fee 1s., annual sub. 5s.—J. Jeffrey, Hon. Sec.

YORKSHIRE C.B.S. OF IRELAND

Meeting of Council, held Mar. 13th, Douglas Hotel, Eden Quay, Mr. W. Sheridan presiding. Present, Messrs. Fry, Lynch, McDonnell, Callaghan, Holley, Rooney, and the Hon. Sec. It was brought to the notice of the Council that the society's dates of annual show clashed with Banbridge, i.e., 9th and 10th November, so it was decided to revert to the old dates of last year, Nov. 2nd and 3rd. The election of chairman resulted in Mr. Holley being elected unanimously. Mr. Holley acted as vice-chairman last session, therefore his election came as a precedent, the office of chairman existing only for one season. Six new members were elected.—D. Carrall, Hon. Sec.

CITY AND SUBURBAN A.C.B.

Meeting, March 13th, at the Church Institute, 60, Paddington Street, Mr. A. C. Burn in the chair. Letters were read from Messrs. F. Oldaker, J. W. Ramsden, Mrs. Symonds W. Quantrell and Sec. London Federation. Messrs. J. Lethbridge, A. J. Durrant, and S. Palmer were nominated, and Mr. H. Armstrong was elected a member. A letter of thanks was directed to Mr. F. A. Tebbs for gift of a handsome silver plated teapot, for the Novice Canary section. This teapot elicited very favourable comment, as it was handed round for inspection. Mr. Sanders (delegate to the London Federation), gave a report of Council meeting, and it was carried that the said report be adopted. Instructions were given to the two Federation delegates to bring forward at their next meeting various matters of general importance, which the C. and S. members had previously discussed. The following London Federation officers were elected: Chairman, F. Boxall; trustees, A. C. Burn and J. Dewhurst; auditors, H. W. Cook and W. Mugford; assistant secretary, J. C. Birch; secretary, P. Adamthwaite. A discussion on "Anomalies of Nationality," opened by Mr. C. Prior, then took place, followed by Messrs. G. Crabb, W. Page, C. Botting, A. W. Curtis, and W. Copeland (not time for others to take part). A letter was read from Mr. Frostick, expressing his regret at being absent, and sending his views upon this important subject. The chairman (Mr. A. C. Burn) then rose to bid farewell to Mr. C. Prior upon his leaving London for Hampshire. Tracing Mr. Prior's career from the time he joined till the present day, Mr. Burn then travelled over his public career on the show bench, and followed this by a reference to the incalculable assistance he had rendered to the secretary, finishing up with dramatic intensity by giving an outline of his gift of oratory, charm of manner, buoyant spirits, and, above all, his extreme modesty. The chairman (Mr. A. C. Burn), created a profound impression by his sincere and masterly speech, considered the finest speech ever delivered from the chair upon such an occasion. Mr. Prior, with suppressed emotion, replied with his usual modesty and charm. A vote of thanks to the chairman closed the meeting.—V. Wynn, Hon. Sec.

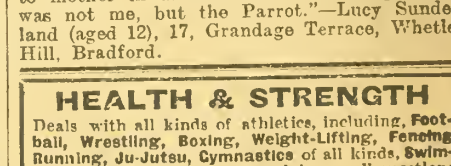


ASHTON-U-LYNE & DIST. O.S.

A lecture on the Yorkshire Canary was given on Mar. 14, by Mr. H. Foden. He explained that though often asked he could not summon up courage to give lecture, but as he is leaving us to go to Canada, he felt compelled to do so. Go to a well-known and successful breeder for your birds; give him a free hand to select pairs to the price you are able to pay, or, if choosing on your own, get birds with plenty of length, well up on legs, tight in feather, good round head. The old style was best, viz., yellow cock and buff hen, or vice versa. The cock has influence over offspring. Cannot agree with new idea that hen is everything. Best birds bred from typical yellow cock and hens which had not successfully bred exhibition birds, though paired to good partners. Offspring winners of many firsts and other awards. April, or at least last week in March, soon enough getting ready; egg food twice a week. Hens, inga twice a week; good seed mixture twice a week; 1lb. Gold of Pleasure, ¼ maw, ¼ teazel, 1 German rape, ¼ hemp, 1 linseed, 1 inga; little green food; no hemp. loose for Yorks. If getting fat give Epsom salts in water, one dose, and a course of treacle and water in drinker. Likes double breeder, 36in. long, 16in. high, 10in. deep. Plenty of grit and shell (oyster). Put hen in compartment she is to nest in. Expect first egg 7 to 14 days. Remover eggs to evening of 3rd day. Dust nest well with insect powder. Book date to hatch —13 to 14 days. On 12th day put eggs in lukewarm water; on 13th day give a little egg food—not particular, biscuit or bread; thinks biscuit is best for Yorks. Mix food: egg through mill first, then biscuit, then together. Good tip: add 1 teaspoonful ground rice. Young hatched—yolk egg and biscuit. 2nd day watercress or dandelion, dry. Six weeks put in flight. Watch promising birds, and get to training. Hang on show cage, training to position; most important. Must stand up at once for judge. He promised to give a lecture about first Tuesday in April on Moulting, Washing, and Staging. Use plenty of cuttlefish. Does not like egg-shells (fowls). "Tails" Yorkshires when half through moult; advantages—2nd stronger; 1st frayed, 2nd neat; also adds to length. If small cock, large hen, and vice versa. Does not like double-buffs, filled up, coarse feathers, rough on thigh. Double yellow, snipy head, thin neck. Believes in two separate strains, giving good cocks from one, and good hens from other, with size, and pairs 1 and 2, and vice versa. Mix colour food 2 to start, up to 4, with one of Canary seed mixed with coloured food; takes seed box off. Tonic during moult: 1 gill port, 4lb. honey, 3d. common citrate of iron, dissolve honey in hot water, add port and citrate, and simmer till compounded. Bottle, and will keep long time. Put in drinker to port colour, or 2 tablespoons to colour food. Fixing colour: sulphate of iron. Frills may be taken out, but best breed them out. Rum and saffron good for "stuck in moult." Trim feathers round vent when pairing. Vote of thanks moved by J. Whitehead, seconded by J. McFarlane.—J. R. Colville, Sec.

Illustrated Ideas

No. 492.
To Pull Out Sand-drawers.
Sent by Mr. A. Finlayson, 173, Dundas Street, Grangemouth.



Here is an idea which I think will be of great value to fanciers for pulling out sand-drawers. Get a stout piece of wire 2ft. 6in. long and bend with pliers (as in Fig. 1), filing the point flat. Put this into the cage at the end, and catch drawer (as in Fig. 2), which comes out quite easily, and saves many a cage from being spoilt by having no end on drawer. You can also clean out anything that is left after drawer is out without causing any fright to the birds. A trial of this will show its true value.—Alex. Finlayson.

No. 493.
A Nest-board Convenience.
Sent by Mr. W. Liddell Tonkin, 7, Fore Street, Bodmin.

I am fitting new nest boards to my breeding cages, and thought this idea might interest some of the readers of Cage Birds. The hole is cut 1in. diam.—bigger than the nest pan. A ring of cage wire is then fitted by three hooks into the board, the wire ring being just the size to take the pan; the advantage being that a space of ¼in. is left between the nest pan and the board, so that all the excreta from the young birds will fall to the bottom of the cage, and can be cleaned out in the ordinary way, instead of being allowed to lodge on the board, and to become a harbour for red mite, etc.—W. Liddell Tonkin.

The Young Naturalist.

Prizes of 1s. and two of 6d. each will be given weekly for the best three anecdotes about birds written on postcards. Competitors must be under sixteen years of age, and state whence stories are taken. Two stars indicate the Winning Contribution; one star the runners-up.

*Curious Nesting Place.

A pair of Blackbirds built a nest on the ledge of a lamp post at a railway station. Trains stopped beside it every day, and the lamp was lit every night, and although the nest was in full view of all the passengers the birds showed no fear whatever.—May MacKenna (age 13), Railway Street, Strabane, Ireland.

A Birdie Mission.

All day we flit across your view,
Brown, black, or crimson-breasted;
Yellow, or blue, or speckled hue,
Purple or golden crested.

We do our best to please your eye,
With colours brightly blending,
With fairy motion gliding by,
Or angel-like ascending.

All day we strive to charm your ear,
With concert of sweet singing;
And even when the stars appear
We keep the copses ringing.

At times we waken in your heart
A thrill of soft emotion;
And into world-worn spirits dart
An impulse of devotion.

[Sent in by Mary Ford, "Daphne," Elmi Avenue, Eastbourne.] Age 13.

*A Parrot Story.

Some time ago a gentleman friend and my father were in the midst of an exciting birdy conversation. We have an amusing Parrot who is a very good talker. My mother and I both sat listening to the conversation. I noticed Polly intently listening too. The gentlemen at last grew exhausted and paused awhile for breath, when Polly shouted out in a loud voice, "Liars"! Mr. Greaves turned round to mother in amazement but she replied "It was not me, but the Parrot."—Lucy Sunderland (aged 12), 17, Grandage Terrace, Whetley Hill, Bradford.

GARSTON B.B.A.

Very interesting and successful British Bird Show held, and usual monthly meeting, March 16th, Baptist Schoolrooms, Earp Street. Judge, Mr. James Bretherton (Liverpool). After usual business and the cards placed. Mr. Bretherton invited questions concerning any of the birds, an opportunity immediately siezed upon. I have no doubt that in the preparation of our pets for the forthcoming breeding and show season, our members will take advantage of the many useful hints so freely given by so able and experienced a British bird enthusiast. Mr. D. Griffiths, in a few appropriate words, thanked Mr. Bretherton for his services, Mr. Bretherton suitably responding.

Under the White Rose.

BIRD life seems to be very scarce at present; at least, in some places. I had a few hours out a recent week-end through districts that are generally teeming with bird life, but a few Robins were all the reward for my journey. Others had evidently gone on foraging expeditions.

WITH the advent of the milder weather we are in the throes of Spring cleaning. Cages are looking bad for wear. The whitewash and the paint brushes will have to have their turn to prepare the cages for the breeding season, which will now very soon be upon us. My word, how time does fly! To me it seems very little time since the last breeding season finished. What hopes the Spring brings to everybody, but more particularly to the breeder—something to look forward to, and, when over, something to look back upon.

LEEDS C.B.S. have handed to me their syllabus for 1911. In addition, it contains a list of the members' names and addresses. This feature is very useful, as many a time when you are out and you think there is a fancier about, if you have the address you can give him a look-up. A fancier is always welcome to a fancier's home. There is a good list of members' shows and lectures, etc., and a capital array of specials for the members' shows. Altogether the society appears to be making excellent headway. They have close on seventy members, and they usually have some rattling good entries at members' shows. I also note that the date of their annual open show is October 15th, with Messrs. Bailey and Roe as judges.

"Straight 'Un."

NORTH LONDON C.B.A.

British and Foreign Bird Show held headquarters, Public Library, Stoke Newington, March 15th, when about 70 exhibits faced the judge. As usual, the exhibits were staged down one side of the room, and proved yet another record for this Association. The hall was crowded the whole evening which was very gratifying to the officials, and proves how popular these evening shows have become; they result in nominations being handed in at each meeting. Mr. A. Silver judged.

NEW CROSS AND DIST. C.B.S.

In addition to ordinary monthly meeting, we held a British show. The show, although rather small, was in all respects very successful, the majority of the birds being staged in lovely condition. We have obtained three new members in one week, viz., Messrs. Fromont, Lewcock, and Gunnell, all well-known members. Mr. Hill judged to the satisfaction of everyone. An outing has been arranged for 7th May at Hildenboro'. Mr. Robson has kindly consented to give us a lecture on "How to become a successful Canary breeder," and Mr. A. Silver a lecture in the near future; so I hope we shall gain considerably moro members. Mr. Hill in his remarks congratulated the Society on the quality of the birds staged, also stating that most of the birds were a credit to their respective owners.

Mater (Warrington), 61; 4, D. Banks (Howe Bridge), 60. Judges for quality, Messrs. W. H. Topping, W. Barnes and J. W. Jones; for time, Messrs. J. Ellison, and J. Poole (Leigh). Timekeeper, Mr. J. Yates (Leigh). Birdman, Mr. J. March. I hope to be able to say in our next report that the contest we are running at the Union Arms, Tyldesley, on Mar. 25th, beat all previous records.—J. The Universal Double Breeding Cages, 5/3 are the popular and ideal cages used by prominent breeders and exhibitors. Buying breeding cages entails a comparatively small expenditure, but requires consideration. Those cages must be sound and well built to give you the satisfaction you have every right to expect. See for yourselves just the cages you have in mind, and at the price within your reach. Make your decision as the result of your best judgment. Ours are expert joiner-made, backs, sides, tops, bottoms in one piece, with a finish like glass, size 36 by 16 by 11, punch bar fronts, sliding partition, French polished or black outside, blue enamel inside, complete 5/3; a most elaborate cage. Dr. Stott, "Lotus," Worthing, writes: Thanks for sending cage; very pleased indeed with it; quite satisfactory. Mr. J. MEASLES are very popular in some districts, but the most popular thing in this district are the birds and bird rooms owned by E. L. Storey. There are no birds just like them, none just as good, nor are there any as cheap. When I say cheap, I do not wish you to think I am selling these well-known cock Canaries at 2/6 each which to the purchaser's sorrow prove to be hens. What I offer are genuine high-class birds at ordinary prices. You can get a Hartz cock anywhere for 6/6, or a St. Andreasburg Roller 10/6; but the point is the quality. Unless you hear my Rollers sing you cannot comprehend the high quality of my birds. Every bird is imported direct from the native breeders by myself; no middleman's profits, or the best picked out. I do not sell you any fancy names. I have no necessity to; the birds themselves prove their genuine quality. Take into consideration the hundreds of unsolicited testimonials I am coutinually receiving from all over the world. My motto is, and always was, every customer guaranteed fullest satisfaction; no humbug or trickery. I send the birds you order on 7 days' approval at my sole risk; this allows you time to prove the birds to be what you require; if not, you send them back. You cannot have anything fairer. The railway books prove that I do not get 1 per cent. of the birds I send out returned; this speaks volumes for my selection and the quality of my birds. Whatever you require, let me send it to you on 7 days' approval. I can satisfy the most sceptical fanciers, for I know the high quality of my birds to be unsurpassable. Genuine trained St. Andreasburg Rollers, with full change of song by day and artificial light, cocks 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/- each; pure bred Roller hens 3/-, 3/6, 4/- each. The above are picked birds, free from harsh or choppy notes. If you want loud free songsters, my Hartz cocks are the working man's friend; cocks in full, loud, free song, by day and gas light, 5/9, 6/3, 6/6, 7/- each; mated pairs for breeding songsters, 8/6, 9/6, 10/6. My Rollers are all kept in separate singing room away from all other birds. My stock of Yorkshires and Norwich lead the way for style, quality, and condition; birds bred from and related to noted winners, cocks 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6; hens 4/-, 4/6, 5/6, 6/6; either Yorkshires or Norwich. Goldfinch cocks 2/6, 3/-, 3/6; Bullfinch hens 1/9, 2/- each. All Canaries carriage paid to your door on 7 days' approval at my risk. Neat travelling cages 3d. each. Send a post-card for my illustrated price list: E. L. Storey, Practical Bird Specialist, Crowle, Doncaster.

THOMAS'S WINNING YORKSHIRES AND NORWICH

have earned a reputation by their consistent winning throughout the season at all the leading shows. The following facts, which can easily be verified, are sufficient evidence in support of this claim.

During this season I have won over 60 first prizes, 40 seconds, 40 thirds, 30 fourths, and 30 specials in hottest competition, including all the leading shows.

I have also bred both Yorkshires and Norwich that have secured premier honours at the Crystal Palace Show, 1911. My customers also have had wonderful success on the Show Bench with birds bred from matched pairs supplied by me. Proof of this is filed and open for the inspection of all.

Any fancier requiring birds for Stock or Exhibition cannot do better than send a post-card for my Free 1911 Illustrated Catalogue.

WHAT! YOU?

I am surprised. It seems so ridiculous to hear you mention dissatisfaction. You never hear my customers mention it; the fact is, they have forgotten there is such a thing since they got their birds from these aviaries, the fountain-head of quality, combined with cheapness. The surest way to spell satisfaction is S-t-o-r-e-y-'-s B-i-r-d-s, for I guarantee every customer full satisfaction. Just you call in and inspect my stock; it will do you good, and you will not be pressed to buy, for I know you will see scores of birds you would like to possess. You have no need to pay fancy prices. I have had a lot of experience breeding and selling birds, always breeding from the best of stock birds and winners, and selling the birds at reasonable prices within the reach of all. See my advertisement under Rollers. Call and inspect my stock. You will be convinced. I have the best pure-bred Yorkshires, that cannot be beaten for type, size, and quality; feathers like wax. NORTHERN CREST CLUB.

Annual meeting held at Sunderland, 23rd March. In the absence of Mr. Robson, Mr. Farrar presided. Secretary presented balance-sheet for preceding year, showing a balance in hand of 15s., and assets 3 silver cups; which, considering the state of trade in the North during the last 12 months, is very satisfactory. The membership has gone up to the extent of 12 members. Office-bearers re-elected. Following new members enrolled: Messrs. J. W. Coutts (Newcastle), T. Wheatley (Shildon), J. Gillespie (Durham City), W. Priestley (Tyne Dock). This looks encouraging for the Crest Fancy in the North. J. G. Hutchinson, Hon. Sec.

DYSART C.B.S.

Meeting, held March 25th, Normand Memorial Hall. President, Mr. D. Walker, presided over a large number of members. Letters were read from judges nominated at last meeting; the following were unanimously appointed to judge the annual open show, October 28th, viz., for Scotch Fancy, J. Thomson (Kirkcaldy); for Border Fancy, Mr. R. Lambie (Whitburn); and for Norwich and Crests, Mr. J. Winter (Edinburgh). Judges of British and Foreign left over for a fortnight. Thereafter the company sat down to an excellent supper, heartily partaken of, after which songs were rendered by Messrs. Walker, Watson, Sparling, Russell, Hutchison, and Logan, also mandoline solos, by Mr. J. Suttie. The pleasing feature of the evening was a duet admirably sung by John Hutchison and Christopher White. Altogether a very pleasant time was spent.—John S. Harrie, Hon. Sec.

Gentlemen unanimously elected to judge show, April 27th, the cage bird judge being not yet elected. Special prizes for most points in each section were kindly promised by various members. Mr. C. A. House was unanimously elected to judge show, July 13th. The judges for show, May 25th, have not yet been written to. Fanciers please note, all these shows are open free from 8 to 10 p.m., at Workman's Hall, Romford Road; visitors cordially invited. MANCHESTER AND N.C.O.S.

General meeting held headquarters, March 20th, Mr. W. A. Bladen presiding over a large attendance. Date of F.F. show fixed for July 1st, Choulton Town Hall. Following judges elected to judge annual open show, October 27th and 28th: Messrs. H. W. Battye, A. G. Davis, E. Godley, C. Houlton, S. Hadwin, and J. Swalwell A paper on the Yorkshire Canary should have been given by Mr. W. Broughton, but owing to ill-health he was unable to attend. Mr. Atkinson was prevailed upon to take his place, and our thanks are due to him for giving us such a good lecture, being called upon so suddenly. He dealt with the breeding, how to get length, size, quality, etc.; he also said the Belgian must be used with great care. With care and judgment it could be used for good, but if used too much and without judgment it would do a great amount of harm. He also spoke on the use of Cinnamon blood for quality, and recommended it to be used on the cock side. He did not think the hens were as good a shape as the green marked and clear hens; that was the reason for using the cinnamon cock. He also dealt with other points to look to, and went into all points thoroughly. After his lecture he was asked several questions, which he answered in first-class style. The meeting closed with a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Atkinson, who responded. Next meeting April 3rd, table show of Brit. (4 classes). Entry fee, 6d. Mr. Richards will give 5s. to exhibitor staging most birds.—H. Boothman, Hon. Sec.

EDINBURGH AND DIST. C.B.S.

Meeting held Cairn's Memorial Hall, Gorgie Road, 21st March, the President (Mr. Charleton) in the chair. The attendance of members was extraordinarily good, the seating accommodation being taxed to the utmost. Quite a host of new members were duly admitted. Secretary intimated the total membership was 60. Secretary appealed to all to make a special endeavour before May meeting of making the membership at least 100. Classification of table show for April meeting was then gone into and discussed, it was finally decided, on the motion of Messrs. Thomson and Ferguson, to have: 1, Goldfinch; 2, Linnet; 3, A.S. Bunting; 4, Siskin, Redpoll, or Twite; 5, A.O.S. Fine Cal. British birds and open to professionals and novices). Mr. Whitefield reported having interviewed gentleman regarding hall for annual show, and named members cost thereof would not exceed 30s., but probably less, it was left with Mr Whitfield and Secretary to fix up hall definitely. Secretary suggested that members in districts might be appointed to a district delegate; whose privilege and honour it would be to assist in the furthering of the Society's interest by keeping in touch with fanciers residing in their immediate neighbourhood, receiving entries for annual show, and suggestions for monthly meeting. The suggestion was well received, and on the motion of Messrs. Cochrane and Pennycook, it was agreed that appointments be left in the hands of Secretary. Suggested, that some cups be secured for annual show; the procedure of the Scottish British B. and M.C. in this connection being worthy of consideration and imitation; it was left to the members to give the matter their serious and personal consideration. Mr. A. Cochrane was unanimously appointed judge for April Table Show. Mr. Allan was pressed to officiate, but declined. The meeting adjourned to next hall to survey the awards placed by Mr. A. W. Watson on novice exhibits of British.—J. I. Mackie, Sec.

EAST HAM C.B.S.

Members, on March 23rd, at headquarters, held a successful "Question and Answer" night. Mr. W. Hammaus, who presided, had a busy time, and his replies and advice, backed up by fifteen years' experience as a breeder and exhibitor, set the members at ease. One asked the best way to wash a bird, but Mr. Hammaus answered that the audience would be better served by a demonstration. The officials have therefore decided to hold a washing competition at some future date.—B. C. Smith (Club Reporter).

YORKSHIRE C.C. OF SCOTLAND

Meeting held headquarters March 21st, President Mr. Penman in the chair. Letter read from Mr. A. Girvan (Ayr), who thought the late secretary, Mr. Bowman, had made a mistake in counting points won at Paisley Show, and that he, and not Mr. J. B. Paterson, was runner-up for club's rosebowl. After the matter had been gone into Mr. Girvan's contention was found to be correct, he having beaten Mr. Paterson for second place by two-fifths of a point. It was left to the two gentlemen concerned to arrange about exchanging specials. Secretary instructed to write several cage makers for samples and prices of standard show cages; same to be submitted to next meeting. Unanimously agreed, that all clubs desiring our patronage must give at least six classes, and the following classification was decided upon, viz., Clear or ticked yellow cock; ditto buff; clear or ticked yellow or buff hen; variegated cock or hen, A.V.; A.V. yellow or buff cock, unflgh.; ditto hen—the last two young birds classes, to be confined to members of the Y.C.C.S. Members are respectfully reminded that annual subs. are now due.—R. B. Gibb, Hon. Sec.

MUSSELBURGH O.S.

Smoking concert held 18th March, Grey Horse Tavern, the President (Mr. J. Pearson) presiding. As was expected, a large gathering of fanciers and friends assembled at the first of a series of "smokers." Mr. Pearson, in a neat witty speech, thanked the visitors who had come to join Musselburgh fanciers in a friendly pipe. He (Mr. Pearson) was sorry to inform them that one of the Portobello members, Mr. J. Laird, had had a serious accident. It was a great pity so few of the members, especially the Portobello members, had failed to put in an appearance, but notwithstanding the "smoker" was a great success, both vocally and financially. Among the visitors present were Messrs. J. Steel (Dalkeith), J. Ewing (Stirling), and Currie (Eskbank). Messrs. A. Moffat, J. Muir, and S. G. Carruthers are to be complimented on their work in connection with the concert. Mr. Brown opened the programme with a bagpipe selection, followed by Mr. Howie in "The Mocking Bird"; Mr. A. McAlpine in "Gae bring tae me" and "Sandy McPherson." Messrs. Murray, D. Moffat, Sterling, A. Moffat, J. Barr, ex-Councillor J. Young, E. McCann, Currie, and T. Brown also contributed. Ex-Councillor Young intimated he would only be too delighted to act as chairman for the next "smoker." A vote of thanks to the artistes and Chairman, and the singing of "Auld Lang Syne," brought a most successful evening to a close.—Wm. Nisbet, Sec.

LLANELLY AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting, held March 25th, Greyhound Hotel, with a fair attendance. We were very sorry to see our worthy chairman for the past six years could not accept the chair once again, as nothing would have given the members more pleasure than to have him once again ruling, and giving us useful advice. Proposed and carried that Mr. Tom Jenkins, one of our oldest members, be chairman, with Mr. W. Bowen as vice-chairman. Next came the secretaryship: Mr. D. John, the holder of the position for the last three years, said he could not give a definite answer, as his time is called upon in other directions than the society. Next show to be held November 28th. We have already booked hall for that date, as the feeling by the members is that the date of their annual show in January is too late, and that it goes against the success of our show. The society have no less than five (if not six) cups ready for their next venture. I hope and trust members will rally around the officers, and give them all the assistance they can, as it is well known that the attendance of the members at the meetings has been not what it ought to have been; and every word in Taffy's notes in CAGE BIRDS' issue of March 25th is only too true. Next meeting April 8th, when Mr. D. Jenkins (Swansea) has kindly promised to give us a washing exhibition—one of the best lessons in the successful staging of exhibits possible.—Daniel John, Sec.

CARDIFF C.B.S.

Annual meeting held Mar. 16th. Mr. J. Barrow (Cardiff) was enrolled a member. Balance-sheet read and adopted, the auditors passing some pleasing remarks on the way the books were kept. It is the intention of the new committee, under the very able and most enthusiastic leadership of our new Chairman (Mr S. F. Whetton) to do more for the interest of members in the way of table shows, and papers by various leading members. Those who were not in attendance at the last meeting will, I trust, make amends by putting in an appearance on April 20th. If time permits on this date a paper on my own experiences with the Norwich Plainhead will lead the way. Mr. E. Thomas promised paper on "Foreign Birds" will be the next item. Following new officers elected: Chairman, Mr S. F. Whetton, Vice-Chairman, Mr. E. Thomas; Treasurer, Mr. S. E. Tonkin, Committee, Messrs. W. Sampson, H. C. Smith, F. D. Jones, W. Wilson, A. Harrington, L. J. Banks, A. Shellam, T. H. Mellmuth, E. Thorne, H. Ford and F. Hopson. On the motion of Mr H. C Smith, seconded by Mr. W. Wilson Mr. G. Sampson was made a life hon member. I am sure all member will agree that in Mr Sampson the Society has always found a true and honest fancier—one who is well worthy of the honour. We, as young fanciers, can ill-afford to spare these "old men." For 1911 we have up to date enrolled 4 new members—Messrs. J. H. Marshall, C. Wells, J. Baker, and J. Barrow. We give a hearty welcome to fanciers to join.—J. W Dunmett, Sec. pro tem

YORKSHIRE UNION OF C.B.S.

The Annual Meeting.

Annual General Meeting held Market Tavern, Godwin Street, Bradford, March 25th, Mr. F. Hammond (President) in chair. A splendid attendance of delegates was recorded for this, the last, meeting of the old Council. A member of Manningham C.B.A. complained with regard to not receiving his class tickets from the Huddersfield Society on the occasion of their annual show, and applied to the Council as a test case to recover his entry fees. After a full explanation by the Huddersfield delegate as to the same having been posted along with the others, and the question thoroughly discussed, it was proposed and carried, that the Huddersfield Society were perfectly in order in retaining the entry fees, the Council considering that the exhibitor ought to have sent his birds on without tickets, or otherwise notified the Secretary of the Show that he had not received them. A post card from Great Horton Good Intent Society notified the Council they did not intend to hold the usual annual show this season on account of the heavy loss sustained at the last two. The resignation of the City of Wakefield Society from the Union was received and accepted with regret. The Hebden Bridge and District C.B.F.A. were admitted members of the Union on a unanimous vote, and it is hoped the step they have taken will be the means of strengthening them numerically. Mr.S. Jenkinson (Skelmanthorpe), who was suspended by the Council twelve months ago, applied to the Council to reinstate him as a member. This was acceded to by the Council, and he is, therefore, reinstated from this date. Union Secretaries would greatly oblige by making a note of this. Mr. A. Radley (Skelmanthorpe) applied for reinstatement, but in this case the Council declined to entertain the application. The Union Secretary would be greatly obliged if all those Societies who have not yet sent in the Railway Petitions, duly signed by their respective members, would do so within the next few days, in order that they may be returned to the London Federation of C.B.S.

The reading of the balance sheet, showing an increased balance on the past year's working, despite the fact that Delegates' travelling expenses and other increased expenditure had been met and duly paid out, was the cause of a rare outburst of enthusiasm. To say the least, it was unexpected, and put the Council in a very good humour with itself, compliments and tributes being freely given to the Secretary and Treasurer for this happy state of affairs. The Auditors, Messrs. F. Armstrong and R. Halliday, gave their report, and declared they had found the books in perfect order and in an excellent condition. Mr. H. H. Towers also enlarged upon this fact in a short speech, following with the Treasurer's report. The Secretary was granted an honorarium of £10 for his services during the past year, and Mr. Hammond, acting on the wishes of the Council, thanked him most deservedly in a neat speech. Mr. Hill took the opportunity in responding to same of thanking all those officials and delegates connected with the Council for their help during the past year. It had, he said, been a very arduous one, but he had derived great pleasure in accomplishing the work and giving satisfaction to the Council.

A rather singular feature in the evening's agenda was the election of a Treasurer for the ensuing year. Mr. H. H. Towers takes his position as President of the Union, and Mr. F. Hammond, as retiring President, was nominated and duly elected as Treasurer, when the Secretary pointed out that this action would necessitate a breach of the rules, as it distinctly states that the Treasurer "must be elected by and from the Council." Unfortunately, Mr. Hammond was not qualified under this rule, and it was therefore decided to ask Mr. H. H. Towers to hold the office of Treasurership until this matter had been referred back to the Societies, when, no doubt, an arrangement will be speedily come to in order to remove this obstacle.

A vote of thanks to all retiring officers was proposed by Mr. H. W. Walsh (Halifax), who paid a most deserving tribute to the gentlemen who had held the reins of office during the past year. This was ably seconded by Mr. J. Butler (Stanningley). In responding, Mr. F. Hammond made a magnificent speech, dealing with a few of the most important events that had occurred during his Presidential year, namely, the protection of the Union members in the action which the Bradford Health Committee took in regard to bird fanciers using part of the attic, etc., for breeding Canaries; this objection had been entirely removed, and was greatly to the credit of the Yorkshire Union. A working agreement with the kindred Unions had also been arrived at, and this was another step in the right direction. Drawing attention to the annual ballot, Mr. Hammond said he was afraid it would have to be done away with on account of the poor response which the Union members usually made in returning their papers. The expense was considerably heavy, and the response made was not worth this expenditure. Mr. Hammond pleaded that each individual would do his level best for the Union which he held so dear, and hoped they would all work for the betterment of the Fancy in general. Concluding, he said he should always be willing when called upon to take his share in helping the Union forward, and hoped that even a more promising era of progress was in store for it than had yet been attained. A great outburst of applause greeted his concluding remarks, and I feel sure that efforts he has made during his term of office will certainly have left a good impression with the officials and delegates who have sat under him during the past year.

The Queensbury Society were granted permission to hold their show on December 16th, the date vacated by Great Horton Good Intent O.S. All new delegates' names and addresses should be sent in immediately by those Societies who have not already done so.—H. Hill Secretary.

HIRST (Universal) C.B.S.

Meeting held Mar. 25th, when we had the pleasure of hearing Mr. E. Floyd deliver a very interesting lecture on Canary management. I made a mistake in the date of our first feather show—it should have been July 22nd, instead of July 1st. If you will kindly publish same I shall be much obliged.—R. Middleton, Sec.

BATHGATE AND DIST. C.B.S.

Annual general meeting held Lesser Co-operative Hall, where there was a good attendance. Mr. E. Cain, vice-president, presided. Secretary's report and balance sheet were read and adopted unanimously. Following office bearers appointed: President, Mr R. Baldie; ex-president, Mr. J. Nicolson, secretary, Mr A. Nicol; auditor, Messrs. W. Sharp and W. Ewart. Agreed to hold next meeting 8th April, when Mr. J. Murray will give an exhibition of hand washing. The President also agreed to read a paper on Breeding and Rearing Canaries. This brought a successful meeting to a close, a vote of thanks being given the chairman.—A. Nicol Sec

CAGE BIRDS, 154, FLEET STREET, LONDON.

A Well-known Winner.

Kindly accept our grateful thanks for the honour of placing our well-known yellow hen on the front page of our popular CAGE BIRDS; also for the prominence you have given her in producing such a lifelike drawing in your valuable CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL. In both cases your artist has done her full justice. I have always had a great admiration for the likeness brought out by him of the "Woe Border" previously, but in the latter instance he has simply excelled himself. Nothing to my eye has ever appeared on paper with anything like the same claim to the living image of an ideal Border. She is brought out to perfection. She has had a host of admirers throughout the show season, and from letters received by me she is as much admired in your ANNUAL. One writer says: "No breeder of the Border can have any doubt now what to breed for, when one glance has been given at the drawing of your yellow hen in CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL, which will engraft on the memory the true ideal." This to us is a compliment which we are proud of, as the breeders of the hen in question; but doubly so to you and your artist. We wish both CAGE BIRDS and Mr. Norman long life to lead as fanciers onward and upward.—J. Patterson (Chirnside).

We are very sorry to hear from Mr. R. Charleson, secretary of the Leigh and Dist. C.B.S., that he met with a serious accident on March 17th. He writes: I fell from a scaffold about 20 feet during my work as a painter, and badly hurt my ribs, and also strained the wrist and shoulder of my right arm. I have not been able to use it until to-day, so that is the reason I have had to keep my report of our Linnet Show back until now.

Mr. Enoch Tams (of Church Street, Longton, Staffs) has issued a large illustrated catalogue of the bird cages, aviaries, cage fittings, bird seeds, foods, bird-room requisites, etc., supplied by him. The quality of the goods is of the best, and the prices extremely moderate. Readers of CAGE BIRDS should make a point of getting a copy of this catalogue, which may be had free on application, if CAGE BIRDS is mentioned when writing. Mr. Tams supplies practically everything a bird-keeper can require, and he has built up a huge business by his fair dealings and methods.

New Cross and District C.B.S. are to be favoured by a paper on "British Birds" by that well-known fancier Mr. Lewcock, on Thursday, April 6th, at 7.45 p.m., at Headquarters, Bond's Rooms, 397, New Cross Road, write Messrs. Barton and Heath, the hon. secretaries, when the society heartily invites fanciers and friends. This society, started in January last, has now doubled its membership, and is going in splendid form. A ramble to Hildenboro' is being arranged for May, also a young stock show for July. The secretaries will be pleased to give particulars of membership. (Address: 8, Warwick Street, Deptford.)

Kindly thank all who replied to my advt. in CAGE BIRDS of March 25th, as I received too many to answer personally.—S. Grant (Banbury).

Kindly thank all who answered my small advt. in your paper, "CAGE BIRDS." I only answered a few that resided in London, and have made a good exchange. I wish "CAGE BIRDS" all success.—J. Russell (London, S.W.).

I advertised two Yorkshire hens in "CAGE BIRDS," and had about twenty applications for them. I have not, therefore, been able to answer all the applicants.—S. S. Boyden (Shepherd's Bush, London, W.).

I had so many enquiries re advt. in CAGE BIRDS for exchange of Budgerigars, that I was only able to reply to those who sent stamps for same. I think your paper, CAGE BIRDS, is a very good advertising medium, as I have always had excellent results from it.—Chas. Dell (Harlesden).

We have had such a rush of orders due to advertising in your excellent journal, "CAGE BIRDS," that we have had to start another joiner. We hope now to get off all orders as received. Our cages have given entire satisfaction in every case, which is very gratifying to us. I wish your journal every success.—R. Hobson (Hull).

Coupons will be issued with all canisters of Ramsden's Pure Peppers sold in 1911. They will not be issued with loose pepper sold by traders. Members of societies are asked to hand their coupons to their secretary, who in turn is asked to enclose same with his application for a special prize. Applications without coupons will not be considered, and the value of the special prize offered will depend entirely on the value of the coupons enclosed with the application. Three extra prizes will be given to the three societies sending in the highest value in coupons. My Peppers for 1911 are of super quality and colour, and will, as usual, be guaranteed "absolutely pure."—J. W. Ramsden, 11, Josephine Avenue, Brixton, London. [Advt.

I think it is time some of our members turned up to the meetings, writes Mr. J. Bunn, secretary of the Nottingham Permanent and District O.S., seeing ours is a flourishing society and will be one of the best in the district if only a few more members will help to work it. There is not much encouragement at present for those six or seven old members who always turn up at the meetings. There are thirty members living in the town, and only the old few turn up. When we get classes out for shows, we have to get them out the best we can to please all, and then when some of the members get the schedule they find there are not classes to suit them; then they begin to grumble about it. Now, members, what can you expect if you don't come and help keep the society in good going order? Please turn up to some of the meetings, which you will see advertised in Club Notices in CAGE BIRDS.

Notice to Secretaries.

Will secretaries of societies kindly note that from now onwards during the summer months all "Club Notices" and other matters intended for publication in CAGE BIRDS must reach us not later than first post on Wednesday; otherwise they will be too late for insertion in our issue of that week.

National Green-Marked Y.C.C.

I wish to remind members of the National Green Marked Yorkshire C.C. that all nominations for the club's officials for the ensuing year must be forwarded to me on March 31st or first post April 1st. Nomination paper will be found in centre of year book.—F. Armstrong, Hon. Sec., 78, Pear Street, Parkinson Lane, Halifax.

The Jordan Fund.

I beg to thank "P. H. H.," who forwarded me 2s. 6d. towards purchasing Mr. Jordan, of Whittington, Salop, a bird or so to start him afresh after the fire in his workshop. Others who have forwarded birds and money have received acknowledgment by letter.—E. J. Evans, Secretary, Oswestry, C.B.S.

A Lantern Lecture.

The London and Provincial O.S. on Thursday, April 6th, at 8 p.m., are having a lecture on "British Birds," by Mr. George Crabb, illustrated by limelight views, at the Leysian Hall, City Road (opposite Old Street Tube Station), writes Mr. Law, the hon. secretary. There will be some seventy pictures in all, including some very fine and unique slides of the Kingfisher in different stages of growth. These pictures will be shown for the first time. There will also be some very good views of "Curious Nesting Places." Fanciers generally should avail themselves of the opportunity of hearing Mr. Crabb, as this gentleman has been interested in birds all his life. It was as far back as 1886 that he first joined the L. and P.O.S., and not long after he was elected president of the society. It was he who bred that magnificent variegated Crest which caused such a sensation twelve years ago, and which can now be seen in the Natural History Museum. Mr. Crabb has been a successful breeder of Lancashires, Lizards, London Fancies, Crests, etc. The lecture is entirely free, and I hope a great many will be present to show their appreciation of Mr. Crabb.

A Feat Indeed!

Mr. W. E. Teschemaker sends us the appended cutting from a recent issue of the "Daily Mirror": "The mechanical Nightingale which is employed at the Haymarket Theatre (in "Lady Patricia") is really quite an "old bird" with a lengthy experience of the stage. It came to England from Italy just twelve years ago. In dozens of plays this same "Nightingale" has added a charm to pastoral scenes and is an unfailing accompaniment to the wooing of lovers. In a few days the Haymarket Theatre management hope to substitute, in place of the mechanical Nightingale, a talking machine which will reproduce the actual song of the Nightingale. A gentleman who has for months past been trying to get actual records of a Nightingale's song has at last succeeded, securing them in a wood near London. That such a feat is by no means easy may readily be understood." Mr. Teschemaker's comments on this item of information are very much to the point. He writes: "That the gramophone man should have been endeavouring to secure Nightingale records in Middlesex in the winter seems odd, but that he should have succeeded in doing so in the Month of March is amazing! Evidently the 'Gale is a much earlier migrant than some of us had guessed."

Mistaken Identity.

In the second act of "Lady Patricia," the new play at the Haymarket Theatre—the scene of which is placed in the boughs of a large tree—the songs of a Nightingale and a Lark are heard with trilling sweetness. A lady sitting in the stalls was so impressed by the lovely song of the birds that her heart went out to the owners of the dulcet voices. She feared the worst as regards the treatment of the little creatures in captivity, and accordingly the R.S.P.C.A. was approached on her behalf with a request that (says the "Daily Mirror") "Some birds are employed at the Haymarket Theatre—they are made to sing every night. Could an inspector be sent down to the theatre to see that they are properly fed and cared for?" The sequel was as follows:—Armed with a notebook, a formidable-looking inspector from the R.S.P.C.A. arrived at the stagedoor of the Haymarket Theatre early in the morning and asked to see the birds. He was courteously asked in, and, after waiting a few moments, two small boxes were brought to him. The stage manager then put a key in the boxes, wound them up, pulled a trigger and—the boxes began to sing! "This box," said the stage manager, "is the Nightingale, and this the Lark. They are mechanical 'birds' from Italy." Two burly stage hands then came forward. "I work the Nightingale," one said "up in the flies. Bill, here, is the Lark." The inspector retired, quoting emphatically: "Hail to thee, blithe spirit, bird thou NEVER wert."

Jim Overend.

Reminiscences and Experiences of an Exhibitor of 40 Years Ago.

Our Yorkshire representative "Straight 'Un" sends the second instalment of the fascinating reminiscences confided to him by that well-known old-time fancier, Mr. J. Overend (Ravensthorpe).

To give the extent to which borrowing was carried on, only one show need be mentioned, and at this show of about 125 entries, all except five belonged to (or I should say were exhibited by) two exhibitors, one of whom was our Mr. Overend, and I believe this is not the record number put down by one person at a show.

How Birds Were "Washed."

Washing birds at this time for show was not thought of, and the method used to clean the birds that were soiled was more like dry cleaning, and was as follows: whiting and water were mixed to as thick a consistency as would allow of its being blown through a syringe, and the birds were covered with this mixture, and kept in a warm place to dry; then, when the whiting was dry, it would peel off and bring the dirt with it. This method will appear to-day somewhat crude, but then, all things do until you find something better.

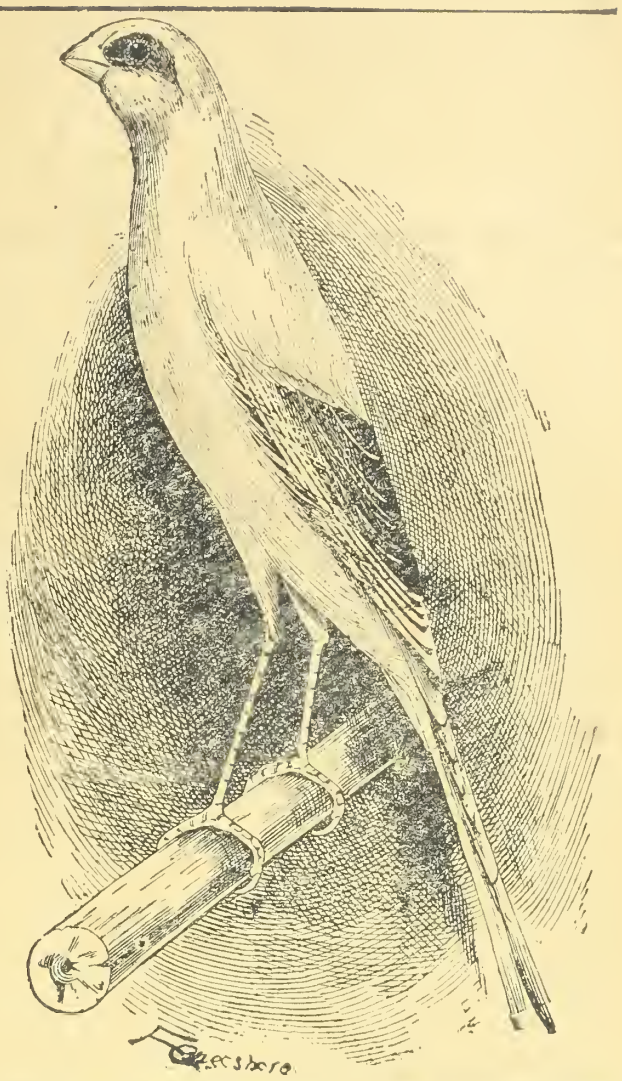
The following relates to the first bird Mr. Overend washed, and the reason he washed it. He had found a yellow six-pointed Goldie-Canary mule at Great Horton (this appears always to have been a place for birds), and had been successful in borrowing same, though the borrowing was on vastly different terms to what he had been used to; in fact, he was to pay £5 if anything happened to the bird during the time it was in his possession, and the agreement stated that it had to be returned in time for the Palace show, somebody else having spoken for it to show it there. Some mules had been shown in the district by some exhibitors from Middlesbrough way, in cages that were coloured blue inside. The general idea was to show them in simply whitewashed cages. But the birds appeared so much better that Jim decided to do likewise—and blue he must have for this six-pointed Mule. Cages were therefore done out in blue, and the bird looked splendid; and with great hopes he set out for Baildon with the certain winner in his blue cage.

On the following day, what a surprise! The bird was left out of the tickets altogether. And no wonder, for when he saw it the bird was absolutely blue—he had forgotten to put something in to fix the colour, and it had all come off on to the bird. Getting home again, the hard problem of getting out of the scrape presented itself. Whiting and water to get the colour out was not to be thought of. He therefore at last decided to wash it. Now the only thing he knew about washing was a paragraph he had seen in a paper stating that it had been done, and as this seemed to be the only course left, he decided to try it, despite the fact that it would cost him £5 if anything happened to the bird. The bird came out fine, however, and scored first prize on several occasions. Then Jim tackled the washing question in earnest, and before long was in great request to go and give washing exhibitions to congregations of fanciers, bird exhibitors, dealers, etc.

The true fanciership of Mr. Overend's character is to be found in the fact that, having found out that birds could be washed, he did not keep it to himself, but freely gave the Fancy the benefit of his experiences.

Up to about 1872 the even-marked birds were shown as common Canaries at the Palace show, only the Clear Yellows and Clear Buffs being classed as Yorkshires, though most of the birds that were shown in the even-marked classes were of the Yorkshire type, or somewhere near it.

Colour Feeding Not Thought of.



Colour feeding was not then thought of (and many will wish it had never been found out), and the first colour-fed birds to be seen in the district were put down at Batley Show, in the Norwich Section, and fairly took the Fancy by storm. Many were the theories put forward as to how it was done, and many were the attempts to get the colour off. It was really thought that the birds were dyed, but they were able to stand all tests, and in the end, as we to-day know, colour-feeding came to be a fine art, and the sale of colour food quite a business.

These shows at Batley were really the first shows that were open to all England and were run on the company system. Ten shilling shares were issued, and the investors were to receive any profit that accrued, any loss to be deducted from their shares before paying-out night. Sad to relate, a loss was usually the result, and, like good sportsmen, they stood the racket. A change of secretary was then made, and the following show resulted in a nett gain of 2s. per share. This was more than they could stand, and the company broke up. Evidently they had got so used to losing that this disturbed the balance.

These shows were the first at which the prize money was on a fixed scale, and the profit or loss stood by the fanciers that run the shows, and the full money per class was guaranteed.

The Trimming and Faking Art.

Trimming and faking were very prevalent, and almost as legal as colour-feeding is to-day.

THE PERFECTION OF EVEN MARKINGS.

A GEM OF 18 YEARS AGO.

A CINNAMON-MARK OF SIXTEEN YEARS AGO.

One of Mr. Overend's Uneven-marks, a big winner in the early nineties.

Fac-simile reproduction from a coloured plate issued by "Fur and Feather" in December, 1895.

All exhibitors knew that the others did it. They did not all take to it like our friend Jim. The judges knew that it was done, and if done neatly, and not too much of it, the birds got through all right, there being no secret about it; it was, in fact, a matter as to who could get the bird, and if not quite what was wanted, it was made as near as possible to that requirement.

One bird Mr. Overend bought was shown at an exhibition in the even-marked class. It was four-pointed, and the judge, Mr. ———(no, I won't give you away; you might have a little chaff to take next time here. He judges yet!) disqualified it for having had a light feather clipped out from amongst the dark ones in one wing. It was usual in the even-marked classes to catch the bird to examine it, to see if anything could be found out; and in this bird the stump of the feather was plainly visible.

A "Tail" of a Judge.

Now this bird was entered at another show three days after, and under the same judge, too (most unfortunate, wasn't it?), and the thing got on Jim's mind to such an extent that, as I said before, he began to dream about it, with the result that he suddenly woke at about three o'clock one morning when he was just putting a feather in a bird's wing—a dark one to replace a light one! He would try and do awake, however, what he had done in his sleep; so, selecting the exact feather required from another bird, this was cut and fixed in the quill, and, heigh-ho! the bird was now perfect. Any judge could catch him and spread his wing, and there would not be the tell-tale gap to give room for disqualification. Off he went to the show, and was awarded first prize (this is where I don't give the judge away), and received an excellent report from the judge—grand markings, etc., etc. What a surprise to the judge when, some time after, he got to know that the bird was the same, and that he had not twigged it! He passed the remark in the report that he could not tell where Mr. Overend found all his good marked birds. Jim had the laugh this time, anyhow.

Such things as putting a five-pointed bird another tail feather in to make him into a six-pointed bird was also done on many occasions, and the eye marks were also a source of trouble, and required a little tedious work in the putting in to get them nice and even. Superfluous body markings, too, were removed with care.

One thing seems to delight Mr. Overend, and that is the present gradual, though sure, migration of the fanciers to schools for both shows and meetings, and the usual great progress which takes place to the numbers and the general prosperity of such societies.

Mr. Overend says there was one great disadvantage of the even marked birds—they could not sell them to anybody; when sold they had to go to somebody "in the know," and when buying an even marked bird it was usual to ask, "Is it done?" The truth was told, and nothing more was required, though when the bird had moulted, it was sometimes a long way off what it appeared to be. For instance, one man he knew would not buy a bird that had a feather put in, though he did not mind a little colour put on or the eye marks trimmed a bit—he could make them as good himself for next time.

Another bird, by some mistake, was sold to one who was outside the "pale," and when it got its new clothes, what a surprise—there was a regular shindy, and the bird was got back again.

Then again, Mr. Overend had £10 offered for a six-pointed bird that won at the Palace, but he dare not sell—after the moult it would have been only five-pointed, and the Londoner who wanted it would doubtless have kicked. However, he did not run the risk.

Precocious Birds.

Each year as the spring comes round those who are interested in wild bird life notice a brood of young ones brought off by too precocious parents far earlier than they should be, judging by the usual nesting periods of the species. It is also curious to note that these early young ones are the produce of what one might almost term semi-domesticated species, that is, birds that frequent towns and villages, and nest round buildings and gardens. Sparrows, Thrushes, Robins and Blackbirds are the chief offenders in the production of early broods, and although these are out of season, they generally manage to thrive and do well. Another bird of the towns, the Starling, is not as a rule so precocious as the birds mentioned. It generally nests in April, but the other day the writer saw a fine brood of young ones, just doing for themselves in the open road. By their appearance, they must have been quite a month old, which would make them February-hatched; the old ones therefore must have gone to nest in the early part of that month. Starlings are mentioned by many writers as single-brooded birds, but one is inclined to think that this can hardly refer to the majority of the species. It does not seem likely that the pair above referred to will go through the remainder of the season without nesting again. It is not only highly improbable, but it is unnatural that two healthy birds should spend the remainder of the spring and summer in idleness, when their companions are busily employed propagating the species. As is well known, these birds will nest almost anywhere, preferring a hole somewhere sheltered from the external air. Many in the writer's district nest in the old trees, and a pair used a hole at the end of a branch of an elm last season close to his garden. The brood came off the first week in May, and within a few days the nest was tidied up and a few more stalks of straw added, and eventually another lusty family were launched upon the world. Starlings are so much alike that one cannot say positively that it was the same pair of old birds, but considering how quickly the second nest followed the first, there is every reason to think no others had taken possession.

Will Mules Breed?

New Light on a . . . . Vexed Question.

By
W. REID
(Sunderland.)

I have noticed in several past issues of CAGE BIRDS that your Mr. G. E. Weston has mentioned in his query columns the "Mules bred from Mules" by a gentleman residing on Wearside, and in a recent issue he stated that the case made quite a stir in the correspondence columns of CAGE BIRDS last summer. I propose to make a further "stir" by affording Mr. Weston an opportunity of examining some of these birds in order to try and settle once and for all the vexed question as to whether or not Mules will breed.

With this end in view, I wrote to Mr. Murray (the gentleman who bred the birds) asking permission to forward such of the birds as I might select to CAGE BIRDS for examination, Mr. C. Waters, who is a well-known Northern Mule breeder, and myself defraying all expenses. Mr. Murray readily granted my request, and on March 4th Mr. Waters and I visited Mr. Murray and selected three of the four birds he has left, which I am forwarding on to your Mr. Weston.

Elucidating the Facts.

As it is essential that cases like these should be thoroughly investigated, I will give your readers an outline of what we fanciers in this district did towards elucidating the facts of the case in question. The first intimation that Mr. Murray had bred these birds appeared in a letter from him published in CAGE BIRDS on April 30th, 1910, stating that he had hatched out a nest of five youngsters from a cock Linnet Mule and a hen Canary. After reading the letter, I wrote to Mr. Murray (who was at that time quite unknown to me), and shortly after received a visit from him. I questioned him closely upon the matter, and I was particularly anxious to know whether the father was really a cock Mule, as I knew that many people termed every dark or variegated Canary a Mule. Mr. Murray was, however, quite definite upon this point, and stated that he had bred the Mule himself from a cock Linnet and a hen Canary, adding that it was quite immaterial to him whether or not fanciers accepted his statement that the five youngsters were bred from the Mule, as he had nothing to gain by telling a deliberate falsehood; neither did he seek notoriety or publicity as a man who had bred "Mules from Mules"; his only object in penning the letter to CAGE BIRDS was that he thought it would interest readers.

He had, he said, always understood that Mules would not breed, and he was quite surprised himself, for he did not pair these birds up with the deliberate intention of breeding from them, but merely let the cock Mule (which was flying loose in the room) in beside the hen Canary, because it was continually clinging to that particular hen's cage, and the hen always calling to him. And as he had nothing else to pair with the hen, he opened the cage door and allowed the cock Mule to run in with her.

Mr. Murray also had a Goldfinch flying loose in the room, but he said he was not sure whether it was a cock or a hen. In any case, I might mention here that it is quite immaterial what the sex of the Goldfinch was, for your Mr. Weston will see that the birds show no trace of the Goldfinch, while on the other hand the Linnet persuasion is quite plain, both in the plumage and also in the actions of the birds. The only other male bird in Mr. Murray's possession was a cock Linnet, but he assured me it was quite impossible for this bird to be present at any time in the bird-room, for it was kept in the kitchen, and to get into the bird-room it would have to travel up two flights of stairs, then along a dark passage, and pass through a door made of half-inch mesh wire into the bird-room proper, which is at the top of the house; and he was also quite sure that the Linnet would not be taken into the bird-room by anyone during his (Mr. Murray's) absence, for no one could have any object in doing so, there not being sufficient interest taken in the birds by anyone except himself.

Seen by Several Fanciers.

I told Mr. Murray I would like to see the birds before passing any opinion on them, and I asked him to bring them to our Sunderland C.B. Society's young bird show the following week, which he consented to do, and I asked him to bring the father of the birds along with them.

The first nest consisted of five youngsters—three dark, one heavily variegated, and one almost pure white. Unfortunately the white one died, but the remaining four, together with the father duly appeared at the first of our young bird shows, and were carefully examined by several fanciers.

As I wrote you at the time, there was some diversity of opinion, one or two, including myself, being of the opinion that the birds were what they were stated to be, while others, including Mr. Waters and Mr. Riseborough thought they were purely Linnet Mules, and while not disputing Mr. Murray's good faith, they thought he had made a mistake, and that the Linnet had at some time, by some means or other, gained access to the hen Canary. Others said that the dark ones were ordinary green Canaries, but they declined to give any opinion upon the variegated one, the pure white portions of its plumage being something of a poser to them.

I might mention here that the bird brought by Mr. Murray as the male parent of these birds was undoubtedly a dark Linnet Mule. I may also say that during the evening Mr. Murray neither argued with anyone, nor contradicted anyone, but merely answered in a satisfactory manner any questions put to him. Such diversity of opinions as to the parentage of the birds was, of course, most unsatisfactory, but those present who had any experience of Mule breeding took no notice of the suggestions that they were dark Canaries, for the birds were undoubtedly Mules, with Linnet blood in them; but the question as to whether the blood was half and half, or three parts Canary and one part Linnet could not be unanimously settled, and it was dropped at that, pending the appearance of the second nest from the same parents, which were hatched out about that time.

The Second Nest Described.

The second nest consisted of four youngsters, one dark, one heavily variegated, and two light, the general colour of the light ones being nearly pure white, splashed a little with grey or grizzled feather.

These birds duly made their appearance at the second of our young bird shows, and attracted a good deal of attention, and the general opinion of fanciers after seeing the second nest was that they were what they were claimed to be, viz., three-quarter-bred Mules. The appearance of the light ones practically convinced those fanciers who had hitherto been dubious of their genuineness that the birds had really been bred by a cock Linnet Mule and a hen Canary, for they looked to be just the kind of birds that would be expected from such a mating. They further admitted that even if Mr. Murray had made a mistake as to the parentage of the first nest, it was scarcely likely he would make the same mistake again, more especially as Mr. Murray had, during the time the second nest of youngsters were being reared, offered to allow any fancier the opportunity of sealing up the cage containing the Linnet Mule and hen Canary with any private seal, in preparation for the third nest, the seal to be broken only when the eggs were to be tried, as it was only necessary to have fertile eggs to prove that the Mule would breed. I need scarcely say that Mr. Murray's offer was not accepted, for fanciers felt that there was no need to doubt his honesty of purpose; and his willingness to allow such a mode of procedure with his birds and cages was convincing proof that he, at least, was quite satisfied that the birds were sired by the Linnet Mule.

I might mention here that Mr. J. T. Clark, who judged this particular show, refused to accept these birds as genuine Mules, and, although he knew what the birds were claimed to be while he was judging them, the fact that he put them back was undoubted proof that he also thought they were what they were represented to be, for, as he remarked to me, you cannot call them "Mules," when they are only three-quarter bred, and this, I thought, opened out another aspect of the case.

A Visit to the Bird-room.

The day following this show (Sunday morning), Mr. C. Waters, Mr. J. Riseborough, Mr. J. Copeland, and I paid a visit to Mr. Murray to inspect his bird-room, and we all agreed that it would indeed be a difficult matter for any bird to find its way into the room without being deliberately taken there, owing to the number of stairs to be ascended and dark passages to be traversed before reaching the bird-room. Excepting the Canaries, we found no male birds in the room other than the Linnet Mule. Mr. Murray showed us the cock Linnet which he brought up from the kitchen with the remark that that was the first time the bird had been out of the kitchen for two or three years—he was perfectly sure of that.

It was during this visit that we saw the hen Canary that was mated to the Linnet Mule—an ordinary variegated buff Norwich hen. She was again sitting on five eggs, her third nest to the Mule. I might say that all five eggs again proved fertile, but only two of them hatched out; and the two youngsters of the third nest that did hatch out only lived four or five days, the hen, after the first nest, turning out to be a very indifferent feeder, so indifferent in fact that, as Mr. Murray informed us, if he had not placed the youngsters from the second nest under another hen when they were about a fortnight old, he would have lost them.

"Quite Convinced."

Before leaving, we again thoroughly examined the birds from the first and second nests, and Messrs. Waters, Riseborough, and Copeland gave me permission to state in CAGE BIRDS (which I did at the time) that from the appearance of the birds, and after what they had seen at Mr. Murray's, they were quite convinced the birds were bred from the Linnet Mule, and they did not think they could have been sired by anything else. Altogether, Mr. Murray had fourteen eggs from the cock Linnet Mule and hen Canary pair, all the eggs proving fertile. Eleven of these hatched out, and nine of the chicks were reared. At the present time, however, only four are left, and three of these I am forwarding to your Mr. Weston for examination. Of the birds which I in conjunction with Mr. Waters have selected to send to him, one is a fine large bird, wholly dark. This bird is a cock, and is out of the first nest; he is one of the birds which, as I have said, was thought by some to be an ordinary dark Canary. A glance at him will, however, show the Linnet persuasion, yet when one examines the primary flights, I do not think you find them exactly as you would expect to do in a genuine half-and-half bred Mule; while on the other hand the secondary flights show the Linnet right enough.

At the time of writing I have had him in my possession two days, and during that time he has scarcely stopped singing. He is a grand songster, and the manner in which he intermingles the pure Linnet song into the Canary song is really good.

The next bird is also a cock, but he is "not in it" with the first one for song. He is also dark, with "Linnet" marked all over him. He is slightly smaller than the first one, and has two pure white feathers in each wing; he also possesses a light tail, a light abdomen, and a light patch at the back of his head. He is out of the second nest, and his shortcomings as a genuine Linnet Mule are similar in some respect to those of the other bird; yet he shows the Linnet in a much more marked degree.

The other bird is a hen, also out of the second nest; I have previously described her in CAGE BIRDS. She is white, with a grizzled patch on the back, about the size of a florin, while there are also some grizzled feathers in the tail. A peculiar feature about this bird as a youngster was her beak, which, as I mentioned at the time, was of a curious pinkish hue, hard to describe; and although this unusual colour has now practically disappeared, indications of the pinkish shade can still faintly be discerned.

(To be continued, when our Mr. G. E. Weston will give his views on the matter.)

During the Breeding Season.

Some Hints on the Management of the Birds.

(A Lecture given by Mr. W. Ellis, of Bexhill, a well-known Breeder and Exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead, before the Hastings United C.B.S., at headquarters, the Royal Oak Hotel, on March 15th.)

GENTLEMEN,—It is not my intention to read you a paper, as I prefer to toddle along my own way to give you my ideas and methods, gained by long practical experience extending over a good number of years, ideas I have found to work well. Still, my advice to you to-night is to stick to any methods that you have proved to advance the welfare of your stock. Further, before I commence, I should like to point out to you that you must not think you have only to do as I tell you, and you will breed a room full of winners, because you will be very much mistaken, as birds, like human beings, have their funny little ways, which we have to study, and to use our own judgment a good deal during the breeding season.

Position of the Birdroom.

In the first place, as regard where we keep the stock, this is a minor consideration; we are not all blessed with a good room at our disposal, and, providing cages and water are kept scrupulously clean, and the birds free from draughts, and below the gas, if any, don't let this trouble you. If I had a preference of position for the room it would be quite the reverse from that of most of our experts, as my ideal would be a north-east aspect, for the reason you get the earliest possible sunshine and light, and can keep a more even temperature. My own room faces due north, and I breed as good an average of young birds as any fancier in the South. The temperature of my room very rarely reaches 70 degrees in the hottest weather, and, providing you get your birds acclimatised to a north aspect, you will find they will be more healthy and robust. My experience has been they will stand any amount of cold, providing they are free from draughts.

In selecting your stock pairs I prefer, and find I have had the best results from, good big buff cocks (never mind if they have a bit of feather), and typical good-feathered yellow hens, as I maintain, and have proved, that the hen has a very big say in the type and quality of your birds. I have bred also very good birds vice-versa, but good big yellow cocks are few and far between. Whichever way you pair your birds, always try and keep type and quality on the hen side; never mind if your hens are a bit on the small side.

Worth a Jew's Eye.

After pairing I find it a good plan to give a little egg food every day until the clutch of eggs is laid. Mix it as follows: A slice of "Standard" bread, about 1½ inches in thickness, and one egg. Grate into this about two spoonfuls of cuttlefish (with an ordinary penny grater), and mix in two spoonfuls of cod liver oil emulsion. I find this mixture prevents, to a good extent, egg binding; also mix about a tablespoonful of ordinary brown treacle in your jug of drinking water. It is optional whether you leave your cocks in with the hens or not; if you are running two hens with one cock, I prefer to take the cock away on the same evening as I set the hen. I let the hens sit out their time on a plain diet of canary seed only. I advise leaving Nature to do all that is required with the eggs during incubation, as I have proved, to my cost, there is nothing gained by testing eggs in warm water, as I consider this turns the shell hard, making it impossible for the young birds to break through—leave the hen to do all that is required, and see that she has plenty of chances to bathe. It is a good plan if you have a spare hen or two (even if of no value), to pair them up, so as to hatch about the same time, as a good feeding hen is worth a Jew's eye, and you can often transfer to such a hen a nest of eggs that you are particularly keen on saving.

After the young are hatched, I give a better "soft" mixture, reducing the bread to about one inch in thickness, also leaving out the emulsion, giving in its place two spoonfuls of brown sugar; also I give as much hemp, not crushed, as the hen cares to use. For green food I use watercress (after the third day), giving it fresh every time I give egg food, and taking care to remove all stale. If you find your hens are not feeding well, try and coax them by making your food more palateable—chop in a little green food, and add a little soaked rape. If this doesn't have the desired effect, return the cock bird. I transfer the young to nursery cages when about 21 days old, and ring them at the same time, as I find they don't take any notice of rings at this age.

Taking the Young Away.

I take the young away in any case as soon as I see them picking up for themselves, as they gain nothing by being left with their parents any longer. Keep them as near as possible in threes and fours as they have been brought up, as I find they agree much better. Feed on following mixture three days a week: To about a pint of weak egg food add two spoonfuls of emulsion and two spoonfuls of medium Scotch oatmeal. On alternate days I give bread and milk well squeezed out, as here again I differ from a good many, and contend it is a mistake to get young birds on hard seed as soon as possible—in fact, I don't take my young birds right off soft food until through the moult. Water I give them at about eight weeks old, making it "objectionable" with a few drops of tincture of gentian, or a drop of Condy's Fluid, as it is fatal for young birds to drink too much water.

Now during this period you will be very lucky if you don't have a few youngsters go queer; should you find any a little thick take them in hand at once, as it is fatal to let illness get even a few hours start on a youngster. Carefully handle and blow them up. Should inflammation be the trouble, put on diet of bread and milk, take away all seed, and give all milk to drink—never mind if it goes sour. If no improvement after a few hours try the following remedy as a last resource: Blow up the belly and paint with camphorated oil first, then paint with Ellimans Embrocation or turpentine. Place the sufferer in a small cage, with no perches, and put this on top of a stove, where it will get a good heat. If this doesn't "draw" the inflammation, put the patient out of its misery.

A Remedy for Egg-binding.

Should you be troubled with egg binding I have found the following remedy good in most cases: Give the hen three drops of olive oil direct in the beak; also inject three drops into the vent, using an ordinary machine oilean for the latter purpose. Sweating hens I give a bath with about one spoonful of ordinary salt in it, also a nest-pan with no lining, sticking in a little building material to afford a foundation, as I find this keeps her cooler. Now, gentlemen, I am quite willing to answer any questions.

Question: Do you believe in double buffing? Answer: As an experiment, "Yes," but what is the use of your introducing green blood in your stock to keep up colour, if you are going to double-buff, and perhaps introduce some of the youngsters back into your strain? I maintain it is possible by judicious pairing to breed 75 per cent. of yellows into your stock. The last four years I have bred the majority yellow, and hope to improve on it. I should say the general average is about 80 per cent. buff; this is what you will get by double buffing.

Question: What is your opinion of green blood? Answer: As you pretty well know, I run a lot of green blood in my stock, but recommend a nice silky bronze green put in on the cock side for preference, as you can tone it down much easier than from the hen.

Question: Do you believe in hemp seed for young birds? Answer: Just a little, not overdoing it, much preferring to keep them on the feed I have suggested, as I like a food to build bone and substance, not fat.

A vote of thanks to Mr. Ellis for his able lecture concluded the meeting.—A. E. Godden, late Hon. Sec.

The Roller Canary:

Its Breeding, Training and General Management.

By "SCHOOLMASTER."

The fourth instalment of this excellent article dealing with the "golden-coiced" Canary.

In making a nest for the hen, you must take particular care the nestpan is identical in every respect to the one the hen has laid in, or she may refuse to have anything to do with a fresh pan.

Having got the hen off the nest, take the cock out and place him back again in his shutter cage and remove him out of the room altogether until he is wanted for the second hen. When this hen shows signs of wanting to nest, repeat the same process as in the case of the first hen.

Hens that are "Funny."

After placing the nest with the eggs back again into the cage, and before withdrawing the wooden slide, quietly clean out the compartment and supply a good covering of sawdust, say, an inch in thickness. After letting the hen into this compartment, treat the other one the same. Some hens are very funny and will not take to their nest or eggs on the fourth day when the cock has been removed. In a case of this sort put the cock back again with the hen and leave him until dark; then remove him again, and after the hen has sat all night, it is rare for her to give any more trouble in this respect.

On the day you sit your hens, take away the hopper containing rape seed, and for the next thirteen days give only plain canary seed.

If the weather is very warm, youngsters will often hatch out in thirteen days, but the usual period is fourteen days. So if you hear the faint "chip chip" noise in the nest on the thirteenth day, give a small quantity of minced yolk of hard-boiled egg (this egg should have been boiled for 20 minutes and then allowed to cool); but if not, give a small supply in the early morning of the fourteenth day. For the first two days of the young Canaries' lives do not mix biscuit with the hard-boiled egg unless your stock is a large one, and you have to study economy. In some large breeding rooms egg food, composed of yolk and white of egg, with an equal portion of crushed biscuit, or stale household bread, is supplied to youngsters of all ages. Your object is to start the youngsters growing; endeavour, therefore, by all possible means to keep them at it.

Whatever kind of egg food is used, supply it three or even four times per day, giving each time just sufficient for the hen to clear up by the next feeding time. You will find that more is eaten in the first than in the latter half of the day. If you are not an early riser, put a supply in the egg-food pans last thing at night after dark, and it will then be ready for the hens as soon as your bird-room gets properly light the next morning.

When the youngsters are three days old, add crushed biscuit to the egg, but until they are able to feed themselves do not put more than equal proportions of egg and biscuit.

The Question of Green Food.

The hopper of rape seed should be returned to the cage when the young birds hatch out. On the morning of the fourth day give a spray of green food; supply another spray after mid-day. On the fifth day give a small spray each time the egg food is given. Care should be used to avoid giving too much. In the old days fanciers used to put a glass, or jar, half full of water into the cage, and fix a large handful of green food into it—enough to last some hens two or three days. Now, some hens will feed on nearly all seed, others on egg food, and others, again, will eat all the green food that is given them. Should the youngsters that are being fed by the latter class of hen die when less than a week old, examine them and see if the stomach is green: if it is, well, the reason is obvious. A great many young Rollers are lost through this cause.

Give the hen a small supply of hemp seed on the sixth day; an egg food panful is quite sufficient to last for one day, and if your hen will crack it herself, give it her whole, but if not, try crushing some for her. Any, then, that is left in the pan at night, should be thrown away.

All egg food pans ought to be kept clean, and if it is not convenient to wash them, say, more than once or twice per week, give them a brisk rub with a piece of clean tissue paper each time before refilling with fresh food. This will keep them clean for several days. A little hemp seed can be added to the egg food, or a little piece of bread and milk by way of a change will be found beneficial.

Ringing the Youngsters.

If you wish to ring your youngsters, keep your eye on them. When they are about five or six days old, after shutting the hen away from them in the next compartment by means of the wooden slide (giving her a bit of green food to keep her busy), take the nest pan out of the cage and select one of the largest youngsters. Lay it on its back in the palm of your left hand, and after taking one of its feet between the thumb and first finger turn the second, third and fourth fingers over its body, holding the bird firmly yet gently. Then slip the ring over the three front toes, gently pull back the hind toe, which has been forced against the shank of its leg. Try the ring to see if it will slip off again, and if you find the rings will come off again easily leave these youngsters until the next day or longer if necessary, then try again. Where several pairs are put up for breeding the breeder will take the numbers of all the rings before he tries to put them on his young birds, each ring number being recorded against the parents of the youngster.

When about three weeks old the young birds will begin to leave the nest; but don't take the nest away until they begin to sleep at night on the perches, because for several days after they begin to leave the nest they will return to it again at night. Let them remain with the hen as long as they cry to be fed, and if the hen shows signs of wishing to nest again and begins to pluck them, place them in the next compartment and separate them from the hen with the wire slide. Place a perch low down close to this slide in both compartments, so that the hen can feed them easily through the wires. Give them a supply of egg food and crushed hemp seed, but no green food until after the moult. Do not supply a bath until they are fully feathered.

I should have mentioned before that a bath should be given the hen when the young ones are well pen feathered, as it will be remembered that I adivsed its removal on the day they were hatched.

A Water-bottle Cleaner.

Sent by Mr. H. E. Smith, 62, Tranquil Vale, Blackheath, S.E.

I send you an idea for cleaning out water-bottles, tins, etc., which is quite inexpensive, and a very useful addition to the bird-room. I have about 30 birds, and use the ordinary water-bottles for same. I found the keeping the bottles clean quite a business, until I hit upon this simple method, which consists of an ordinary hog-hair brush, as used for oil painting, which can be bought for a mere trifle; then I bend it with a pair of pliers to the required angle, as in sketch. I hope this idea will be of some use to your many readers.—H. E. Smith.

Fixing Water Glasses.

Sent by Mr. D. Wilson, 5, George Square, Biggar, N.B.

Many readers will be bothered with their water glasses being too slack in their wire supports, and being knocked out and broken. I send you a sketch of a wire support for glasses, which I have used with great success. Instead of making it straight round the glass, it should be bent up and down right round the glass. There is a springiness in this wire support which holds the glass firm and secure. I hope readers will see what I mean by the sketches.—Douglas Wilson.

this the reader is referred for more extended information.

Having advised one particular species as a commencement, it would seem appropriate to suggest five other species to make up to six pairs for such a cage as that already mentioned as suitable for the accommodation of a dozen small foreigners but, looking through even the first of the lists given, I confess myself unequal to the task. I want to recommend them all; the trouble is to leave some out, and this is beyond me. Anyway, the first six species mentioned, with a pair of Cordon Bleu thrown in, for these must not on any account be omitted, will perhaps meet the case; if not, the amateur must choose for himself: he will want another large cage before long, so it does not much matter how he makes up the first dozen or fourteen birds.

Nothing More Beautiful.

With Cordon Bleus he must reconcile himself to the prospect of many losses in freshly bought birds, more, probably, than with any other species. I myself have bought them by the dozen, and have been satisfied to get one pair to shake off the effects of the trouble they have undergone during their long journey. And they were worth it, for nothing more beautiful can be imagined than the delicate verditer blue colouration of these tiny birds. I once had a pair claimed at a bird show at the catalogue price of two guineas, and I was not over-pleased at losing them, although the money was sufficient to buy some sixteen pairs of freshly imported birds of their kind. Once acclimatised, they are long livers, and a pair will breed in quite a small cage. The sexes are alike in body plumage, but the cock is easily distinguishable by his crimson ear-coverts which are lacking in the hen. The blue-breasted Waxbills mentioned in the third list resemble the Cordon Bleus very closely, but the cock has no red on his cheeks; their only superiority over their more humble relatives lies in their rarity, and consequent greater monetary value.

In neither of the lists have I mentioned the Saffron Finch, and this is because, in my experience, I have found it a murderer of the deepest dye. I know that the experience of some others differs from my own, and many aviculturists have found this bird perfectly harmless in a mixed collection. Individuals differ, in birds as in men, and there are doubtless individual Saffron Finches whose behaviour is without reproach; but, nevertheless, with this species watchfulness is advisable, for even a one-time peaceful bird may at any moment "run amok" and scalped birds of any species up to the size of a Canary will be the result. They are good singers, and breed readily in an aviary, or even in an ordinary breeding cage; but even with a single pair safety is not assured, for the cock is very likely to eat the eggs as soon as laid, and sometimes he does not scruple to kill his own mate.

First Steps in Foreign Bird Keeping.

By H. J. FULLJAMES.

The beginner in the charming hobby of foreign bird keeping may make his own selection from among the lists already given, but he will be well advised to commence by purchasing say, half a dozen of one kind of the cheaper birds, and among these none could be better than the common Avadavat or Amadavade Waxbill, Estrilda amandava. Avadavats are advertised under several names, very often as Tiger Finches, sometimes as Red Munias or Red Waxbills.

These tiny mites are as interesting in their wonderful changes of plumage as any foreign bird that may be mentioned. In "out of colour" plumage there is very little to distinguish the sexes, both cock and hen then being somewhat soberly clad, but for the greater part of the year the cock is gorgeous in varied tints of crimson, fiery red, and brown; the "flanks," wings and tail-feathers in both sexes are conspicuously marked with brilliant white spots. Amongst the cocks themselves there is a great variety in the redness of the breeding plumage, those from the western portions of Asia being more richly coloured than their relatives from farther east.

Among the half-dozen newly-bought birds the purchaser must expect some losses; it will, however, be bad luck if he does not manage to keep at least one good pair. A decent-sized cage should have been provided for the new arrivals, this furnished with a cocoanut husk as a retiring place, and after a week or two the survivors may be introduced into the large cage described in the first of these articles, where they will form the nucleus of the collection.

Treatment of New Arrivals.

As soon as the birds reach their new owner they should be offered slightly chilled water, care being taken that they do not drink too much at once. Spray millet will be the best seed to offer them as a beginning. It may probably be the case that the newly purchased birds may be noticeably constipated, and the simplest remedy is bread and milk given in place of the drinking water (the milk sop should of course be made with boiling milk, and allowed to cool. It must not be kept long enough to become stale). A valuable remedy for constipation is easily made by dissolving two ounces of soda sulphate in twenty ounces (one pint) of boiled or distilled water, and this solution may be given every other day till relief is effected. Dinneford's Fluid Magnesia, a teaspoonful to the tinful of drinking water, may be used to the same purpose; this latter is absolutely tasteless.

Live food of some kind is the most valuable tonic that may be offered to birds that are run down, and if live ants' cocoons are procurable these form quite the most appreciated and most effective of all. Failing these, some dried ones of the very best grade may be steamed, or soaked in scalding water, and afterwards rubbed dry. The water in which they will have been soaked will be impregnated with formic acid, and should not be thrown away, for it is very beneficial to the birds if given in place of the plain drinking water. "Green-fly" also, as before mentioned, should be offered, and if the novice be enthusiastic enough to undertake the task, he might try a dodge of which I remember reading many years ago, this being to hang up in the sun a piece of "smelly" meat until it is struck by blow-flies. The eggs of the flies will soon hatch into tiny maggots, which may be shaken into a vessel of sand or earth, and given to the birds after they have therein cleansed themselves. I can quite believe that this is a very valuable wrinkle, but I confess I have never faced the unpleasantness of procuring the maggots.

Where Caution is Necessary.

After the collection has been started, new birds should never be added until they have undergone the quarantine process above outlined, or it may easily happen that disease will be introduced, and the whole lot of acclimatised birds thereby lost. Of course, the permanent collection may be made up more quickly by using more than one quarantine cage, each of which may have its own half-dozen of one kind of bird. These temporary cages should be of an inexpensive character, so that if any one of them becomes infected it will involve only a small loss to burn it outright. In any case, they should be scalded out, or otherwise disinfected, every time after use, so that they may be put away clean for a future occasion. There is a special "Nutshell," No. 9, treating fully upon the disinfection of cages, and to

Under the White Rose.

WHIST drive arranged by the Yorkshire C.C. took place on Saturday, March 18, at the Conservative Club, Girlington, and was fairly well patronised (considering the bad night); the result should put the club in a better position to start the year with than it has boasted for some years—all that has come in has been given away, and the secretary has had to lay down the money required for the first few weeks of each new year.

ALL the specialist clubs are now preparing the balance-sheets for last year, and from each comes the same wail in regard to defaulting members. For instance, the Open Norwich Plainhead Club balance-sheet would have been a little on the right side if all their members had paid up, and when the officials and committee of these clubs do their utmost to give all they can in prizes to the members, and try to keep the working expenses down to the lowest, the very least the members can do is to pay their subscriptions at the proper time and save the unnecessary writing and postage.

WILL all fanciers who are intending to join one or another of these clubs please note that now is the time to give in their names, as during the next few weeks the clubs will be calling the annual general meetings, and the work to be taken in hand the next season will be brought up. Therefore, if interested, you should be there, and see what is going to be done.

NEWS has reached me that a new society has been formed at Northowram. This is a little village near Halifax, and will no doubt receive much support from the surrounding districts, viz., Shelf, Stump Cross, Lightcliffe, Wyke, Hipperholme, etc. There are many breeders in this locality, and it will do much to open out the Fancy there. May they have their share of success!

THE prize distribution and social committee who had the work in hand for the great gathering held on March 11th had a meeting last week to settle up the few items still outstanding, and now all is over for another year everything has passed off happily and well, much to the credit of those concerned.

BRADFORD EAST O.S. annual show for next season is to be given up to the benefit of the Cinderella Club, and, more than that, the Easters are going to run it in conjunction with the Cinderella committee and others. More anon.

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

Very Vague.

S. G. F. H.—The only definite opinion I can form from your letter is that the hen was most palpably in an unfit condition to be mated, unless it is that the dull ruffled condition you suggest came on suddenly after she was mated. Certainly you must know that all birds—or, at any rate, all normally healthy Canaries—put their heads "under their wings," to use the popular phrase, at night, so the fact of this hen doing it suggests nothing at all out of the ordinary. Separate her for the present, and see what two or three weeks of the following treatment will do for her. Give a staple of plain canary seed only. Every second day give separately a half-teaspoonful of summer rape, and on the alternate days a similar quantity of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed. Twice a week give a small teaspoonful of a mixture of two parts hemp, inga, millet, and teazle, and one part each linseed and gold of pleasure. Give a leaf of dandelion or spray of chickweed daily. In the water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence for three consecutive days, and afterwards four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a week.

Hen Shunning Nest.

Crypto.—For one thing you did not put the birds together quite soon enough to give them time to settle down and build a nest. In a case like this when the hen is so forward that it is a question of her laying almost at once, whether the cock is introduced or not there is nothing for it but to take the risk of mating. In addition to this, you might have been a little too inquisitive with the nest pan, seeing that the little dear makes it so get-at-able, which would help to unsettle the hen. You might have saved the situation by giving her a nest in a small nestbox on the floor, where she could lay, and when the cock was removed he should have been taken out of her sight. It is quite probable she may manage things better next time. Keep her apart a fortnight from the time you remove her, and give her a little egg food every second day, and on the alternate days a pinch of a mixture of two parts hemp and inga to one part each linseed, maw, and gold of pleasure. Give a leaf of dandelion daily. Give a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a pea in the water for two days. When you mate her again leave the nest quite alone, and if you remove the cock when she begins to sit, and she leaves the nest in a few hours, you must return him and let them take their chance, as she may be one of those contrary ones which will not sit without him being present, but if he is a brute.

Nesting Material and Egg Food.

Spivinix.—If you get all nice soft hay like the sample you send, and see that it contains no hard woody twigs with long thorns cut into lengths, as proposed, it will make very good and serviceable material for forming the bulk of the nest, and either the "teazled out" pelt, or cow hair, or a mixture of both, will do very well for lining when the birds get a fairly substantial structure and cup formed out of the cut hay. Too much importance is often attached to the suggestion that cow hair causes hens to sweat young. It is extremely doubtful if it ever does. Still there is no advantage to be gained by allowing hens to make large nests almost entirely of cow-hair, as they will do if a sufficient supply is available. In such a case I should prefer the "teazled out" felt, which is not quite so warm as the hair. I would advise you to use a little hair mixed with the felt for the first round of nests, and then when the weather is warmer use the felt alone as a lining material. By the way, you would do well to read the remarks on "Sweating Hens" in "Our Canaries." I have never tried the food of which you send sample for rearing young, so cannot speak from personal experience. Some claim to have done well with it, and, as a general tit-bit, in which way I have used it a little, I think it is very good. If you want to make a change I see no reason why you should not try it, especially if your birds take well to it. But as the one you have hitherto used seems to have served you well, I should say stick to it for at least a portion of your stock until you have proved this new favourite.

Breeding in Indoor Aviary.

Floss.—You would probably get better results by dividing the aviary into two separate spaces, with a cock and two hens in one part, and a cock and three hens in the other, than you would by running all together in the whole space. Although the aviary is a good size, it is not large enough to preclude the probability of two cocks causing trouble. If you divide it into two you should put in the partition as a second floor, and thus make two large flights 11ft. long and 4ft. high. If the aviary could be conveniently divided into eight spaces, by putting in two partitions as extra floors at equal distances apart, and then dividing the bottom in two spaces of 5ft. 6in. by 2ft. 8in. high, and each of the two upper spaces divided into three equal parts, each of which would be about 2ft. 8in. high, by 3ft. 8in. long, you might do best of all by discarding one of the hens and keeping a hen in each of four of the smaller spaces, and a cock in each of the other two, and run one cock with two hens alternately as advised to another querist this week. The two bottom spaces would serve admirably as flights for the young as soon as they were doing for themselves. You might also run six hens and three cocks in these pairs by keeping one of the cock in a small cage, and the other two in the flights when not engaged with the hens.

Outdoor Birdroom and Mating.

L.S.W. (Birmingham).—(7) Your outdoor birdroom appears to be a very snug and bright little place, and I anticipate that your birds, after being kept under their present conditions, will thrive very well in it. You may safely take advantage of the first spell of nice mild weather to remove them to this room. At time of writing we are still in the thick of the bitterly cold, stormy weather, and the change should not be made whilst such conditions prevail, but may be safely carried out as soon as the weather breaks and becomes mild for a day or two. (2) If you want to breed a fair proportion of clears and ticked from the yellow cock, use a clear buff hen bred from a clear and a ticked mating. Remove the cock from the first hen on the evening after the third egg is laid when you put the hen to sit. The whole procedure you will find given in another reply in this issue. It would certainly not be advisable to run the two hens and cock all together in one cage. It would mean certain failure. (3) You have omitted to say whether the variegated cock is yellow or buff. To get the best proportion of clears and ticks, mate him with a clear hen bred from two clears. If he is a variegated yellow, use a clear buff hen or hens, and vice versa. You will be almost certain to get a rather large proportion of ticks or lightly variegated from him. If he is well-grown, strong, and vigorous, there is no reason why you should not run him with two hens.

Roller Matters.

R. Devon.—I am placing all your queries under one head to economise our non-elastic space. (1) The hen that has refused to sit on her first nest of eggs this season is beyond the reach of argument. You can do nothing to bring her to reason, so try to smile and compliment her on her up-to-date principles. The only way out of the difficulty would have been to distribute her eggs amongst the other hens that were commencing to sit, giving one to each with four eggs, or two to any with only three eggs. Do this next time, if necessary, though it is quite probable she may sit all right next time. (2) The hen that was eggbound may quite recover the strength of her wing and side whilst sitting. Add 20 drops of whisky and six of tincture of gentian to the water for a day or two. Also as a precaution try to keep, or get, another hen available to take over her brood if she should fail in her duty after young are hatched. There is a certain amount of risk of this happening in such a case. (3) Unless the dietary you mention for the cock has only been commenced quite recently, you have been feeding him much too generously. Give a staple of two parts canary to one part summer rape. Twice a week only give half a teaspoonful of egg food, or crushed sponge cake, or a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with maw seed. You may give each of them in rotation for a change. Once or twice a week give a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, millet, and teazle, and give a little green food four or five time a week. Stop all other foods. In the water give as much sulphate of soda as will cover a sixpence, and ten drops of lemon juice every second day for a week, and in the next week give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day.

Rape Seed (Ajax).—The sample is a good all-round summer rape, but whether it owes its existence to German soil or not I cannot presume to aver from looking at the seed. Neither, in my opinion, does it matter a jot whether a seed is grown in Germany or England so long as it is the right variety, and well harvested and stored. The so-called English rape is frequently nothing but "ketlock," and is not the best the exact opposite would be much nearer correct.

Loss of Voice (Jno. Williams). The bird has probably been exposed to draught, or to extremes of heat and cold during the late stormy weather. You must first correct this. Keep it in a comfortable and equable temperature, though not necessarily a very high one. Give a piece of bread the size of a hazel nut soaked in milk, drained, two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with maw seed, every second day for a week. On the alternate days give a morsel of paste the size of a large pea, composed of two teaspoonfuls of honey, as much chlorate of potash as will cover a shilling, and a third of this quantity of grain of paradise, well mixed together on a warm plate, and sufficiently finely powdered biscuit added to form a paste rather softer than putty. When cold it will get harder. Press a little on the end of the perch for bird to peck off as a convenient form of giving it.

Hemp Seed (E. Sharman).—The sample of seed sent is thoroughly bad—old, rancid, and rotten—and has, in addition, at some time been infested with some pest. It would be positively dangerous to use for feeding Canaries rearing young, and leaves no doubt as to the cause of the birds' dying.

Young in Aviary (Comfort).—I understand from your letter that the birds are flying loose in the aviary, in which case you will have no necessity to use nursery cages, as when the young leave the nest, either the cock or both parents, or possibly, any of the cocks will answer their calls for food, and attend to their wants until they are able to do for themselves. When the young are getting fledged leave them severely alone in order to keep them in the nest as long as possible. Nesting places formed of German travelling cages would also help in this direction.

Of Doubtful Sex (B. C.).—I am afraid I cannot give you any encouragement to hold on to the belief that the Roller is a cock. Give it a small teaspoonful of egg food or crushed sponge cake sprinkled with a pinch of a mixture of equal parts maw and gold of pleasure seed every second day, and on the alternate days a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, teazle, and millet, and one or two young dandelion leaves daily. Then as soon as the weather gets mild again get a good singing cock and mate with it, and I think it will soon show proof of its true sex.

Altering Aviary (F. Thompson).—I have returned your sketch with suggestions marked on it. I see no necessity to discard this building and get another, as you would in all probability still have to make similar alterations to render it suitable for your purpose, and it will not be a difficult matter to make this one serviceable. When the spaces indicated are opened out and covered with perforated zinc and the interior lined with match-boards, leaving spaces inside corresponding with the ventilating apertures, the space between the two thicknesses of wood filled in with wool waste or sawdust to prevent draught getting through, and the little alteration made in the window, it will probably convert the place into a very tolerable breeding room. Let me hear result when it has been tested.

Crest-bred's Singing (Con.).—Yes, in a general way, one would say that all Crest-bred cocks do sing, just the same as we would say that all Norwich, Yorkshire, or even Roller cocks sing. But this does not alter the fact that exceptions may, and do, occur in every breed where a cock does not sing. Still, given a healthy, robust, and fairly young bird, I should not guarantee its being a cock if it never sang a note unless it had proved its sex in the breeding cage. Of course, in rejecting such a bird there is the possibility of casting aside a genuine cock, but it is always best for the novice who is doubtful to be guided by the general rule, and not "build castles" upon rare exceptions that may or may not be the thing desired.

Is it Possible? (Stanley E. Avery).—The hen seems to be a cinnamon-marked cross-bred. It is quite possible to breed clear young from her, but you must not expect to produce all clears. No matter what kind of cock you use, there will be more or less ticked or lightly marked birds. You do not say what your object is, but as you admit she is a cross-bred, I take it you have no particular object in view beyond breeding clear birds, possibly for songsters, and in that case you cannot do better than mate her back to a clear pink-eyed Yorkshire cock, and one that has as much clear blood as possible in his veins. If both his parents were clear pink-eyed birds so much the better; but avoid using a black-eyed bird—that is, one quite free from cinnamon blood.

Not Nesting (T. E. E. T. D.).—You put the birds together too early, before they were ready for mating. The prevailing conditions of weather for past fortnight must already have convinced you that the birds were the wisest not to start. I expect they may set to work in earnest at any time, perhaps by the time this appears, so you had better leave them together, and exercise the estimable virtue of patience. For staple diet give a mixture of three parts Canary to one part of summer rape. Every second day give a teaspoonful of egg food or crushed sponge cake sprinkled with a little maw and gold of pleasure mixed in equal parts, and on the alternating days a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, and teazle. Give two or three dandelion leaves daily. Continue this dietary until the hen has laid.

One Male with Two Hens (W. Skegg).—It is quite possible to do this. Put a hen in each side of the breeding cage and keep the slide in between them. It would also be best to block up the hole at the bottom of the partition with a piece of cardboard, or by pasting a piece of thick brown paper over it, to keep both compartments quite private for the hens. When all are ready for mating put the cock in with the hen that is most forward, and when she has gone to nest and laid her third egg, remove him and put him with the other hen. When this hen has laid and begins to sit, remove the cock and cage him alone, leaving both hens to hatch and rear by themselves. Repeat the performances with the second round. Should both hens get equally forward and start building about same time, run the cock with one from, say, mid-day one day until mid-day the next day, then remove him to the other compartment for a similar period, so that he is running for about one-half of each day with each hen.

Occasional Fits (F. S.).—You ought to have said how you feed. This may possibly have something to do with the fits. You should also try to discover when they happen whether any unusually alarming sight, sound, or movement, is responsible for them, and, if so, protect the bird from these causes, and the effects would disappear. Give a staple diet of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Twice a week give either a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, sprinkled with maw seed, or an equivalent quantity of bread, soaked in milk, drained, and sprinkled with soft sugar. Occasionally, say once a week, give the same quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, millet, inga, and teazle. Every second day, for the first fortnight, and then daily throughout the summer, give a small spray of some green food—chickweed, dandelion, watercress, or flower heads of groundsel. In the water add as much sulphate of soda as will cover a sixpence, and half the quantity of bromide of potash every second day for a week after the occurrence of each fit. If this does not prevent their repetition write again, and give more particulars concerning your management, and the surroundings of the bird.

Garden Frame Aviary (Pitman).—The aviary you propose making is most unfavourably situated, and although you may quite possibly succeed with it during the summer I doubt whether you would meet with any success during winter and spring, and should not advise you to attempt to keep birds in it all the year round. If you decide to utilise it for breeding, wire inside the top as suggested that you may keep the glass frames raised in the heat of summer, and keep an inch deep layer of coarse gritty sand with a little old pounded mortar mixed in it on the floor. Two cocks and five hens would be quite sufficient to stock it, and if very successful you will need to remove the first round of young when able to do for themselves. From the middle to end of April will be best time to turn out birds, taking advantage of any spell of mild settled weather about that time to make the change.

Warring Opinions (A. New Novice).—I do not think the birds were ready to mate although rather forward, consequently the hen is only playing at nesting. The hen makes a big show of starting house-keeping, but I suspect the truth is she does not "call" to the cock, and perhaps pays little heed to him except when he gets too meddlesome with her perfunctory arrangements. He, with more foresight, perhaps scenting the snap of wretched weather we have been experiencing, thought it wiser to postpone matters awhile, hence their diametrically opposed actions. Just let matters slide for the present and possess your soul in patience. In all probability as soon as the weather becomes mild again she will begin to call the cock, and then you will find matters run more smoothly between them.

Pulling Tail Feathers (A. W. H.).—What harm does the bird do in pulling its own tail feathers unless it curls them? All healthy birds may be said to pull them a good deal when preening themselves. It is just possible these may do something to irritate the bird, and as your method of feeding may be improved upon the following treatment should, in that case, set matters right. As a staple diet give a mixture of three parts Canary to one part summer rape only. Once or twice a week give a small teaspoonful of the packet seed as a treat. Every second day for a week give a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with maw seed, and a leaf of dandelion or spray of chickweed daily. In the drinking water give a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a pea and ten drops of lemon juice for three days, and afterwards six drops of tincture of gentian and four of aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a week. A bit of cuttle-fish stuck between the wires would help to divert its attention. The sample of Canary seed is very small indeed and has a slight foreign flavour which would make me eye it with suspicion.

Bad Feet (M. B.).—Keep the cage floor and perches scrupulously clean, and if you covered the floor well with sawdust instead of sand until the feet were better it would help them by maintaining a dryer and cleaner condition on the floor. Bathe the foot that festered in a fairly hot solution of boracic acid—a small teaspoonful of acid dissolved in a saucerful of hot water. After bathing for a few minutes dry gently and anoint foot all over with zinc ointment. Repeat daily as long as necessary. After anointing foot wipe off all superfluous ointment to prevent its gathering dust and filth about the foot. The other foot which was bitten by the parrot will probably never recover. It is not unlikely to have a dislocated joint, or the bones may have been broken and formed callosities. Any interference will probably do more harm than good. When the other foot has healed you may try the above hot bath for this one, using it daily for a week, and painting the foot afterwards with tincture of iodine. You will, of course, use ointment on this foot. If this does not remove the swelling I advise you not to interfere further.

Hen Lost Voice (X. Y. Z.).—One does not usually expect a hen to display the possession of a "voice" very markedly. I presume you mean that her usual call notes are absent or obstructed. Most of her other symptoms suggest nothing worse than a catarrhal cold, doubtless due to the prevailing weather, and the frequent scratching may be due to the presence of grey lice. Examine bird first for this pest, and also the cage for red mites, and if either are found take the necessary steps as frequently detailed in these replies to obliterate them. See that the hen is protected from draughts and great fluctuations, and in addition to the seed diet give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed, every second day for a week. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of buckthorn for two days, and afterwards 20 drops of whisky, six each of oxymel of squills, and sweet spirits of nitre, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, every second day for a week.

Worms Suspected (A. H.).—If you have no ocular proof of worms by finding them in the excreta, there is nothing in the symptoms you name particularly suggestive of them. Treat as follows for a fortnight, and if that does not set matters right, write again referring to this reply, and say whether any worms have been seen. For staple diet give a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Every second day give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it and sprinkled with a mixture of equal parts maw and gold of pleasure seed. On the alternate days give a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, teazle, and millet. Give a leaf of dandelion daily. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every second day for a week, and in the next week give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid, every second day. See that seeds are sound and sweet, and keep cage strewn with clean gritty sand.

Outdoor Shed, etc. (C.J.P.).—The fluctuations in the shed are rather great considering it is double-boarded, and are probably largely due to the one end being covered with tin, and perhaps is not covered with anything but single boards. If you replaced the tin with matchboards, or covered it with felt, and covered the top with felt, it would doubtless make a vast improvement. Also, if the ventilation holes in the end of the top were cut out in one small square opening and the space covered with perforated zinc, as advised to "F. Thompson," it would still further equalise the temperature. It should then form quite a serviceable birdroom to which you could remove the birds during a spell of fine weather towards the end of April. As they have been kept in the kitchen it would probably not be safe to remove them earlier. The pair which now has eggs should be allowed to hatch and bring off the brood before removing them and move them before they start on the second nest. If the cinnamon marked cock is a buff, and the yellow hen is a pink-eyed bird, they would—other typical points matching—make a suitable pair. You see you omitted to mention the most important details in this last query, so I cannot be more definite.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., etc.

Pekin Robin.

A Shore.—The Pekin Robin can be kept in the kitchen, but it must be in some position where it can get light and air without draught, and it should then do well; neither do I think that the song of the Larks will constrain the Pekin to silence; I am of the opinion that it may set up a spirit of emulation. There is so much individualism in birds that it is impossible to give a definite reply, but a little observation should soon settle the point for you as regards your individual bird. If it does not sing after a reasonable period, or only fitfully, then place it in another room, not necessarily out of reach of the Lark's song, but where he will hear it softened by a little distance. When keeping bird in a kitchen, in addition to their getting light and air, without draught, they should be kept where the temperature is most regular, that is, where least affected by the fluctuation caused by cooking operations or their suspension.

About Budgerigars.

R. H. Withers.—(1) The Green Budgerigar is the original species, the Yellow is a colour variety of the same. The latter is an all yellow bird with faint green scalings; while the former is principally green, with dusky black variations on the head and upper surface, the green is very rich and intense in well-coloured specimens. (2) Both varieties breed equally freely, but while the market value of the Green variety is worth about 5/- per pair, that of the Yellow variety is 8/6, and as the cost of keep is the same, the latter are the more profitable to breed. Both are about equal as to beauty. (3) Yes, but the young would have to be taken away as soon as they could fend for themselves, as you will readily see that your cage would be uncomfortably full if two broods leave the nest simultaneously. They require no artificial heat; in fact, should have all the air possible without draught. I have had several satisfactory transactions with the dealer you name, but each pair should come from a different source. Your book will give you all other details of treatment.

Grey Parrot Unwell.

Mrs. B. M.—You should have sent full details as to how you had been feeding the bird, also examine its mouth and see if it is furred, or if there are any cheesy growths there, and report to me per return of post. Give one-third of a teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia direct to the mouth. As the bird appears unable to swallow the biscuit and seed, you had better give a little milk sop, made from crumbled sponge cake and milk; boil both up together, and supply to the bird while just warm (a little Mellin's food in the sop would be an advantage), this is merely to stave off starvation. The sop would be unwholesome if continued for any lengthy period, so in conjunction therewith supply boiled maize; boil till soft, draw away all moisture possible, and give the bird a little daily, and as soon as it is eating this freely, gradually discontinue the milk sop. Put a little honey and borax in its mouth twice daily, and as a slight stimulant give a little very weak brandy and water (chilled), a few sips several times during the day. It is really a case for a veterinary surgeon, who should be able to diagnose the case, as I cannot do at this distance. A slight operation or some acid solution might give the bird almost immediate relief, but these extreme measures can only be taken after seeing the bird.

A Garden Aviary.

Mrs. Shilcock.—You really have not a sufficiently large shelter to supply accommodation for the birds your flight would contain. If you care to send me a ground plan of your aviary, showing N., S., E., W., and a stamped addressed envelope, I will with pleasure send you a diagram showing how this can be remedied, which can be done with but little trouble and expense. You can accommodate 25 to 30 pairs in your aviary, the open part of which should be planted with bushes creepers, grasses, etc. Laurel, barberries, rose, privet, fir, larch, everlasting peas, hops,(wild clematis, currants (red and black), and fruit bushes generally, are all safe, and make excellent cover for the birds. I advise only one pair each Goldfinch, Greenfinch, and Redpoll. You will find a good selection from the following: Waxbills: Grey, St. Helena, Orange-cheeked, Goldeu-breasted, Sydney, common and green Avadavat. Finches: Zebra, Ribbon, Diamond, Cherry, Parson, Chestnut, Pectoral, Alario, Cuba, Red-headed, Aurora. Grey and green singing, long and rufous-tailed grass. Mannikins: Bronze, Magpie, white-headed, black-headed, tricolour, and Bengalese. Miscellaneous: African and Indian Silverbills, Pekin Robins, Java Sparrows, Indigo Buntings, Paradise Whydah, Diamond Doves, and Chinese painted Quails. You could make a selection from the above, any of which should succeed with you, if you modify your aviary as indicated above.

Foreign Bird Querists will find in our handbook, "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1/1, and "Budgerigars and Cockaticls," 6d. post free; a mine of information of use and interest.

Green Parrot in Bad Plumage (R. Easton).—The bird is evidently pulling out its own plumage Please inform me how you have been feeding and treating the bird. In the meantime give one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water every fourth day, and on the intermediate days well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. The main diet should consist of seed mixture, with ripe fruit, nuts, plain biscuit, grit, cuttlebone, and water. When feather picking becomes pronounced it is next to impossible to break a bird of the habit.

Parrot with Parasites (Maconechy).—Administer areca nut powder direct to the beak, and keep the bird stimulated by chemical food in the drinking water. Mix into a pellet with a little syrup as much areca nut powder as will lie on a threepenny bit, and give one of these on two successive days, and then repeat every third or fourth day till the parasites are got rid of. Supply to the bird as much ripe fruit, plain biscuit, nuts, and seed mixture as it cares to take. Report a week hence describing the action of the remedy on the bird, and also the condition of the excreta (many or few parasites). The areca nut will act as an aperient, and while this is necessary, if the bird appears badly scoured, repeat query at once and mark it urgent.

Birds for Cage (R. A. G.).—An all-wire cage in the position you name would be rather liable to draught, and the hardiest of species soon succumb to the latter, so you must arrange that when shop door is open there is not a wind passing through the cage. You cannot with safety keep Budgerigars and Finches together in the cage, why not be content with one pair of Budgerigars; these are handsome and interesting birds, whichever variety you have, and if you hung up a couple of hunks sooner or later they would breed. Here is another selection: Pairs of Common and Green Avadavats, cocks only, Grey and Green Singing Finches, Alario Finch, and a pair of Zebra Waxbills, total value about 30/-. Here is another: Pairs of St. Helena Waxhills, and Zebra Finches; cocks only, Madagascar Weaver, Grey Singing Finch, Cuban Finch, and red-crested Cardinal—total value about 45/-. A Shama is a beautiful and interesting bird, fine songster, soon becomes quite tame and confiding, and your cage is just about the right size for it. Value about 40/- to 50/-, according to quality of specimen.

Madagascar Lovebirds (Rastus).—The ben Madagascar is an all green bird, while the cock has the whole of the head and neck pale silvery-grey, the remainder of its plumage being green. This species require rather a roomy log or nest box which they line with bark, leaves, etc., and you must supply the latter in the form of live branches, from which they will strip the bark; later supply the branches with the leaves on, and the birds will do the rest. Though a species which is quite ready to go to nest, yet in many aviaries they do not seem to enter into it seriously, and the instances of complete success are by no means numerous.

Breeding Budgerigars (Marriott).—You might try picking up the unbroken eggs and putting them in one or more of the husks you see the birds frequent, but I am of the opinion that very shortly you will find the birds settle down. Such demeanour often occurs at the commencement of the breeding season, and with newly introduced birds. Sexual excitement runs very high at this period. You might inform me as to the general demeanour of the birds. Do they agree? Are the sexes equal? And I will try and further advise you; but I opine they will settle down later. Our Nutshell Booklet, "Budgerigars and How to Keep Them," 2½d. post free from our manager, should assist you.

Budgerigar's Beak (Novice).—If this bird's beak is twisted, as would appear to be the case from your query, I am afraid nothing can be done for it, and I presume the deformity has resulted either from an injury or as the after effect of some growth. If the beak is overgrown it must be trimmed back to normal size; I am aware this reply is not satisfactory to you, but unless you can give me fuller details I cannot be more definite. Cannot you get some local fancier of some experience to look at it for you, or your local vet.? If the crossing of the mandibles is the result of overgrowth most certainly it can, and must be, cut back, but not sufficiently far to cause bleeding.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by G. E. Weston.

Nightingales at the Palace Show (J. Morley).—No British birds at the Palace show are judged for their song (the Roller Canaries, in fact, are the only exceptions to this rule). The first prize Nightingale earned its position by reason of its excellence as an example of the species and the excellence of its condition.

Seed Screenings (W. H. P.). — Your sample of threshing machine screenings is very crude, coarse stuff, and a great deal of it would be purely waste (compare it with other wild seeds on the market). Still, for use in an aviary it would be alright, and I have no doubt that Greenfinches, Chaffinches, Linnets, etc., would "scratch out" a few tit-bits from amongst it.

A Small Aviary (Geo.).—I advise you to run the Goldie-Bullie and Greenie-Bullie pairs together for a few weeks in cages, before turning them into the aviary. Then you will stand a fair chance of success, though I must say that two hen Bullies in a small enclosure can on occasion be very "obstreperous." You should certainly take the eggs away from the hen Bullies; give them a Canary egg or two, if you like, so that, if they lay a clutch and want to sit, they can follow their natural inclinations. What cock birds do you purpose putting in with the hen Canaries?

Two Cuckoos (Mrs. E. M. S.).—I advise you to get a bottle of cod liver oil and syrup of hypophosphates (combined), and let each bird have at least a small teaspoonful daily amongst its soft food. See what effect a course of this has. You could vary it with extract of malt and hypophosphates. I really don't think that the "fretting" has anything to do with the matter; and I certainly should not give crushed hemp to them. It is disappointing, I agree. Your letter is very interesting.

A Bramble, and a possible Hybrid (T. B. D.).—The Bramblefinch is fed on almost exactly similar lines to the Chaffinch, and you should get our "Nutshell" booklet dealing with the latter bird, which will give you very full information. The matter was dealt with, too, in Mr. Prior's recent article. I expect the feathers have been worn away in the dealer's cage, and in this case they will not come again until the next moult. If they were pulled out, then they will have grown again in about 5 weeks' time. I should certainly leave the Yellowhammer and Corn Bunting together in the aviary, as there is a chance of their producing a Hybrid. The fact that the couple feed each other is certainly more-or-less promising. A said-to-be Hybrid between these birds was exhibited at the last Scottish National (Edinburgh) Show.

In An Aviary (L. E. T. Cowtan).—A few healthy German hen Canaries ought to thrive well in your aviary; but it would not be safe to turn in newly-imported birds until the weather becomes warm. On this account, perhaps, hen Border Fancies would suit you better; they can be obtained cheaply, and also cold-room bred. Give the hen Chaffinch a little good insectile mixture daily, containing plenty of ants' eggs and offer also a couple of nice fat mealworms. In addition to the ordinary seeds, give a dessertspoonful of cracked sunflower one day, and a teaspoonful of mixed hemp and wild seeds the next. Mate her with a steady cock Brambleficnch. I should think half-a-dozen British birds would be the limit (in addition to the Canaries).

Trouble (B. M.).—I don't think that the Linnet and Siskin cocks will give any trouble. Either may quite likely take to himself a hen to wife; but then there are plenty of hens to go round. One cock-bird generally dances attendance upon the same hen. But funny results sometimes come about. For instance, I have known a cock Chaffinch remain by the side of a hen Canary all summer in an aviary, and make a great fuss of her, but all the youngsters hatched turned out to be ordinary dark Goldfinch Mules. Evidently she had not been true to him. The disappointment and disgust of the owner can be imagined. But he accepted the evidence of his eyes, and did not endeavour to get the young birds accepted as "Chaffinch-Canary" Mules.

Singing Contests.

Linnet singing contest held at Number One Social Club, March 25th. Thirty-one birds faced the judge. 1, 2, J. Walker (Burnbope); 3, Owens. Judge, Mr. T. Settrey. Mr. J. Smart timekeeper.

DURHAM

Linnet sing, held Black Horse, Elvet, March 18th, when 28 birds entered. Result: 1, 3, Bailes; 2, M'Quirck. Also March 25th, same house. Result: 1, 2, 3, Bailes; 4, M'Quirck; 16 birds entered; judge, Mr. J. Stout (Brandon).—Geo. Reed, Sec.

BLACKBURN.

At a meeting of the National Quality Linnet S.A., held Old Red Lion, Snig Brook, it was decided to have at our All England contests time and quality singing, but at our own club contests quality singing alone. Our all England contest takes place Easter Saturday, April 15th, when prizes will be given for time and quality. The proprietor will give £1 to an entrance fee of 1s. per bird.—T. Slater, Sec.

WIGAN.

Wigan Linnet Club, open contest, held Weavers' Arms, Scholes, March 25th, when 20 birds entered for time and quality. They came from Wigan, Standish, Westhoughton, Leigh. Some very good singing was heard before a fine company. Winners for quality: 1, T. Statham; 2, M. Yates. For time: 1, S. Woodward; 2, R. Layland; 3, J. W. Jones. Judge for quality, Mr. T. Statham; timekeepers, Messrs. A. Parker, J. Mawdsley, and R. Macfarlane. —A. Parker, Sec.

In stating, last week, that we were having an open contest for time and quality on April 15 next, I said that the contest would be held at the "Hare and Hounds," Standish; this was a mistake. The contest will be held at the "Dog and Partridge," Standish.—Geo. Milligan, Sec., Standish Linnet Club.

HULL.

Hull L.F.A. weekly contest, held headquarters, Grapes Tavern, Brook Street (opposite Paragon Station), where 20 birds were entered for three good timepieces. 1, Norton; 2, Broadbent; 3, Keating. Judge, Mr. F. Allen; timekeeper, Mr. Thundercliff. Fanciers wishing to enter for great open to all England contest, Easter Monday, should write at once. As Mr. Green has never replied to mine (re his challenge, wishing me to sing him on his own terms), I presume he has thrown it over. Now, I wish all Linnet singers to understand that no notice will be taken of any more challenges.—F. Allen, Hon. Sec.

LEEDS.

Open Linnet singing contest, for quality, held Spring Hill Tavern, Buslingthorpe Lane, March 25th —the first of its kind held here. It was a great success. Mr. Fielding gave three good prizes; 19 birds competed. Result: 1, Brook; 2, 3, Wood. Judge, Mr. J. Green; timekeeper, Mr. J. Peat. LEIGH.

Globe Inn Linnet Club of Leigh, held open-to-all-England Linnet contest, Union Arms, Tyldesley, when the entry surprised all. To get an entry of 50 at your first venture sounds well, and not only that, there were several gentlemen who came to the contest who eagerly wanted us to run another contest in Tyldesley, as they were so pleased at the way the contests were managed. At next contest we intend to try and open a club in Tyldesley on the same lines as ours, and I am almost sure it will be a success. We gave 4 prizes for each class at Tyldesley. Prize winners for quality: 1, W. H. Topping (Blackburn); 2, Maudsley (Apply Bridge); 3, J. W. Jones (Leigh); 4, H. Brown (Leigh). For time: 1, R. Statham (Leigh), 140; 2, J. Linnet In Cross Moult (N. G. Bangor).—No doubt the fact that the bird has been "carried out of the cold room occasionally" is at the bottom of its failing into a cross moult. Sudden changes of temperature are bad. There is no means of checking it once the feathers have begun to fall freely. But it will soon be over if the bird is kept in an equable temperature and well fed. Give it a teaspoonful of good hemp seed on alternate days, and the same quantity of the following mixture on the days you are not giving the hemp: maw, niger, dandelion, thistle, gold of pleasure, and white lettuce, equal parts of each, by measure. In the drinking water on alternate days stir a small teaspoonful of Parrish's Chemical Food; plain water in between.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

F. G. Pugsley.—The bird was in a very depleted and emaciated condition. The bowels were in a very inflammatory state, such as might be induced by impurities or ptomaines introduced with the food or water. There was nothing infectious, nor was there any other sign of disease affecting any other organs of the body. I should advise the use of a little permanganate of potash in the drinking water, using just sufficient to colour slightly. Give this every alternate day, and on the intervening days give to each 10 drops of infusion of gentian concentrated and mixed in the water to drink. Thoroughly examine your seed; see that it is sweet and free from mould; clean same before feeding by rubbing between the folds of a clean damp cloth. I am of opinion that the source of origin is connected with the food.

Jos. Forster. High condition will, and often does, produce the condition you mention, but more frequently it is brought about by the agency of parasites, many of them invisible to the naked eye. When of the latter origin there is a quantity of scurf and scales which in time may appear as incrustations accompanied by great irritation. For safety of application and efficacy I find sulphurretted potash very satisfactory where parasites are the cause. In those cases arising from constitutional causes, a dose of glauber salts administered twice weekly is of great benefit. Warmth in all cases is essential, as a bird denuded of its plumage or part, readily takes cold and might easily succumb to pneumonia. The bird I examined died of exhaustion consequent upon bowel trouble, which showed small ulcerations throughout. I cannot conceive the egg food as the cause, but am inclined to think that there was a pre-existing weakness, and that the sudden change to egg food acted as the exciting cause of the disease.

Blue Pigeon.—Structural disease of the heart is not common amongst birds, nor is this species more predisposed than others. Functional disease of nervous origin, however, is fairly common, and indicated by faintness, hurried breathing, acceleration of the heart's beat under excitement, when in high condition, and particularly in the early part of the breeding season. The blood pressure becomes high, and blood vessels frequently give way. This is what had occurred in the bird you sent; one of the pulmonary vessels had ruptured, with the consequent escape of blood and death from internal hemorrhage. There existed quite a large clot enveloping the heart, which had escaped from the lungs. I have met with several cases of a similar nature of late, where death has occurred quite suddenly, the bird just previously singing most vigorously, then all at once seen to fall from the perch. It is at this period, particularly with birds in high condition, that a saline aperient is indicated as a precautionary measure. The remains have been buried as desired.

Cure Wanted for Diarrhœa in Linnets.

Sir,—Will one of your numerous readers who goes in for the keeping of Linnets kindly tell me through Cage Birds what is the best cure for diarrhœa in Linnets? Linnet.

Are Birds Fruit Eaters?

Sir,—In reply to a letter in your issue of February 25th over the signature of "M. L. S.," allow me to ask your correspondent if he will give me the privilege of catching birds on his ground. In return therefore I will teach him how to catch birds. My address I leave with you. J. Tye.

Early Linnet Mules.

Sir,—I should like to ask you if there are any Linnet Mules about yet, as my friends and fanciers tell me it is far too early. But I may say that I have one, and I feel sure it is a cock bird, it is such a fine specimen. It came out on the sticks first time on March 18th (hatched on Pancake Tuesday). Bred between brown Linnet and Germany Canary hen, clear buff. She laid two eggs and hatched one.

D. J. Porter.

A Twenty-four Year Old Canary.

Is it a Record Age?

Sir,—We have in our district a very aged bird. It is twenty-four years old; hatched at Esher Lodge, Surrey, on March 17, 1887. It is a yellow Yorkshire Canary, and is now living at Beltz Green Farm, Bicknor, near Sittingbourne, the property of Mrs. Foster. It is bald-headed, but appears to be in very good health, though it does not come up any higher than the first perch. I should be pleased to know if any of your readers have got, or have heard of, any older Canary than this, and would kindly state so in your splendid paper, Cage Birds.

The Lizard Canary.

Sir,—I note in Cage Birds of March 25th, under the above heading, a letter complaining that I had given a standard of a Lizard Canary, or what I termed an ideal bird without giving the source of my information or crediting same to the L. and L.F.A. I am indeed sorry that my esteemed and honoured friend, Mr. John Rukin, should have in any way been put about. I have profound respect for the Lancashire and Lizard F.A., and when I gave my lecture to the members of the Hanley and District C.B.S. and quoted the Lizard standard in question, I did it with one object, and that was to help to bring the Fancy to the front, and to encourage others to take up the Lizard Canary. The standard that I quoted was made public some years ago through the columns of Cage Birds, and, naturally enough, one would think that he was on public ground in repeating same. I trust this brief explanation will give satisfaction. Henry Cooke.

Can Yellows be Bred by Double-Buffing?

A Reader is Satisfied of the Impossibility.

Sir,—Having read the remarks on double-buffing, etc., by Mr. A. W. Curtis with considerable interest, I venture to relate some of my experiences in this direction. I have tried, says Mr. Curtis, to breed a yellow from two buffs, but without success. Such a result I believe to be an impossibility, although I have heard a few fanciers assert that they have accomplished it. Twenty years ago, when Crests were all the rage (in the days when the "King of Champions" was produced and subsequently sold to America for £70, and when "Belgrave Herod," "Eclipse," and other celebrities graced the show bench), buff to buff was the usual method of pairing up this variety. This was done in order to obtain size and greater length of feather. I myself kept nothing but Crests for years, but I never produced a yellow from two buffs. I have also been a regular visitor to other breeders' rooms, and I have never known a genuine yellow to be produced by two genuine buffs. I am of the opinion that wherever a yellow has been produced by two (alleged) buffs, one of the parents was a yellow, however poor in colour; or else the case has been one where the youngster was a rich-coloured buff showing little meal, and consequently mistaken for a yellow. This may appear almost incredible, but I have known a few fanciers who seem utterly unable to distinguish certain yellows from the buffs, but these are yellows all the same. It is well known that our British Finches are yellows and buffs respectively. Perhaps the difference is more perceptible in the Greenfinch than in any other. I used to wonder how it could be that a number of Greenfinches taken haphazard should be yellows and buffs in equal proportions. It is reasonable to assume that they have no knowledge of colour, but pair up promiscuously yellow to yellow, buff to buff, and buff to yellow. At first sight one would suppose these double-buff bred ones would have a tendency to produce buffs, even if they chanced to get a yellow mate. I have satisfied myself, however, that this is not the case, and I believe I have found the solution to the problem. The principle of reversion (one of Nature's balances) asserts itself, levelling matters up. I have long suspected this, and during the last few breeding seasons, by practical experiment on Norwich Plainheads, I have proved it so to my complete satisfaction. During the 1909 breeding season I paired a buff marked cock to a clear buff hen; every youngster produced was a buff. I retained one of these for stock—a clear buff cock—pairing him to a yellow variegated hen bred by myself from yellow and buff. The result of this pairing was nine young reared—six yellows and three buffs. Referring to my stock book, I notice that the second nest of three were all yellows. I cannot say that a yellow bred from two yellows would, if paired to a buff bred in the usual way, produce a larger percentage of buffs, as I have not tried it; but by the same rule I should certainly expect it to do so. Knowing the scarcity of good yellows, I have great pleasure in making known the result of my own observations. I have occasionally paired yellow to yellow, and have bred a buff from two yellows; but I never bred a yellow that way worth the keeping—all were scanty and harsh in feather, thin in head, shafty in tail, and presented a general weedy appearance. The Feeding of Insectivorous Birds.

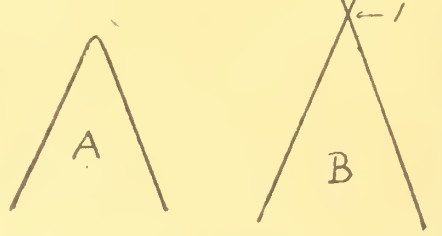
Sir,—Mr. Fishburn writes that he has a Nightingale singing every day. I suppose he doesn't mean every day in the year? Would he mind telling us his method of keeping up a supply of gentles? C. Harrison.



The Annfield Plain & Dis. C.B.S.

Sir,—Is the Annfield Plain and dist. C.B.S. down-hearted?—No! We are greatly pleased to notify members and fanciers that our society is going strong. We intend holding our next meeting on April 12th (Wednesday), and we hope local fanciers will roll up and let us have a good muster.

Wire for Nest-pan Holder.

Sir,—I enclose a sketch of the back wire of a nest-pan holder. "A" is the usual shape, but I make mine as shown at "B." The advantage I find is, when the young are old enough to rise up in the nest, you want the nest lower than the perches, and then you can hang the nest up in number 1 loop, and later on drop the wire down into loop number 2. (I use the smallest screw eyes.) I find this wire saves one making several holes in the backs of the cages, or shifting the perches.

Pigeon Kills and Eats Birds in Aviary.

Sir,—I wonder if any of the readers of Cage Birds have ever experienced what I did last week? In my aviary I keep from twenty to thirty birds, and about three months ago I put a Dragon Pigeon in as I had nowhere else to keep it. Last Sunday I missed a nice cock Linnet which I was hoping would make a good bird for show. I looked everywhere in the aviary, but could not find it. On Monday morning I saw some remains in the middle of the place, and found them to be those of the Linnet, only the beak, top of the head, and wings and tail feathers left, every other part gone, bones as well. Next morning I saw lying in the exact spot the same parts of a hen Chaffinch. Thinking I was being visited by a weazel I searched all round the aviary and could not discover a hole large enough for a mouse to get through. I was then greatly puzzled to know what it was; but in the afternoon the mystery was solved, for, on hearing a bird crying and the pigeon cooing, I looked and found the latter with a Sparrow in its beak. I took the Pigeon out, and have not lost a bird since. The Sparrow died in the evening, and I left it on the ground to see if it really was the Pigeon that ate the birds after killing them; and as it was not touched I concluded that the Pigeon had become a bird of prey.

Redpoll that Finds Its Way Home.

Sir,—I have a Redpoll that I pitch into the air, away from home, and he flies back again to his cage. I take him up to our allotment gardens, and let him out, but he always gets back home again before me. There are several cage bird men about here that have seen my little "Joey."

The Pegging of Chaffinches.

Sir,—Seeing in your columns the correspondence on Chaffinch pegging, I should like to ask Mr. Woodruff if he would mind explaining what is meant by "whalebone twigs." I always use grass for putting the birdlime on. Is whalebone better than this? Also, how is the whalebone prepared? If he could give a sketch explaining the setting of this, I should be greatly obliged. Are flue nests any good for bird catching, and how are they made and set? Perhaps one of your numefous readers will oblige by telling me.

New Society for Bellshill and District.

Sir,—I see one of your correspondents has taken up the matter re a Cage Bird Society for Bellshill and District. I agree with him when he says that Bellshill is growing like a bad weed. Everything has a beginning, and I think if we could start a society it would be a huge success. If "Bellshill Tyro" would give his name and address, we could get into correspondence and do something to get the society started. I hope some other Bellshill and Mossend readers will take up the matter, and make Bellshill a hot bed for bird fanciers. John Craig.

The Exhibiting of Borrowed Birds in Ireland.

Sir,—Mr. J. P. Rooney advocates closed rings, and this is the only way to put a stop to the exhibiting of borrowed birds. From my experience as an exhibitor of Norwich and Yorkshire Canaries, I can truthfully say that this most dishonest practice is mainly confined to fanciers in Belfast. "Irish Straight 'Un" and "Irish Exhibitor" have, in their letters on the above subject, given the novices a lot of information which was only too well known amongst the professionals. It is this state of affairs that keeps dozens of fanciers that I am acquainted with from joining the society, and there are several others who have been driven out of the Fancy owing to being "had" by those who sell their surplus stock as winners to the novice, who finds out that, after paying an exorbitant price, he has nothing more than mere song birds, and then he sells all out in disgust. "Catch my Pal" wants to know what has become of the Norwich Plainhead Club of Ireland. Well, I was a member, and I can inform him it was broken up owing to members buying and borrowing birds and exhibiting them as bred by themselves when competing for the cup presented by the club for unflighted birds.

The Breeding of Norwich Plainheads.

Sir,—I noticed in last week's issue of Cage Birds a very complimentary letter, signed "A Grateful Novice," in regard to the contributions re Norwich and Yorkshire production I wrote a short time ago. Very pleased indeed to think I have been of some slight assistance. Well, now, as regards the queries "A Grateful Novice" asks me through your valuable paper: (1) The number of birds and how marked for a novice to commence with, in the formation of a stud. I should recommend, to commence with, two pairs. Procure all the birds from the same breeder, and ask him to pair them up correctly for you. Tell him to forward you full particulars as to how they were bred and age of birds. Book up those particulars for future guidance. For preference you might have a ticked yellow cock with clear buff hen and a clear buff cock with a ticked yellow hen, all to be not nearly related. The progeny from one pair you could pair up to the progeny of the other pair, the season after. (2) As regards pairing up following season, you would have to study the standard (shape, quality, colour, size, etc.) set by the Norwich Plainhead Club. Having got an insight into what constitutes a good Norwich, your brains would have to help you in the matter. Never pair up two birds that have the same fault. Always try and counterbalance the failing of one with the other. (3) Method of pairing to produce suitable show birds. I like substance and colour in my male birds and type and quality in my hens. Good heads and necks are great essentials in the production of up-to-date Norwich. (4) What are the best markings? Well, there is nothing really decided. For my own part, I like wing-marked specimens or just splashed on cheek or neck. Cap marked birds and eye marked birds create drawbacks. The former have a tendency to appear somewhat flat on head in many cases, and the eye marks appear to take away a certain amount of width of head character. (5) Method of feeding each day from the nest onwards. I pursue the following:—To one boiled egg (boiled for fifteen minutes), which I press through a fine sieve, I add same quantity of bread (bread to be at least two days old), with a teaspoonful of soft sugar and a pinch of maw seed; mix well together. I give this three times a day, say, a tablespoonful to each pair of birds when feeding youngsters. Also, I let my birds have as much hemp seed (whole, not crushed) as they will eat. For green food I prefer dandelion, about two nice-sized leaves, twice a day, morning and afternoon. Failing dandelion, I use watercress, the lighter the leaf the better. I don't care for the dark-coloured cress. Boiled German summer rape I give once a day, about half-teaspoonful to each pair of birds. I boil the rape about a quarter of an hour, wash well so as to free it from all dirt, and when cold it is ready for use. As a precaution, I wish to say, always be careful to see that all waste food is taken out of the cage, and not left to get stale. Stale food reaps disaster. I hope these few items may benefit the novices of the Fancy.

J. C. Barnes.

P.S.—At some future time I will endeavour to give a more lengthy and fuller description re the production of the Norwich Plainhead, how to colour-feed, and so forth.—J. C. B.

The Cage Bird Union.

Sir,—Having been elected secretary of the Cage Bird Union, I earnestly ask all secretaries of societies to let me have their replies to Mr. Lythgoe's circular at once, even if the reply is unfavourable, so that I can get on with the work of the Union and get everything into ship shape before the show season is upon us. Now that Rule 22 is out of the way, there is nothing to keep any society out of the Union. I have always opposed Rule 22, but there was one point in its favour, and that was that it gave the Union a power over fixing show dates and kept them from clashing; but, now that members can show where they like, it will be very difficult to arrange matters in this respect. However, with the cordial support of all societies, I will do everything possible. I am surprised that more exhibitors have not taken up the insurance scheme. Surely, for the sake of 1s. a year, every exhibitor ought to protect himself or herself. I hope to see a good number join this year, as it is only by having a large number that the thing can be carried out satisfactorily. A good many societies have written through the Press, etc., stating that the only objection to the Union was Rule 22; I am hoping at once to hear from these societies intimating their intention to join, together with their subscriptions. About a dozen societies have notified their intention to join, and it will strengthen my hand and give me encouragement to work if other societies will do the same at once. Will all societies who have not sent in their railway petitions please do so? Even societies that do not intend to join the Union could help in this matter. Let us all join together in a straight, fancierlike manner; leave all personalities on one side, and think only of the good and cleanliness of our hobby.

The Proposed Lancashire Union.

Sir,—Under the above heading, your correspondent "Optimist" goes off his subject to blame the Liverpool O.S. for the deletion of the Cage Bird Union Rule No. 22, and he also wonders whether Liverpool will repeat its 1910 success without the help of the C.B.U. I should like to point out that when Liverpool proposed the deletion of Rule 22, the C.B.U. would not listen to the suggestion. They preferred to go on until, after losing the support of practically every large society, they were forced, when too late, to make their death-bed repentance. "Optimist" suggests that the success of the Liverpool show was in some way dependent upon its having been held under C.B.U. rules. I must say this idea never for a moment occurred to the Liverpool O.S. We had the idea that our success was in some way owing to the following: A large list of specials, good prize money, prompt payment of same, and the show being managed by exhibitors. If any society is desirous of running a successful show, I would recommend a trial on the above basis, rather than tying oneself up with the rules of a dead Union. So far as our next show is concerned, we do not care to prophesy, but your correspondent may like to know that we are optimistic. Ed. Lawson.

Sir,—I enclose copy of a letter which I have sent to the secretaries of the various societies in Lancashire and Cheshire, or to as many as I can get on the track of. Will the secretary of any society which I may have overlooked kindly oblige by bringing the letter before the next meeting of his society, and let me know the result? Jno. Hopkins.

[Copy of Letter.]

Sir,—I have been approached by several of the leading fanciers in Lancashire re the formation of a Union for Lancashire and Cheshire, and have been asked to communicate with the secretaries of the various societies in those counties to see what is the feeling of fanciers on the matter generally, and, if they deem such a Union necessary, to convene a meeting to get the Union into working order before the next show season comes round. I shall be glad, therefore, if you would lay this letter before the next meeting of your society and ascertain and let me know as early as possible whether they are in favour of a governing body to be worked on similar lines to the Yorkshire Union, and, if so, appoint a delegate to attend the suggested meeting, full particulars of which meeting I will let either you or the delegate appointed by your society have later.—Jno. Prize Cards at the Horticultural Hall (L.C.B.A.) Show.

How to Solder with Resin.

Sir,—Replying to "Hardbill," I may say that if he will put the fullstop behind the word metal he will see that it reads: I would caution 'Linnet," cage fronts are made of metal; and I was writing of a flux to make two metals fasten together. Thanks for the lesson in botany. There are many untinned punched bars for cage fronts on the market; also when cage wire gets rusty the tinning has gone—it is this that confuses the novice, and if he learns to use the iron he will master the rudiments of soldering. How can I recommend resin in a case like this? Tinned bars or cage wire are never tinned by resin in the factory. R. Rutherford.

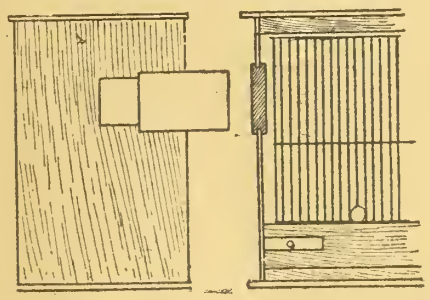
Mules at Bangor and Menai Bridge Shows.

Sir,—In reply to Mr. Aitken re Menai Bridge Show, I am very sorry that he is not pleased with the judging, but as far as the little knowledge that I have goes, I say that he has no cause to grumble with the awards in the Mule class, as his bird was reserve in the class, and there were better quality birds in the honours than his own. He, as a fancier, ought to take his defeat at the Bridge in better spirit. Mr. Aitken asks what light Mules are bred for; we all confess that light Mules are very rare, but I, for one, think that the big bonny bird of good substance and colour is the one for exhibiting, and not the small ones, such as his own. The 1st at the Bridge Show was a light Linnet Canary of good size and colour, 2nd Goldie Canary, nice size and lovely colour, 3rd Goldfinch-Greenfinch with a nice blaze. Mr. Aitken ought to acknowledge that the birds placed before him in the cards were all through of better quality and larger than his own. I wish, if he was at the show, he could have seen for himself, and have saved himself all his trouble. I hope he will take this letter in the best of spirit. Fancier.

The Lancashires and Lizards of To-day.



Sir,—In reply to "L. B.," I may say I don't want any cheap advertisement, as I have no stock to sell. When I do want an advert. I shall pay for it, and put in Cage Birds. I generally give away or lend what I have to part with, and I don't reckon to make money by breeding birds—I keep them for a hobby. You say I jumble the Lancashire; what about your jumbling in the Lizards? You say Mr. Howo judged Lizards badly, so there must be something in what I said. I say again that Mr. Oliver's bird was the best Lizard last show season—even Mr. Rukin said so to me. As to Mr. Dewsnap and other old winners, their days have gone by—it was last year I was writing about. If it comes to Silvers of byegone days, what about Mr. Cundiff's, Mr. F. W. Baker's, and the late Mr. B. Bardsley's old Silvers, and a lot more I could mention? But perhaps you were not in the Fancy in those days. What I cannot understand is why Mr. Swalwell put the Lancasbire special for best bird in the classes, over Mr. Turner's yellow Coppy, if he is not all I say. Mr. Barrass judged the winners for the L. and L.F.A. specials, and put Mr. Turner's first at Rochdale the week before. If Mr. Hardy had put the old birds somewhere near the front it would have looked better, and I know the birds were in fine form at the Good Intent Show. It makes readers of Cage Birds think Mr. Swalwell knows nothing about Lancashires. I knew very well I was on dangerous ground when I said, "Let Crest breeders breed their own stock birds," as I have known for many years it has paid a lot better to breed for the Crest market than to breed clear-bred Lancashires for the show bench. Next time you dash into print, "L. B.," put your full name, and then I shall know whom I am fighting.

E. Fuller.

Sir,—In reply to the letter from Mr. Donnelly, he is a gentleman I know very little about, not having seen him or been in his company but four times in all the years I have been in the Lancashire Fancy. As to the Rochdale fanciers, I don't want him, or anyone else, to tell me what they are like—I have always found them the best of good fellows, good winners and losers alike. But if he had been at the show on the Saturday night he would have heard a lot of grumbling from men that know what they are talking about. Mr. Donnelly says that Mr. House doesn't want me, or anyone else, to teach him to judge anything; he says he makes few mistakes. If that is so, then I don't know anything about Lancashires or Lizards. I have been amongst Lizards 33 years now, so if I don't know a bit about them I have spent my time badly. He says that some ten years ago they wanted Mr. House to judge or the birds would be all Crests. What are you saying, Mr. Donnelly? Why, they never put Crest into the rough mongrels that were being shown then; they were bred from double Coppy and double buff. But Crest, no; don't say that, Mr. Donnelly. I said it ten years before that, but the breeders would not acknowledge it, so it is cheering to know it has been put in. I am sure Mr. House has not tried his best to keep the Lancashire up to the standard every time he has judged. As for Mr. Vicker's old Plainhead, you want to know my views. Well, you breed and show one just as good, and you will win money with it if you show it under a true Lancashire judge. As for Mr. Hardy telling me how to breed Lancashires, I may tell you I don't want any advice from Mr. Hardy, or you, or anyone else. Mr. Donnelly says you will never breed a racehorse from a donkey. No, and you won't breed a Lancashire from a Crest; but they have bred some fine Crests from Lancashires. He wants to know how a Crest has been there; well, I may tell him I don't go about the country with my eyes shut. Also no true Lancashire breeder wants a fat head in his room to breed show birds. I was in one of the oldest and the most respected fancier's rooms yesterday, a room that has turned out winners year after year for the past forty years, and not one fat-headed bird in the lot. I have been going to his room for the last 25 years, and have never seen a fat-head yet, and he only breeds in one room. Yes, Mr. Donnelly, I like to give every man a chance, and will give all judges a chance, when I have confidence in them. I am sick of complaining about bad judging. It is time it was stopped, and the right man put on to judge our birds. He makes my friends and me laugh when he says, in his opinion, a good heavy-feathered stock bird shown in Lancashire classes will always beat an overgrown Yorkshire. We don't want stock birds, or Yorkshires, or Crests in Lancashire classes—we want good show Lancashires. He says he is pleased to see we are making a lot of new members in the L. and L.F.A. I am glad to read his opinion that the old club has taken a great change since he and a few of his Rochdale friends tried to break it up some few years ago at a meeting at the Dusty Miller, at Middleton. I am also glad to know Mr. Donnelly is coming amongst the lads again. E. Fuller

A Cage-door Without Hinges.

Sir,—I enclose an idea which I am applying to all my cages this year. It will be seen at once how convenient it is for running birds from one cage to another in the simplest possible way, allowing the cages to go close up together, and withdrawing the "door" halfway out, as in the first illustration (side view). It may be termed a door without hinges, and can be made by any handy person. All that is required is a "router" or a "plough" to make the grooves at the top and bottom of half-inch wood, as shown in the second figure. Any cage with square doors can be altered to this sketch, by extending the cuts at top and bottom to the front, and fitting the door as explained. I hope this will be of benefit to fanciers generally. If any trouble is found by "sticking," a little blacklead rubbed in the grooves will relieve.

The Norwich Plainhead Canary Club of Ireland.

Sir,—In reply to "Catch-my-Pal's" inquiry re the above, I, as secretary, can give him any information he may require regarding the club. The meeting referred to held last April was called to decide what should be done regarding the club and the two silver cups the property of the club. After a great deal of discussion it was unanimously resolved to carry on the club as already stated. A general meeting for the election of officers, etc., was to be held on that night fortnight, notice of which appeared in the Fancy Press. I sent out postcards to all members giving notice of the said meeting also. But, unfortunately, it was a very rough, wet night, rain falling in torrents; and as nearly all the members had a long way to come, only four turned up. It was then decided to postpone the club for an indefinite period, and this is the position the club has remained in since that time. I had applications from several societies asking for the club's patronage last show season, and I informed the respective secretaries to this effect. Since the show season that has just gone I have been asked by several old members of the club to call a meeting and have the club put in working order again. I think this a very opportune time to appeal to all Norwich fanciers who are in favour of putting the club on its feet again to send me their names and addresses, and if I receive a favourable response I will proceed to business at once. The club has two splendid solid silver cups for competition. (Mr. Thompson and myself have two wins on each one we hold, and are both quite willing to give them up free to be competed for by unflighted birds bred by competing exhibitors. I hope "Catch-my-Pal" will be the first to send his name and address. I should also have said that the club is free of debt. There is no old debt for members joining now to pay.

A Cage-front Soldering Iron.

Sir,—I enclose a sketch of what I consider a very handy soldering iron for making cage fronts. The idea is to file the end of the iron with the edge of a file, as seen in the illustration. This iron makes a sound job of a cage front, putting the solder all round the wire at one touch. You will have no more wires coming loose, and no more slipping of the iron off the wire when soldering.

The Making of Egg-food.

The Disadvantages of Hard-boiled Eggs

Sir,—I was very interested in Mr. St. John's remarks re egg-food, in Cage Birds of March 25. I agree with his remarks re wholemeal in place of white bread. I use "Turog" meal when making egg biscuits. This meal is far ahead of any "Standard" flour I have seen, being finely ground whole wheat, and is easily obtained. It makes a splendid biscuit, one the birds eat readily when crumbled and moistened. But there is no doubt about it the fancier who makes his own food does not get it perfect (or near it). It is well known that the yolk of egg contains an organic phosphorus compound, lecithin. This lecithin is said by scientific authorities to be indispensable for restoring brain and nerve cells and muscular fibre, and to be invaluable for increasing the number of red blood corpuscles. It is also said that this valuable constituent of eggs is always destroyed by the usual cooking processes, boiling, baking, etc., owing to the high temperatures used, in cooking. It stands to reason then that the fancier who uses a hard-boiled egg, loses a lot of that egg's value as food. My idea is that an oven should be used made on the same principle as an incubator, with lamp, thermometer, and heat regulator; a biscuit could then be cooked at very low temperature, and so get the full food value of the egg. It pays to make your own egg-food, and the cost of heating such an oven as I have described would not be much. We all know that it is practically impossible to keep an ordinary oven at an equal temperature. If some enterprising manufacturer were to put such an oven on the market, it would no doubt pay him; I am, in fact, in negotiation with a firm myself, re cost of having one made.

Keeping Birds in Small Cages.

Sir.—Of late I have noticed several readers complaining of keeping birds in small cages. I think some of these are going a little too far when they talk about the R.S.P.C.A. I think the writers of some of these letters must be nothing but Canary breeders and fanciers, and do not think of others who go in for contest singing as a hobby which I take great pride in and others. My birds are all in small back cages 8ins. by 9ins. by 4ins., and I guarantee they are all in healthy and clean condition and as steady and happy as anyone's Canaries that are in large cages. A while back I thought I would give some of my birds a treat by giving them a fly. I cut a hole in the side of a big flight cage and placed their cages against the flight cage, and I found them three parts of their time in their back cages. I think, my self, as a bird fancier for years, and having studed the way of birds, that the majority of wild birds are best off in a small cage as they do not knock themselves about half as much as they do if put in a large cage. I quite agree that home bred birds should be kept in large cages as they are bred and born in them; as for wild birds if they are well looked after it does not matter what cage they are in; which I can prove. I hope those who write about small cages will give a little thought about the contest singer.

A. G.

Sir,—As "A Lover of Birds" has not replied to the letter by John Canning in Cage Birds of the 12th inst., I hope you will allow me to try and dispel any illusions that gentleman may indulge in as to the conclusiveness of his arguments. His letter is merely a long plea (without apology) for the maintenance of a cruel practice, on the sordid ground that better treatment would not pay. If "the best" cannot be got out of a Roller without the use of a cage that "you could put in your jacket pocket," then be satisfied with the best the bird will produce in a cage of reasonable regulation size. All competitors would "have to toe the line," and have an equal chance. As to the Linnet men, they must carry more weight or fewer birds. Neither does it follow that the use of larger cages would be detrimental to the interests of the bird dealer. An overcrowded—and consequently dirty and neglected—stock is not likely to attract buyers. I went to see two shops that I had heard of only last Saturday, and the outsides contented me. A small, well-displayed stock, in clean, bright cages, would attract the amateur and bring new blood into the Fancy much more readily than a pile of miserable little "wooden huts." How attractive, for instance, would be a wagon (cage) load of "Foreigners" ticketed 18s. 11d. the lot, etc. The use of price tickets would be an immense improvement on the ordinary chalk mark. Let us hope Cage Birds League will effect an all-round improvement. Scrutineer.

CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE.

A further selection from our Letter-Bag. Our scheme (full details of which were given on page 301 last week), continues to meet with wide-spread approval.

Sir,—I wish Cage Birds League every success.—F. C. Sims, Sec. of the Barnsley and Dist. C.B.S.

I wish Cage Birds League every success, and shall only be too pleased to become a member. —H. Orford (Manchester).

Sir,—I wish Cage Birds and Cage Birds League every success; they deserve it.—R. Charleson, Sec. of the Leigh and Dist. C.B.S.

Sir,—I may say we are going to have a discussion on Cage Birds League at an early date. I think the idea is fairly catching on.—James Pollock (secretary, Larkhall C.B.S.).

Sir,—I wish to join Cage Birds League as a member. I forward you postal order for 1s. 6d., so you can send me the badge for my coat when they are ready.—John Mainland (Leith).

Sir,—Kindly enrol me a member of Cage Birds League; enclosed are 1s. for membership, and 6d. for badge when ready. I will do my best for the League. I wish it every success.—John Laurie (Falkirk).

Wigan Thinks Well of It.

Sir,—At our last meeting we had quite a long discussion about Cage Birds League, and everyone present was of one opinion, namely, that it was just what was wanted. I was asked to suggest to you that it be divided into districts, and that each district have a different coloured badge, also that all its members must be a member of some Cage Bird Society.—W. Ridge, Hon. Sec., Wigan and Dist. C.B.S.

We hope all will do it.

Sir,—I am very pleased to see the great progress the Cage Birds League is making, and I think that in the North the feeling of fanciers is practically unanimous in favour of it. When I receive my badge, I intend wearing it on every possible occasion, and I would like to see other fanciers do the same, for the more we fanciers keep in touch with one another, the better it will be for all concerned.—W. Reid (Sunderland).

A League of Possibilities.

Sir,—At the amalgamated prize-distribution, held in Bradford on March 11, and so ably reported in your excellent paper, Mr. Lythgoe, the late Secretary of the Cage Bird Union, in a few well chosen remarks, used the expression that possibly the C.B.U. would not be active this year, but probably during 1912 some Association would arise that would be national in importance to the cage bird Fancy. These are not the exact words of Mr. Lythgoe, but the impression conveyed to myself. Now, sir, seeing you are forming the Cage Birds League, is it not possible, with the influence your journal can bring to bear, that the C.B.L. shall be the first part of a national Cage Bird League, and that the whole Fancy could be taken under its wings? The whole subject could be worked out by a meeting of influential fanciers, who are desirous to see a practical working league, much on the same lines as the Yorkshire Union. I make this to the whole of the Fancy as a suggestion, and could more fanciers see the good fellowship as displayed at our amalgamated meeting, the idea would, I am sure, not be lost sight of. I do not write in any official capacity, but as I weighed over the remarks of Mr. Lythgoe, I thought I would express my opinion. I wish Cage Birds League every success.—David Sunderland (chairman Amalgamated meeting and President of Yorkshire C.C.).

[Whilst feeling highly complimented by the possibilities Mr. Sunderland sees in our scheme, we wish to make it quite clear that whatever developments the future may have in store for Cage Birds League, it has no intention of taking the place of the Cage Bird Union, or in any way acting as a judicial tribunal. Its main object is to form a link of good fellowship between fanciers, and to protect them against outside aggression.—Editor.]

Mr. St. John Suggests a Compromise.

Sir,—Before you definitely sum up the opinions of your numerous correspondents concerning Cage Birds League, and fix the subscription, etc., I would suggest as an amendment to my previous suggestion as to the amount of subscription, a compromise between your own suggestion of 1s. a year, and Mr. T. R. Trower's of 3d., 6d., and 1s., for, I take it, individual members, the following, viz., That there be "Associates and "Members," enrolled individually. The annual subscription for "Associate" to be 6d. per annum, including card of enrolment or the ordinary badge for an additional 6d. on enrolment; and the annual subscription for "Members" to be 1s., with 6d. extra for badge on enrolment. Large subscriptions or donations of any amount might be accepted, and a donation of, say, 5s. to confer the privilege of an "associate" for life, and ditto of 10s. 6d. a life "membership." Associates would have minor privileges, and not be eligible for nomination to council or committee. I purposely named a very low subscription in my former letter, as the idea must be to get to the very bedrock of the Fancy, even where practically no enthusiasm exists, and although probably every enthusiastic fancier would seek enrolment with a 1s. subscription, there may be thousands among the other class, whose interest is limited perhaps to a single pet bird, who would not think it worth while joining and paying an initial 1s. 6d. Yet these might form a very large and useful band of associates. Another point, I think cage bird societies should not be enrolled en bloc. There are too many quicksands in this method, and the risks of suspicions of cliquism and petty jealousy creeping in in the future are too great. Therefore, I would say emphatically enrol members and associates individually, and in that way only, and leave societies quite alone to carry on their own work in their own way, as they do now. Mr. Trower draws attention to the good effect of cycling clubs. Is it not a fact that what cycling clubs have done for cyclists cage bird societies all over the country have done for the cage bird Fancy? Let them continue in untrammelled freedom, and let all their members enrol themselves individually in Cage Birds League, if they desire to do so; but collectively as a society, no. Members of societies would, of course, name their local society on joining, and donate part of subscription to it, as already suggested, or give their names to their secretary to be sent up for individual enrolment, so that it would in no way interfere with this part of the scheme. Only by this means will the League be enabled to stand quite alone, above all suspicions and jealousies, as the one universal bond of freemasonry which links together every birdkeeper in the land.

Claude St. John (Dudley, Worcs.).

Lifting up the Hobby.

Sir,—The formation of a Cage Birds League will be one of the most excellent ideas yet originated in connection with the Fancy. Its objects will be too many to enumerate in a letter. Besides binding fanciers closer together in the bonds of unity—unity is strength, and that is what is required in every organisation—it will be the means of putting many a sinking society on a sounder footing. Readers and correspondents of Cage Birds generally term it our paper, thereby bringing the whole staff, from the genial proprietor and the editor to the office boy, into one common family—all united in furthering the hobby which they have so much at heart. And it is with this feeling of unity in view that a Cage Birds League should be formed. One of its numerous advantages would be that a member might have the fortune or misfortune to be in a strange town, but a brother fancier, although an utter stranger, seeing his badge of membership, would greet him as a friend and brother. Thus a friendship would be created. Excellent idea! Yes, but that is not all. What will the formation of the League mean to societies? Just let us consider this important matter. The readers of Cage Birds number well over 50,000. Say, for the sake of argument, that 20,000 of them join the League (this is a very low estimate), and each of the 20,000 enrols a new member (I have already three or four "in my eye"), that will mean a commencing membership of 40,000; 40,000 members at 1s. each equals £2,000, which should provide ample funds for the League propaganda, and leave a good margin for the encouragement of the hobby and to devote to the special prizes for the various societies interested (Cage Birds guarantees special prizes to the value of £1,000). It is certainly a League that every fancier should join, thereby being the means of fostering a better spirit of unity amongst its members and lifting our hobby on to a higher pinnacle of eminence before the eyes of the general public.—Joseph Wright (Southport).

LOCHORE & GLENCRAIG C.B.S.

Meeting, held March 25th, Mr. J. Donaldson in chair. Classification was gone over, and approved of by those present. Mr. Donaldson promised a medal for best Border Fancy in young bird show, to be held in July. Deputation appointed to go to meeting in Cowdenbeath, in connection with District Cup. Messrs. F. W. Peel and D. Grant appointed judges for F.F. show, to be brought up at next meeting, to be held April 15th at 6.30 p.m., in McMenemy's Hall. This being all the business, the meeting closed.—Duncan Grant, Hon. Sec.

LEIGH AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Very successful table show of field-mounted Linnets held headquarters, Railway Hotel, March 15th. Some very good Linnets were put down to be judged by our treasurer, Mr. W. Ordish, whose awards gave every satisfaction. Result: 1, Slater and Charleson; 2, 3, W. Hulme. After show we had a discussion on the cup question, which passed over very well. What we want to get at is: How are we going to count the points; whether six points for a 1st in a large or small class, or in proportion to the number in the class? I should like all the absent members to turn up and have a voice in the matter.—R. Charleson, Hon. Secretary.

PARTICK AND DISTRICT C.B.C.

Members and friends met in Mr. Sanderson's Room, Bridge Street, Partick, March 23rd, and held a very successful social evening. Mr. Maccrobbie (our host) had everything in apple-pie order. Mr. R. T. Anderson (president) took the chair. The ball was set rolling by drinking to the health of Mr. Maccrobbie, and his success in winning the Y.C.C. of Scotland Rose Bowl, to which he suitably replied, wishing success to the Club. Mr. Maxwell followed with a comic song. Other songs and recitations were given by Messrs. Millar, Kidd, Park, Fairweather, McMillan, Walker, and Priest. We were greatly pleased to have Mr. Griffiths with us again, and glad to see him looking so well after his recent illness. He gave us "Tam O' Shanter," in his very best style. A hearty vote of thanks to our president for presiding, and the singing of "Auld Lang Syne," brought a very pleasant evening to a close.—Wm. Priest, Sec.

PROVINCIAL ROLLER C.C.

Meeting, held headquarters, Swan Hotel, Fountain Street, Manchester, March 25th, Mr. A. Foulds in chair. Members were present from Wigan, Liverpool, Colne, Rochdale, Bury, Turton, Bolton, Tottington, Reddish, Levenshulme, Leeds, Cburch, Blackburn, Gorton, Oldham, Shaw, Hollinwood, Manchester, etc. Eleven new members were proposed and accepted. After the business, the members sat down to a good substantial dinner, to which they did full justice. After the dinner a musical programme passed away the remainder of the evening. Mr. Harmond presided at the piano, and his renderings were greatly appreciated. Messrs. Field, Butterworth (our host), Tom Routledge, Webster, Stanley Butterworth. F. Deakin (of the Manchester Concerts), Master Butterworth (Helsby), Brooks, Kilshaw, and Schofield, also sang in fine style. Other members followed in rapid succession. After a hearty vote of thanks to our host and hostess, the meeting broke up.—Tom Routledge.

EAST BOWLING & DIST. B.F.A

March 25th will long be remembered as one of the most enjoyable ever spent by our members. The meeting was held in St. John's School. Mr. S. Dean (Great Horton) dwelt at length on the ever-interesting subject of "Pairing, breeding, and rearing the Yorkshire Canary." All who are acquainted with the lecturer know that Sam knows what he is talking about. From his 18 years' experience, Mr. Dean could give much advice, particularly to young fanciers. He started with the choice of room, cages, etc.; then with the choice of partners. He illustrated many points extremely interesting to fanciers. After dealing with the attention, etc., necessary during breeding, he went on to deal with the youngsters, after 21 days old. For over an hour Mr. Dean held his audience. Many questions were asked, all of which were ably answered by Mr. Dean. The chairman (Mr. Firth) ably proposed a vote of thanks to the lecturer; Mr. Booth seconded, and Mr. Casey supported. This was carried with acclamation. Mr. Dean, in response, said that if he had pleased his audience he himself was doubly pleased with the opportunity of coming to lecture.—L. Booth, Sec.

GREEN CANARY ASSOCIATION

Annual general meeting, held Oldham Hall, Liverpool, Mar. 23rd, 1911, Mr. J. W. Metcalfe, in chair. Secretary reported a loss of about 10s. on the annual dinner; unanimously resolved that the amount be debited to the general account. Following new members elected: Messrs. F. Plunkett, and E. Broadbent. Messrs. Pengelly, Mullock, and Hackett were nominated, and will come up for election at April meeting. Balance sheet presented and passed as read, on the motion of Messrs. Deacon and Abbott. The auditors read the result of the voting for officers, and the following were elected for 1911-12. Chairman, J. W. Metcalfe; vice-chairman, F. Handley; treasurer, J. H. Isaac; auditors, J. Walker and C. Hillmen; assistant hon. sec., G. James; hon. sec., Geo. Green, 36, Lord Nelson Street, Liverpool. Committee, Messrs. J. Abbott, Dixon, Eccleston, Hales, Hillmen, Lawson, and Rowlands. Notices of motion came up for discussion, and after several members had aired their views, the following were passed: 1. That the subscription shall be raised from 2s. 6d. per annum to 5s., 2s. to be devoted to the working expenses of the society, and 3s. per member to go towards a fund, to be called the specials fund, and in consideration of this, no member shall be asked or canvassed for nest feather, old show, or season specials, with the exception of the cups, which shall still be raised by subscription. All annual subscriptions shall be paid on or before August 31st in each year. 2. That we do away with nomination papers, and elect officers at the annual meeting. 3. That the colour of the present Norwich show cages be altered to hedge-sparrow egg tint. 5. That a novice is one who has not won a first in open competition in Green classes. 6. That nothing but plain canary seed be used on cage bottoms, at shows where classes are under the G.C.A. patronage. 7. That we adopt a standard show cage, for the Borders. Pattern to be mutually agreed upon, between the B.F.C.C. and the G.C.A. Patronage.—Decided, on the motion of Messrs. Rowlands and Lawson, that the classification be the same as last year, viz., 4 Yorkshires, 4 Norwich, and 4 Borders, to run cocks and hens alternately with selfs and fouls, for the first two varieties, and cocks and hens at each show for the Borders. All applications to be in the secretary's hands on or before July 15th, 1911. Societies are invited to apply for the patronage for either 4, 8, or 12 classes, and same will be allotted at the July meeting.—Geo. Green, Hon. Sec.

NEW ENGLAND (U.S.A.) C.B.A.

At the annual meeting, held in Boston, the following officers were elected: President, F. Knecht; first vice-president, B. B. Young; second, J. R. Wylie; secretary and treasurer, Chas. A. Murray, 22, Peters Street, Cambridge, Mass. The executive board to consist of the foregoing officers and the following additional members: B. F. Hardy, Mrs. F. E. Carroll, and J. F. Glynn.—A. Murray, Sec.

KELTY AND BLAIRADAM C.B.A.

Meeting held on 21st March, Mr. J. Stenhouse (President) in chair. Mr. W. Mossie (Annbank) was appointed judge of Borders for open show. The Secretary reported donations of 37s. 6d. Agreed, to get full set of model cards same as last year. Agreed, to send deputation to meeting to be held for the purpose of discussing proposed cup scheme for district. The delegates appointed were Messrs. J. Stenhouse and A. Dickson. The Chairman spoke of the sad loss our member, Mr. A. Fotheringham, had received through the death of his wife, and the Secretary was asked to send him a letter of sympathy on behalf of the Association. The meeting closed with a vote of thanks to Chairman.—A. Dickson, Sec.

COWDENBEATH C.B.S.

Meeting held Arcade Temperance Hotel, March 22nd, Mr. J. Simpson presiding. Sub-committee's report re ball submitted; decided, to allow fixing of a hall to remain over till next meeting. Secretary submitted a lengthy correspondence. All present decided to sign petition submitted by the National B.B. and M.C. The question of holding a conference with the other strictly Cage Bird Societies in the west of Fife was then considered, when it was agreed to do our best in this matter. Four delegates were appointed, namely, Messrs. A. Beveridge, J. C. Murray, A. Simpson, and the Secretary, the said conference to be held as soon as possible. After the business Mr. A. Anderson gave us a lecture on "British Birds for Exhibition." He treated of the Goldfinch (a particular favourite of his), Bullfinch, Linnet, Siskin, Twite, Redpoll, Greenfinch, Bramblefinch, and Chaffinch. His remarks were well worth listening to. He drew attention to all the good points, and also showed the points to be avoided in the show specimen. At the close of his remarks an opportunity was given for questions, all of which Mr. Anderson answered to the satisfaction of the meeting. On the motion of Mr. Duncan Grant, seconded by Mr. A. Penman, the speaker was accorded a very hearty vote of thanks. At next meeting, April 15th, same place, Messrs. J. Veitch and J. Reid promised to give short papers on the Crest and Yorkshire respectively. Two new members joined.—J. R. Reid. Sec.

CITY OF BIRMINGHAM C.B.S.

Monthly meeting, held March 1st, Crown Hotel, station Street, Mr. J. Burke in the chair. The balance sheet was presented by Mr. de Maillet (late hon. secretary), showing a balance due to him of 7s., which was considered very satisfactory, taking into account the serious loss on the open show, and he informed the society that we were stronger in membership than ever, which augurs well for the future. Mr. T. Heath was appointed judge for open show. Letter from Cage Bird Union read. Decided to defer a reply until after next meeting. Mr. de Maillet gave notice of his intention to propose at next meeting a revision of the rules, particularly Rule 10, relating to dealers being debarred from membership. Mr. Weaver (Wolverhampton) then gave a lecture (on mating and breeding) in his usual good style, which was enjoyed by every one of the 70 members and friends present, many saying it was the best talk on birdy matters they had ever listened to. Unfortunately the Fancy will not be able to read the lecture, as our shorthand friend who took a verbatim report left his papers in the railway train going home, and despite every effort made to recover them, they have not been found. Before the meeting closed, Mr. Broadburst, late chairman, now a vice-president (present with us for the first time since his illness in December) proposed that Mr. de Maillet's services as secretary for the past three years be recognised by electing him a vice-president of the Society, seconded by the chairman, and carried unanimously.—S. Mole, Sec., pro. tem.

EDINBURGH AND DIST. C.B.S.

First Table Show, held Cairus' Memorial Hall, Gorgie Road, 21 March. There was a capital attendance. Mr. A. W. Watson judged, bis decisions on a whole giving general satisfaction. All classes were confined to novices, and although entries were rather short, the quality of exbibits was of the highest order, while the staging was quite a feature, the exhibits being put down in a fashion that would do credit to any professional. Mr. Ferguson carried off premier honours, and also secured Mr. G. Brown's special for best exhibit. Mr. G. Mackie staged a nice team, which scored 30 points for the Watson gold medal, Mr. A. Hay following with 17 points, and Mr. Ferguson 16.

LINNET AND GOLDFINCH: 1, spl., Ferguson, Goldie, grand size, blaze and col.; 2, 3, A. Hay, 2nd Linnet, good size and col., tail a trifle faulty, 3rd Linnet, some fancied should have gone up one; 4th, G. Mackie, Linnet, nice pencilling and markings. REDPOLL, ETC.: 1, Denholm, good cap and bib, nice pencilling; 2, G. Mackie, presses winner; 3rd, Todd, sweet little Poll, well shown. FINCH: 1, Ferguson, Greenie, capital exhibit, grand size and col., shows a treat; 2, 3, 4, G. Mackie, 2nd Bullie cock, real stormer for col., some thought ought to have claimed premier honour, 3rd Greenie, grand head and col, 4th Bramble, in rare condition; 5, A. Hay, good Greenie; 6, P. Hay, Chaffinch, fails in condition.—J. I. Mackie, Sec.

WELLINGTON (Salop).

Show held Town Hall, March 25th. The room is an ideal one for the purpose, being of good size, with plenty of light, lofty, quite free from draughts, and nicely warmed. Our section was delightfully staged at one end on the tier system, every bird being in full view. The Canary classes were unfortunately a failure, but what was lacking in these classes was made up for in the Mules and British, these being strong numerically, while the quality was simply magnificent. It was astonishing, considering the small classification, what these classes contained—Palace winners in galore—which made the competition exceptionally keen in nearly every class. Gold medal for best bird was captured by Mr. Edwards's Canary-Bullie. The stewards, Messrs. Campbell and Potter, gave the birds every possible attention, and were untiring in their efforts in looking after the comfort and welfare of the birds. Mr. Geo. Hitchman carried out the duties of secretary in grand style, the arrangements being perfect; and every detail was at his finger tips. Mr. A. C. Brotherhood judged.

ARDWICK AND DISTRICT O.S.

Meeting held Onward Hall, Mr. W. Robinson presiding over a fair attendance. Mr. T. Harrison (Altrincham) delivered a lecture on "Greens and Breeding for Colour." He dealt quite an hour on various points in regard to selection and pairing. Those who are trying for Greens this time very much appreciated the knowledge imported to them. The lecturer dealt with colour-breeding, also colour-feeding. After the lecture, questions were asked, which raised many points of interest. Mr. Harrison answered these. Afterwards he gave us some useful information re conditioning the birds for the show bench. A hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Harrison closed the meeting.—J. Spencer, Hon. Sec.

Adventures of a Peacock.

A Peacock was presented to Clatterbridge Workhouse, Birkenhead, as an ornament to the grounds, but the inmates complained that their rest was disturbed by its screams. It was therefore sent to a neighbouring recreation ground, but (says the "Daily Mail") had a fight with a dog and got so badly worsted that veterinary aid was summoned. The bird made rapid recovery, and two or three days ago destroyed several beds of tulips; then it fled, and when last seen was roosting on the chimney-pot of a house at Hoylake.

THE SECRET

of successful spending lies in what you buy, rather than in the amount you spend; low price does not always mean cheapness; sometimes otherwise. It is impossible to obtain something for nothing; everything worth having has its value; therefore if by paying a little more you can obtain a much higher quality bird, to do you greater service, it stands to reason it is the best policy to do so. My Norwich have stood the test, a strain which has no equal; some grand size yellow cocks at 25/- and 30/- each, bouncers; several grand offes, trifle smaller, but same blood, 12/6, 15/- and 20/- each; grand buff cocks 10/- to 25/-; yellow hens 10/- to 25/-; buff hens 7/6 to 21/-; topping pairs, specially matched, 20/- to 45/- per pair; approval: Judge Silk, Whitstable.

if you are anywhere in this district and call and inspect the birds and bird rooms owned by E. L. Storey. There are no birds just like them, none just as good, nor are there any as cheap. When I say cheap, I do not wish you to think I am selling these well-known cock Canarics at 2/6 each which to the purchaser's sorrow prove to be hens. What I ofier are genuine high-class birds at ordinary prices. You can get a Hartz cock anywhere for 6/6, or a St. Andreashurg Roller 10/6; but the point is the quality. Unless you hear my Rollers sing you cannot comprehend the high quality of my birds. Every bird is imported direct from the native breeders by myself; no middleman's profits, or the best picked out. I do not sell you any fancy names. I have no necessity to; the birds themselves prove their genuine quality. Take into consideration the hundreds of unsolicited testimonials I am continually receiving from all over the world. My motto is, and always was, every customer guaranteed fullest satisfaction; no humbug or trickery. I send the birds you order on 7 days' approval at my sole risk; this allows you time to prove the birds to be what you require; if not, you send them back. You cannot have anything fairer. The railway books prove that I do not get 1 per cent. of the birds I send out returned; this speaks volumes for my selection and the quality of my birds. Whatever you require, let me send it to you on 7 days' approval. I can satisfy the most sceptical fanciers, for I know the high quality of my birds to be unsurpassable. Genuine trained St. Andreasburg Rollers, with full change of song by day and artificial light, cocks 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/- each; pure bred Roller hens 3/-, 3/6, 4/- each. The above are picked birds, free from harsh or choppy notes. If you want loud free songsters, my Hartz cocks are the working man's friend; cocks in full, loud, free song, by day and gas light, 5/9, 6/3, 6/6, 7/- each; mated pairs for breeding songsters, 8/6, 9/6, 10/6. My Rollers are all kept in separate singing room away from all other birds. My stock of Yorkshires and Norwich lead the way for style, quality, and condition; birds bred from and related to noted winners, cocks 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6; hens 4/-, 4/6, 5/6, 6/6; either Yorkshires or Norwich, Goldfinch cocks 2/6, 3/-, 3/6; Bullfinch hens 1/9, 2/- each. WHAT! YOU?

I am surprised. It seems so ridiculous to hear you mention dissatisfaction. You never hear my customers mention it; the fact is, they have forgotten there is such a thing since they got their birds from these aviaries, the fountain-head of quality, combined with cheapness. The surest way to spell satisfaction is S-t-o-r-e-y-'-s B-i-r-d-s, for I guarantee every customer full satisfaction. Just you call in and inspect my stock; it will do you good, and you will not be pressed to buy, for I know you will see scores of birds you would like to possess. You have no need to pay fancy prices. I have had a lot of experience breeding and selling birds, always breeding from the best of stock birds and winners, and selling the birds at reasonable prices within the reach of all. My matched pairs of Yorkshires and Norwich at 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 17/6, 20/- per pair are unequalled for style and quality, and are birds that will do you good. No breeder can show more and better unsolicited testimonials than the thousands of originals I have open for your inspection. I do not show one bird and sell another; every bird I have is for sale. See my advertisement under Rollers. Call and inspect my stock. You will be convinced. I have the best pure-bred Yorkshires, that cannot be beaten for type, size, and quality; feathers like wax. Cocks, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6 each; hens, 3/6, 4/-, 4/6, 5/- each; matched pairs for breeding, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-; extra fine cobby Norwich cocks 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6 each; hens, 3/6, 4/-, 4/6, 5/- each; matched breeding pens, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-. WEST OF SCOTLAND O.S.

Meeting held April 1, Nelson's Temperance Hotel; Mr. J. Montgomery (vice-president) in chair. Sub-committee gave report re Hall for annual show; agreed, to engage grand National Halls. Owing to illness of his wife, Mr. Laurie had unfortunately to postpone reading his paper. Members wished his wife speedy recovery. GRIMSBY & CLEETHORPES R.C.S

Meeting held Anchor Restaurant, March 25th. The principal business was the adoption of the rules as drafted by the sub-committee, to whom the duty had been delegated at the previous meeting. There was considerable discussion on an additional rule suggested by the vice-chairman, which was only defeated by the casting vote of the chairman, and the original draft was adopted and ordered to be printed. The date of the first year's show was fixed for December 1st and 2nd, to which the attention of secretaries of other societies is respectfully called to avoid clashing. The proposed paper by the hon. sec., "Roller Notes: Some Reflections in view of the Breeding Season," had to be deferred until next meeting on account of the amount of other business.—W. Yardley, Hon. Sec.

GATESHEAD AND DIST. C.B.S.

Adjourned annual meeting held Mar. 15th, chair being taken by Mr. R. Tindle; this was his first attempt as chairman of our society. We felt satisfied we had got in him the right man in the right place. We had a fairly good turn up of members. Secretaries being unable to give their report and present balance-sheet, these were left over Decided, to have annual show, Dec. 8th and 9th. Following gentlemen nominated for membership: Messrs. F. F. Lawson (Carlisle), J. Milne, J. E. Atkinson, J. Laidler (Newcastle), J. H. Whittaker (Pelton Fell), F. Lawson, J. G. Gresson, and J. Spoor (Gateshead). We hope to have a good many more to join us to help us keep up the standard and reputation we have attained, and we hope Gateshead may still retain the honour of being "the Palace of the North."—A. Holden, Sec.

WALLSEND & MID-TYNE C.B.S.

Meeting held Station Hotel, Wallsend, March 8th, Mr. Macdonald in chair. Mr. Robson gave a very interesting lecture on "Canary Breeding," which was much appreciated by the large number present. After a great number of questions were asked and answered, a vote of thanks was given Mr. Robson in a very hearty manner. Mr. Slack spoke on the scheme that CAGE BIRDS have proposed, asking the meeting to support it, he thinking the idea splendid and deserving the support of all fanciers. Decided to leave the matter over for a future date, when more particulars come forward. Mr. Anderson (Rosshill) was made a member. Chairman reminded meeting that at next meeting a table show of British will be held, and that all birds should be on table not later than 7 p.m.; the classification of birds to be left in hands of committee. A gold-centred silver medal is to be awarded for most points won by a member. This closed one of the best meetings the club has ever held.—John R. Evans, Sec.

BARNSLEY AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

A Question Night.

Special meeting, held Mar. 18th. This meeting was for the purpose of questions by ballot, thirteen members being present. Surely a better meeting might have been held. Ballot tickets were handed round to each person, the same being drawn from a hat. Our worthy president (Mr. J. Eyre) set the ball rolling with the question: "How would you recommend to mix colour-food?"—Mr. Eyre said he was a big believer in hot pepper, and always used two pounds hot to five pounds of cold; he also added almond oil if the pepper were dry, also 1lb. ground linseed, 1lb. moist sugar, and a pinch of powdered aniseed. In using the last-named the birds ate the colour-food much better. He always used an egg to mix with the colour-food, and soaked bread.

The president called on the secretary (Mr. Sims), his question being: "What age do you prefer your birds for breeding with?" Mr. Sims said he liked, as far as possible, to pair year or two-year cocks to unflighted hens, and unflighted cocks, to year or two-year hens; by thus pairing, one stood a better chance of getting bigger and stronger young. As far as possible he liked to leave the unflighted cock with the hen all the season, providing he behaved himself.

Mr. Rapson was then called upon. His question was a difficult one: "What is the cause of broken eggery?" Mr. Rapson, in his remarks said it was due to the bird not being in proper condition—when a hen lays her eggs, say, one one day, misses two days, and then lays another. Such a hen wasn't much good in the breeding cage, and would do to mate with her sister, the barren hen.

Mr. Goldthorpe drew the question: "What kind of egg-food and seeds do you use when breeding?" Mr. G. said he used 14 of Powell's tea biscuits to one egg, and liked it better than bread, as it was much lighter, and kept better than the latter in hot weather. As for seeds, he used mixed seeds through the season, winter and summer, and had good results from same. He did not give any green food until young were three days old.

Mr. Grunnell's question was: "What kind of breeding cage do you consider best, enamelled or white-washed?" This gentleman said he preferred enamelled cages, as they were more easily washed out than white-washed ones, and he liked a good enamel on the cages, a suitable colour being a French grey or sky-blue; he also did his fronts with silver enamel to avoid their rusting.

Mr. Springthorpe, being called on, his question was: "Do you prefer to put the birds up in pairs, or run one cock with two hens?" He was a strong believer, he said, in running the birds in pairs, and he was quite sure better results followed, as two birds could attend to the feeding better than one.

Mr. Steer drew the following: "Do you approve of early breeding?" In a short speech, Mr. Steer said the 1st of April was plenty soon enough, and even then we should have some cold snaps of weather, which was very detrimental to the birds.

Mr. Sykes's question was: "What is the best preventative against red mite?" Mr. Sykes said he kept the cages clean; he washed them out with hot water and disinfectant soap, lime-washed the insides, and painted the outsides. He was never troubled with red mite. This gentleman makes his own cages, he informs us, out of lard boxes, which are very good for the purpose named.

Mr. Hinde was then called on, his question being: "What kind of nest-pan do you consider best?" Mr. H. said he liked the ordinary nest-pan. He had used boxes, but did not like them.

Mr. Taylor was asked: "Do you prefer your stock birds to be large ones?" He liked good big ones, and he liked big hens. The bigger the hen, the bigger the young. He didn't like big, rough hens, but big ones with good quality feather, and he preferred his birds to be good big ones on both sides, and nice quality feather. If he had a cock on the small side, he would pair it with as large a hen as possible.

Mr. Toulson was next, his question being: "Do you approve of Cinnamon blood for the improvement of colour and quality of feather?" Mr. Toulson said he was a believer in Cinnamon blood for the quality of feather, and also colour. You get that nice salmon tinge on your birds that way. He advocated its use in breeding Yorkshires.

Mr. W. Atherton, the assistant secretary, was then called upon: "How many nests would you take from one hen in a season?" It depended, he said, on the birds. If show birds, he thought one nest sufficient, and if good, robust stock birds, two or three nests might be taken; but he didn't believe in running good show birds together too much.

Mr. Barnes's question was: "What is the cause of so many young dying in the shell?" Mr. Barnes said he thought it was due to cold weather, or to the hen not sitting properly.

This brought a very interesting meeting to a close, and those present thoroughly enjoyed it.—F. C. Sims, Hon. Sec.

GRIMSBY C.B.S.

Meeting held Mar. 30, Slatters Rooms, 10 members present. Two new members (Messrs. Craker and Drayton) elected. Distribution of Spratts' seeds and food. Mr. W. Clem has removed from Edward Street to 94, Granville Street.—Towl Bros., Hon. Secs.

BLAYDON-ON-TYNE & DIS. C.B.S

At usual monthly meeting there was the largest turn out of members this season. After the usual business the members decided to have a F.F. show in July, also that we write various well-known fanciers for papers to be read to the members on the different varieties of Canaries, etc. Mr. W. Browell was accepted a new member.—Geo. Havver, Sec.

NORTHERN B.B., M. AND F.B.C.

Annual general meeting held Lockhart's Cafe, 65, Grainger Street, Newcastle, 22nd March. Balance-sheet for year ending March, 1911, was considered very satisfactory, as there was a good carry-forward. Mr. T. Robson presented cups and medals to the successful members as follows: Mr. J. McKenzie (Foreign Bird cup), and Mr. J. Maddison (British cup and also Mule cup); medals: Messrs. C. G. Petterson (2), C. Walters (1), A. Noble (1), Geo. Tayler (1), T. Robson (1), T. C. Crawhall (2), J. Foster (2), R. Todd and Son (2), T. Steel (1), W. C. Ott (1), Sokel and Binks (1), J. Maddison (2), J. McKenzie (2), Davidson (1), and O'Nieli (1). Election of officers: President, Mr. J. Tayler; Chairman, Mr. J. Shepherd; Vice-Chairman, Mr. T. Robson. The very best thanks of the club were given Mr. J. Bertram for his past services as secretary. Table show also held.—G. Taylor, Hon. Sec.

NATIONAL BRITISH BIRD & M.C.

Committee meeting held headquarters, Feathers Hotel, Gt. Chapel Street, Westminster, 31st March. Present: Messrs. J. Robson (Chairman), T. R. Trower, W. Page, W. H. Shepherd, C. T. Maxwell, J. Dewhurst, H. Goodchild, C. Cooper, A. C. Askew, R. A. Newley, W. H. Vale, G. E. Weston, and J. P. Carr. Letters read from Messrs. S. Beaty, E. Riley, P. H. Harris, C. Botting, H. S. Graham, and A. Plumbridge, which secretaries were instructed to answer. Decided, that the annual outing take place on Saturday, 27th May, going to Effingham Common, the same place as last year, and that dinner and tea be provided at the Station Hotel. Times of trains, etc., to be arranged later. A design for the club diploma was discussed at some length, and a motion was carried that all recognised bird artists be invited to send in a design, for which a guinea will be paid for the selected design. Mr. Weston kindly brought to the meeting, for the committee's inspection, Mules alleged to have been bred from a cock Linnet Mule and a hen Canary, also a Mule alleged to have been bred from a hen Goldfinch Mule and a cock Goldfinch. Mr. Weston was accorded a vote of thanks for the trouble he had taken in bringing the Mules for the committee's inspection. The new classification was again discussed at some length, but owing to the late hour, it was again adjourned. Messrs. C. Botting and H. S. Grahame (Camberwell), and Mr. P. H. Harris (Bedford Square) were elected members. A vote of thanks to the Chairman concluded meeting.—Plumbridge and Carr, Hon. Secs.

MANNINGHAM C.B.A.

Members recently had the pleasure of listening to a lecture by Mr. J. S. Clarkson (Halifax) on "Breeding and Management." He told us how he fed his birds, feeding the cock a week previous to the hens—he did not feed the hens till paired. He did not believe in making the food too good; his method is: One egg to a pound of home-made bread, a little maw seed, and a teaspoonful of cod liver oil. He put golden syrup in the drinking water to prevent the hens from being egg-bound—a thing he is never troubled with. He always uses felt lining for his nests, and he never allowed the birds to build a nest. He fastens the lining in with Stockholm tar. He always left the cock with the hen while she was sitting, except if he were troublesome; then out he came. The lecturer never used green food during the first round. He next told us what he did when the young were taken away; he fed with the same soft food they had been reared on. He gave them lime-water in the drinking water. Now, he told us, was the time to train the birds. What you could do now in one hour you could not do in two months after the birds had moulted. He told us how he did his cages, whitewashing them with equal portions of whiting and common salt; and he varnishes the fronts with equal parts of tar and turpentine. With these remarks he brought his lecture to a close. Our chairman (Mr. J. Ackroyd) asked for questions, which were asked, and were answered by the lecturer in his usual style—straight to the point. Mr. F. Gale proposed vote of thanks, which Mr. A. Huddlestone seconded. Mr. Clarkson suitably responded.—H. Grange, Sec.

NORTHERN LIZARD CLUB.

Meeting held April 1, Mr. Swan in chair. Secretary read correspondence relating to holding meetings at various centres. A long discussion ensued; ultimately, it was left over to next meeting. Secretary was empowered to act further, and report on same, at next meeting. Secretary then intimated to the members that our Indian friend, Mr. Hunter, had offered to present the club with another valuable prize, either a cup or something similar. As this gentleman had already given us a cup at the club's formation, it came as a great surprise to members, who received the announcement with applause, and expressed their satisfaction.—G. Davidson, Sec.

BANKFOOT & DISTRICT C.B.S.

Members wound up their winter syllabus, March 28th, when a large number spent a very enjoyable evening. It was arranged we should have a smoking concert after the usual business. It was just on 8 o'clock when Mr. J. Taylor (President) took the chair, when he invited all present to partake of pipes and tobacco; it was all free, being the gift of our worthy Secretary and himself. Business was got through very quickly. Mr. J. Smith promised a 2s. 6d. special for most birds shown and least points counted by any member at Dec. 16th show. Mr. J. Taylor gave a special for best cock at each old bird show during this season. Mrs. Gelder promised a special for best hen at each old bird show—all these on top of a long list of specials. Mr. D. Lowe opened the concert with a comic song. Mr. A. Barraclough followed with a good song. The following gentlemen also contributed to the programme: Messrs. H. Taylor, J. Taylor, J. Smith, and A. Kellett. This brought the evening to a close. As the competition does not begin until our June show, will all desirous of becoming members send names, etc., to the Secretary, Mr. F. Gelder, 01, Marsh Street, Little Horton, Bradford? Subscription, 3s. per year. —W. North, Assist. Sec.

Gold medals at club show for best unflighted cock and hen were won by Messrs. G. Mitchell and A. Watson, silver medals being won at the various shows by Messrs. W. Bishop, A. Harris, J. W. Miller (5), G. G. Henderson (5). Secretary and Treasurer, J. Brown (30). Secretary intimated he desired to retire, but after some discussion he agreed to accept office for another year. On the motion of Mr. Winter, it was agreed that secretary, when convening the meeting to allocate club patronage, intimate to each member of committee the names of societies making application for the patronage, so that all might have an opportunity of voting for the shows they desired to obtain the same. A suggestion was put forward by Mr. Dewar, and agreed to, that the club show be held in conjunction with a show the officiating judge at which had judged not more than 2 shows previous to the club show. Messrs. A. Harper (Holytown) and R. Lambie (Whitburn) were admitted to membership. Fanciers throughout the country are invited to join, and so further the interests of the Norwich Plainhead. Annual sub. 2s. 6d. A hearty vote of thanks to the chairman brought a pleasant meeting to a close.—J. Brown, Sec., 599, Duke Street, Glasgow.

GREEN CANARY ASSOCIATION.

Annual Dinner and Prize Distribution.

About 50 members and friends met at the "Star and Garter" Hotel, St. John's Lane, Liverpool, March 15, and after justice had been done to a first-class repast, a very enjoyable evening was spent, the president (Mr. J. Walker) in chair. Mrs. Walker kindly distributed the prizes to the winners. The proceedings opened with the usual toasts, which were followed by a song and dance, ably executed by Mr. Moore. Mr. Isaac rose to propose the "G.C.A." He poluted out we had had a very stiff season to face from a financial standpoint, but he was pleased to say we were practically free from debt, and had come through the crisis with credit, inasmuch as we had gathered together something approaching £40 worth of cups and medals, although we commenced the season with nothing, the whole of our plate having been won outright the previous year. He saw a successful future, and impressed upon the members the necessity of doing all they could to further the green Canary. Mr. Metcalfe proposed "Kindred Societies"; Mr. Hillmen responded. Much amusement was caused, when the prize winners, one and all, in acknowledging their cups, medals, etc., vowed they would be amongst them again next year. Mr. Hales, in playing "second-fiddle" to Mr. Lawson (who won the Norwich cup), said he was proud to see him take it, and felt it was no disgrace to be beaten by one of his own novices. Mr. Lawson, in responding, said he owed a lot of his success to the advice and practical assistance he had received from both Mr. Hales and Mr. Deacon. Unfortunately, several of the winners were unable to attend owing to the distance, quite a number of them hailing from the shire of broadacres. The secretary rose to respond on behalf of the G.C.A., and gave a brief resumo of the season's working. The membership had risen from 105 to 129, though, in point of fact, we had enrolled nearly 50 new members, resignations and lapses amounting to 26. The exhibits benched at the patronage shows did not show up as well as expected, the Norwich in particular being very poor, as would be seen from the following figures produced: Yorkshires 651, Norwich 346, Borders 563—an average of 65 38, and 56 respectively. Mr. Nimmo (winner of the Yorkshire Championship Cup) proposed "The Artistes," and Mr. Gregory "Our Visitors." Mr. Jack Graham was responsible for the musical part of the programme, and well earned the praise bestowed upon him.—Geo. Green, Hon. Sec.

CAGE BIRDS, 154, FLEET STREET, LONDON.

The general account of the Liverpool O.S. shows cash in hand to the extent of £2 13s. 8d., this being £1 4s. 7d. more than was brought forward from the previous accounts. It is pointed out in the secretaries' report that the most notable achievement of the past year was the unqualified success of the All-England Show, when the entries numbered 1,262, an advance of approximately 50 per cent. beyond the entries at the 1909 show. The secretaries (Messrs. Metcalfe and Hillmen), the chairman (Mr. G. B. Daniels), and the members in general are to be congratulated on the satisfactory position of affairs.

I regret that through the sudden death of my sister-in-law, writes Mr. T. C. Crawhall (Newcastle-on-Tyne), I am compelled to dispose of all my birds. My brother-in-law and his children are coming to live with us, and I shall have to give up my rooms. I was looking forward to a very successful season, as I had again got together what I considered a splendid collection for breeding purposes, especially as I have been fairly successful in my exhibiting this last season. I had my first "flutter" at the Palace, where I got third in unflighted yellows out of a class of 41 (my own breeding). I also bearded the lion in his den at Bradford East, and got 2nd in Cinn. marked class; and two 3rds and vhc at Scottish National. I shall still continue to take CAGE BIRDS, which has been my friend, guide, and teacher since I entered the Fancy six years ago.

He was one of the defendants, with Mr. Preston, in the law case in which our readers provided the funds for the decision in favour of the R.S.P.C.A. being contested in the Court of Appeal. The sympathy of the Fancy will be given to the relatives of Mr. Flower in the sad loss they have suffered.

OUR FRONTISPIECE.

Mr. H. J. Ford gives some valuable advice concerning exhibition Blackbirds.

On the front page of this issue we have reproduced the picture of a well-known winning Blackbird, together with a photograph of its owner, Mr. H. J. Ford, of Cardiff. The following notes, supplied by Mr. Ford, will, we are sure, interest lovers of the species.

In regard to my Blackbird known as "Jimmy Driscoll," 1st at Llanelly, he is, I may say, a regular old warrior in the show business. He is the winner of eleven 1sts and other prizes, and he has been on three occasions up to the Crystal Palace. In 1908 he was 4th, and in 1909 1st. In 1911 he was 3rd. He will be six years old next June, so he is getting on in age, and will not be able to compete with younger birds. In regard to the food I use, I mix one packet of Capern's Thrush food with one packet of Bowering's Thrush food, one packet of Bowering's chicken meal, ½lb. of sharps, ½lb. of powdered meat meal (crissel) together; this makes a splendid food for Thrush, Blackbird, or Starling. I mix in grated carrot—about a spoonful to each bird per day all the year round; also dandelion leaves watercress, or lettuce, whichever is in season, chopped up very fine. Now, I want my reader to understand that if you want to keep the Thrush family in health so that they will live a long life, don't forget the green foods. In regard to moulting the Blackbird, I have noticed that some fanciers say you should colour-feed the Blackbird during the moult. That is wrong, for if you do, on the face of the feathers the black will have a rusty tint. The way I moult them (and I have had some good ones through my hands this last ten years) is this: I put the Blackbird in the darkest corner of the bird-room and feed him on these lines—one-half staple food, one-quarter of grated carrot, and one-quarter of green food mixed together fresh every day, and I put a couple of strings of saffron in his drinking water. By using the saffron the birds have a quick moult. The moult over, you can start colour-feeding as quick as you like; then by the time the feathers have acquired the right polish, the bird's beak and eye ceres will be up in colour ready for exhibition. Very shortly we will be having young Blackbirds here. If you want to pick the cocks from the hens in the nest, go for the darkest birds. You will find the cocks will have much darker wing and tail feathers than the hens; therefore you can take your pick, and leave the others for the parent birds to rear. In regard to the rearing of these young birds, you will mix the above-mentioned food (in a little boiling water), and make sufficiently wet to be in a sloppy condition; also dig up a few ground worms and scald them in boiling water. Cut them in small pieces and mix with food. You will then have no difficulty in rearing the young Blackies.

H. J. FORD (Cardiff).

Through a Birdroom Window.

All went on excellently, and at the end of ten days I got on top of the aviary and had another peep. There, sure enough, were three grand youngsters of a dirty brown colour with yellowish bills. To my horror, a few days later the nest was empty. I thought all sorts of things; but I had a good look round, and there on the ground I saw three little brown objects squatting on their hams and with their beaks in the air, as still as death. Some movement of mine caused them to stir, and I almost laughed. They looked so queer; they looked all legs and claws, but with no tails. I may say in passing that it would be hopeless to expect to rear Virginian Cardinals on anything save live food. There must be a constant supply of mealworms, gentles and black clocks. Fortunately I can get any amount of the latter in the village by giving out Demon traps and pennies at the same time, the rule being—no beetles, no penny. It saves a heap of trouble to half fill a Demon trap and then simply put it in the aviary and let the birds help themselves, like Betsy Prigg, as they feel disposed. This will be pretty often, as, like Oliver Twist, the youngsters are always asking for more.

After three weeks there won't be much more bother and anxiety, as the young ones will be pretty well able to fend for themselves. It is best then to cage them up, or if left in the aviary they not only become very wild, but they interfere with a second nesting by the parents. I don't often go in for a second nest with ordinary birds, as I want to be away tomorrow to fresh fields and pastures new.

I offered the youngsters to a neighbouring aviculturist, and he accepted them the same day. It quite reminded me of how the Duchesse de Galliera offered the Duc de Montpensier a valuable estate in Italy: he accepted it by telegram! Virginian Cardinals were intended for an outdoor life. In a cage they are very messy and untidy, and your wife, if a careful body and a lover of tidiness, will always be complaining of them: but then, if the Angel Gabriel came down from heaven to see some people they would complain that he littered up the place by dropping his feathers about!

British Bird . . . . Keeping.

A Working Man's Hobby

By
S. STEPHENS
(Peckham, S.E.)

There is no hobby which, to my mind, affords so much pleasure at so little cost as the keeping of British birds, and I often wonder that this hobby is not taken up more by working men. I think it is largely due to the mistaken idea that it is necessary to have a large and expensive bird-room, with all up-to-date appliances, before one can hope to have any success with birds. I have proved, however, to my own satisfaction, that it is quite possible for a working-man with very little spare cash, not only to keep birds, but to show and win with them; and my object in writing this article is to try and show some of my fellow bird-lovers how I succeeded in starting a hobby which has afforded me many hours of pleasure and recreation at a minimum of cost.

I was first induced to take an interest in birds by a friend who invited me to see his bird-room, and although at that time I did not know the difference between a Canary and a Bullfinch, it was soon evident that the love of birds was lying dormant in my nature, for I came away from my friend's place with the worst attack of "bird fever" it was possible to have, and decided to set up with some British birds at once.

The First Problem.

The first thing was, where to keep them. This was soon settled, as the only place possible was our living room. After some discussion with my wife (during which she expressed some very plain opinions on birds in general), I got permission to use one of the walls for a "bird-room." I first got two boards, one six feet long by nine inches wide, which I fixed to the wall about four feet high for my cages to stand on; the other one, five feet long by six inches wide, I fixed about eight inches below the first; this was for seed, etc. I then got a piece of what is called "art serge" and my wife made me a bordering to go round the top shelf; this, when fixed, hung down and completely hid my other shelf from view. A coat of stain on top of shelf completed my "bird-room."

The next thing was, the cages. This, I found, was a big item. After having a look round at the shops I came to the conclusion that there were very few cages on the market that were suitable for keeping birds in; my idea was to give plenty of room, and all the cages which I thought were suitable were beyond my means. So I decided to try my hand at making them.

I found that I could get three-eighth by nine-inch boards at one penny per foot run. Having got six feet I set to work. I made each cage one foot high, one foot wide, and nine inches deep, with a rail in front two inches high; this left space for a wire front twelve inches by ten. I carefully cut each joint and then glued and nailed cage together, after which I painted the inside dark green and the outside black, finishing with a coat of varnish all over. I found that the cage was watertight, and I was very little troubled with red mite. I bored two holes in back of cage to screw perches into. These I cut seven inches long so that they were two inches from wires.

The fronts I had made, as I found it cheaper. These were made with one cross bar and water hole in centre, costing fourpence halfpenny each. I had round glass drinkers—one outside for water, and one in right-hand back corner for seed.

A Nice Appearance.

I had some difficulty with doors, but I borrowed a fret-saw, and after marking round with the top of a cup, I was able to cut a pretty fair door for an amateur. I made six of these cages as funds would allow, and when I placed them on my shelf they had very nice appearance.

I found that the total cost of each cage was under two shillings, and as I had taken the trouble to make them carefully, I think they were as good as those I could have bought for double the price. The total cost of "bird room" when complete was about thirteen shillings, and my wife admitted that the shelves and cages added to the look of the room.

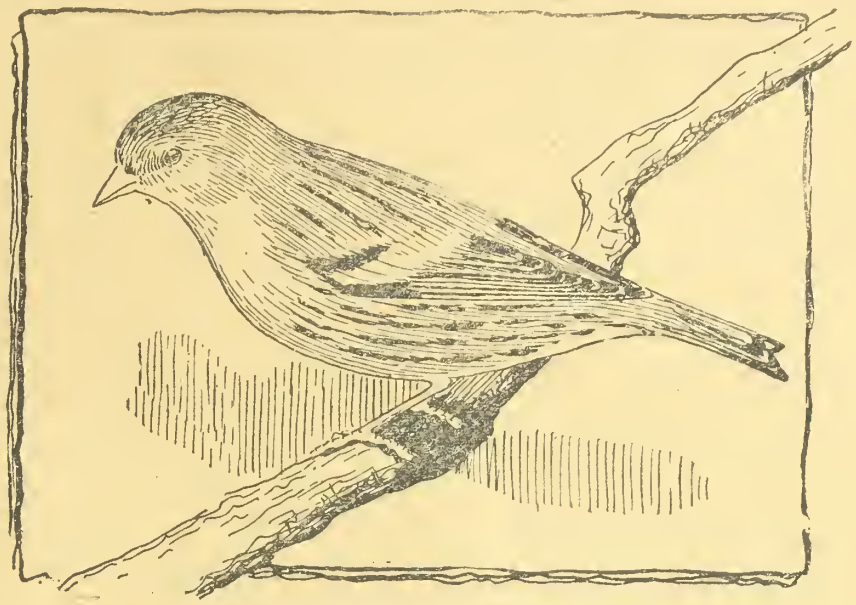
You may be sure that, after I had finished my first cage, it was not long before I found an inmate. It was here that the knowledge I had gained by reading came in useful. I had taken CAGE BIRDS in for some time, and had also bought several other books on the subject; so that I had some idea of the birds I wanted. The first that I bought was a young Chaffinch, for which I gave the modest sum of eightpence. He very soon settled down to cage life, and as I had very little experience when I bought him, I must put it down to luck; but, anyway, he turned out to be the best bird I have ever kept. Within six weeks from being caged he was perfectly steady. After keeping him about eight months I entered him in a show, and, greatly to my surprise, he was placed second, and sold at a good figure.

My second bird was a Bramblefinch, which I kept for some time. But, chiefly owing to his (?) song, which my wife said made her feel ill, I got rid of him.

I had at different times most of the British seed-eaters, and I found that each bird had its own personality, no two birds being alike. Some would settle down as if born in a cage; others were very wild until after a moult; and some I had to give up in despair, as nothing would tame them.

Dealing with Fresh-caught Birds.

My way of dealing with a fresh-caught bird was to cage him in a quiet corner and leave him alone as much as possible. I feed him on crushed seed as varied as possible (giving it both in seed vessel and on the floor), plenty of green stuff, plenty of fresh water (which I place inside), and also all the varieties of wild seed I can get hold of. I think it a great mistake to feed your birds entirely according to the advice given for the feeding of that particular species. Each bird has its own likes and dislikes, and it does not at all follow that because a particular mixture suits the majority it will suit all. I have a Bullfinch now who absolutely refuses to look at sunflower seed, although the majority of these birds are passionately fond of it. I therefore give my fresh bird every seed I can, and I soon find out which he will eat. If I can find out something that he is exceptionally fond of, I make a note of it, as it is a great help in steadying him to use this. After about a fortnight I put him in a fresh cage and bring him more to the light. I give him his food every evening, and only sufficient for the next day, as I want him hungry when I come home.



After tea, down comes the cage to the table, and, selecting the particular dainty that he is partial to, I try to tempt him.

I have found mealworms are greatly enjoyed by the majority of seed-eaters. Sunflower for Bullfinches, Greenfinches, and Chaffinches will generally tempt them, and hemp seed is very useful with some. I start by throwing the seed or worms into the cage from a short distance, and gradually shorten the distance, until he will take the seed from my hand. I then open the cage door and put my hand inside with the seed until he will hop on to my fingers.

This is much easier said than done, and I have spent weeks before I could get a bird to take from my hands; but by persevering I have generally succeeded sooner or later.

I have sometimes had birds that nothing would tame, and I have let them go, as I think it is both cruel, and also worrying to the other birds, to have one constantly banging about the cage. I find that the system of feeding once a day, at the same time and always by the same person, soon steadies a bird, as he begins to look forward to you; and the fact of his always getting something when you do come goes a long way towards your winning his confidence. I have always made a point of keeping my cages clean, and once a week I run the first bird into a spare cage; then I wash the cage in warm water with a good drop of paraffin in it. As soon as this is done I transfer the next bird to it and keep on until all the cages are washed, placing the first bird back into the last cage. As they are all well painted, inside and out, it does not take long, and I am never troubled with insect pests. I also encourage my birds to bathe well, and as a result I can take my birds straight out of my stock cages into a show cage, and exhibit them.

I have had nearly five years' experience with my birds, and, looking back, I can honestly say that of all the various hobbies I have had, I have experienced more pleasure and enjoyment with them than with anything else. With the exception of the first outlay for cages, the cost has been only a few coppers each week. And my hobby has kept me indoors. It is probable I should have spent more outdoors. I have not shown many times, but I have managed to cover expenses when I have done so. In conclusion, I would say to those who, like myself, are not over burdened with money: Try birds, and you will agree with me that they form an ideal working-man's hobby.

A HEN SISKIN THAT WINS.

This hen is distinguished by her excellent colour and lacing, and has won many prizes for Mr. W. Francis (Tooting), including 2nd at Wimbledon.

Two Charming Goldfinch Hybrids:

The Goldfinch-Greenfinch & the Goldfinch-Redpoll.

By
THOS. SMITH
(Glasgow.)

The Goldie-Greenfinch.

For a pleasant pastime, few hobbies surpass Hybrid-breeding, and perhaps there is less difficulty in the breeding of the Goldfinch-Greenfinch Hybrid than in any other.

The Siberian Goldfinch is naturally preferred, being larger and better-coloured than the British Goldfinch. A healthy, vigorous Goldfinch readily mates with a Greenfinch hen, and this lady takes kindly to his lordship, nesting freely. She will build in an ordinary Canary nest, but she is fond of seclusion. As an inducement, a wicker cage, with the inmost end removed, should be fixed into the cage.

The Greenfinch starts nesting in May, and should be supplied with moss to encourage her to build. She lays freely, and will hatch and rear. As every breeder knows, few Goldfinches can be trusted in a cage with eggs. The Goldie is apt to break and scatter them.

It is therefore advisable to set the Greenfinch's eggs under foster parents—a pair of common Canaries, say—to be hatched and her young reared.

The Goldfinch-Greenfinches are a good size, and being strong, grow rapidly; and they can do for themselves at the age of five weeks, when they can be removed to another cage.

Pretty, and Often Exhibited.

This Hybrid has lovely plumage, showing the colours of both parents. The bird is frequently seen on the show bench. It resembles the Greenfinch in shape and size.

Greenfinches are plentiful, and hens can be obtained for a few pence each. A young hen should be selected; she has a better chance of settling down. An old hen is restless, and scarcely ever settles down to nest in a cage.

Food suitable for both is as follows: Canary seed, a little summer rape, hemp, and sunflower; buds of garden plants; and hawthorn, dandelion (roots, leaves and heads), and chickweed. Give also egg and biscuit mixture when the hen is not hatching.

Colour-feeding this Hybrid is resorted to, and seems to aid the colouring.

The Goldfinch-Greenfinch Hybrid is an excellent house bird, and the breeding of it should command far more attention than is bestowed upon it. The persistence in Hybrid breeding will compel show committees to reorganise the classification, so as to meet the requirements of the increased number of Hybrids, which of late years has been very pronounced. The Goldfinch-Greenfinch Hybrid may not be the most valuable, but it is a beautiful bird, and fetches a very fair price, a goodly specimen being ever in demand.

The Goldie-Redpoll.

This cross has not been followed up by cage bird fanciers with anything like the persistence of the large Hybirds. Probably the smallness of the product of the Goldfinch and Redpoll has something to do with this apathy of Hybrid breeders. Be that as it may, the Goldfinch-Redpoll Hybrid is a very attractive fellow. The colours of the feathering of both parents blends beautifully. The bird is clean and tidy, and easily kept in order.

The pair should be caged off in the winter time and kept together until they are put into the breeding cage, which should be done about the middle of May. The Redpoll in confinement is a late breeder, frequently laying in the month of August. The cock Goldfinch and hen Redpoll have hitherto been preferred for this cross, probably because this mating has been successful; but I do not know of any reason why the cock Redpoll and hen Goldfinch should not breed. I recommend fanciers who possess either to give the latter cross a fair trial.

The Goldfinch, whether cock or hen, should be a Siberian; this, in my opinion, helps in the matter of the size, and it intensifies the colouring, both considerations being important if you want to win on the show bench, not to mention the pleasing effect it gives the eye.

The Breeding Preparations.

The parents being accustomed to their freedom, it is advisable to place them in a fairly large cage, and for nesting purposes to fix a wicker cage as commonly supplied by bird dealers in sending birds; remove the wooden spikes from the inner end of the wicker cage, and put in a nest, taking care to so fasten it that it will not be easily upset; their eggs are precious, and every precaution should be taken to preserve them. Moss and hair should be put into the cage to encourage the birds to build. They may not display any signs of nesting until the latter part of June, or early in July; so that the owner need not despair should they make no start in April and May. Everything comes to him who waits; that should be remembered, in the hope that success will come, even in the crossing of such lovely birds as the Goldfinch and the Redpoll.

The hen Goldfinch and hen Redpoll are good sitters, and may be left to hatch out their young, provided the male bird does not interfere; he will sometimes demolish the eggs. But it is safer to have foster parents in the shape of Border Fancy Canaries; the Hybrids being themselves small, the Borders are better adapted to bring up tiny young birds hatched from the Goldfinch and the Redpoll.

Once the young get a start, and are under the care of capital feeders, they thrive and mature rapidly; and as they leave the nest and step on to the perch, they are most charming. Once they can do for themselves, they require very little attention.

The Goldfinch requires to be supplied with hemp seed. The Redpoll does well on ordinary Canary seed, with a pinch of rape seed. Both birds should have a moderate supply of green-food in season, beginning with the dandelion root, followed by the tender blade and heads of dandelion, and latterly chickweed. The birds should have egg mixture during the breeding season, and may safely be treated in the way Canaries are fed when breeding, and rearing young birds. The egg mixture and green food should be discontinued while the hen is sitting.

Colour-feeding at a Discount.

Colour-feeding will never improve a Goldfinch-Redpoll Hybrid. Nature brings the colours out brighter, especially the cap, as the bird advances in years. Being hardy, the Goldfinch-Redpoll Hybrid survives longer than other members of the Hybrid tribe.

Those of my readers who have had the pleasure of seeing the specimen exhibited for several years by Mr. Lamb at the Crystal Palace, must have been charmed by its fascinating ways. When last exhibited it seemed to have retained all its youthful vitality, and was greatly improved in the lustre of its feather.

This cross can be bred anywhere in town or country; and, as a household or parlour pet, it has no equal. Tiny, clean and smart, it is specially adapted for the home.

The Breeding . . of the . . Norwich Plainhead

By A. W. CURTIS (Fulham.)

The third and concluding instalment of this very practical lecture given before the Queen's Park and District C.B.A.

Some would lead a novice who cannot read between the lines to believe that large hens should be discarded. Are they discarded? Certainly not. Those lucky enough to breed them put too high a value on them to allow them to slip through their fingers. I am speaking from practical experience when I tell you that from such matings as that referred to you may expect during a season one bird, or perhaps two, taking after the cock in size and very often in ugliness and in coarseness of feather, but the majority more often than not will be only fit for the bird-shop. I know there are exceptions, and I admit that good birds are bred from such pairs, but more often by accident than design.

A Word for the Cock Bird.

My firm opinion is that the cock plays quite as prominent a part in the production of type and quality as ever the hen does, as I have bred far better birds from a small cock and a large hen than from a large cock and a small hen. Yet I am not an advocate of such pairing: I prefer a pair of birds as evenly balanced as possible—birds that are in possession of as many show points as you like; and the larger the birds the better I like them. From such a pair you can look forward with confidence to having youngsters more uniform in size and more typical; and should you be fortunate enough to breed one or two excelling in quality and colour, then you will find yourself well on the road towards breeding what you are so anxious to see in your room, namely, birds good enough for open competition.

Where is the fancier, be he champion, amateur, or novice, who would not like to be given the chance of selecting from among the prize-winners at the late Palace Show four or six pairs of Norwich for breeding purposes? I would like to ask how many of you here would go for large cocks and small hens? I venture to say that the first birds sought after would be the largest hens in the money—the cocks would be a second consideration. I can picture my own selection, and can also see those selected by others, were it possible for more than one to have the same birds.

The novice will quickly find customers for as many large hens as he can breed, but he will not find it so easy to buy one.

I trust no misunderstanding will accrue from my remarks re size, for it is furthest from my desire that anyone should leave here with the idea that size is my first consideration, for that is not so. Type and quality must never be lost sight of. One is not of much use without the other, for a typical bird lacking in quality can never be termed a first-class show bird. Type can only be maintained by the judicious pairing of two typical birds.

If a novice at any time finds he is losing in quality of feather, then is the time to introduce double-yellow blood. The same advice applies to the falling off in colour. Or the introduction of a little green blood occasionally will assist in the maintenance of quality and colour of feather.

Mention of green blood carries me back to the time when first I made up my mind to try and build up a green strain. It was during question-time following a lecture, that a certain fancier remarked, that the lecturer had advised the introduction of a yellow green hen to improve colour, but could he (the lecturer) say where such a hen could be procured, as he (the questioner) had tried everywhere in London he could think of, but had so far failed to procure what he wanted, although he was prepared to pay a good price. The lecturer replied that he was sorry not to be able to give the information asked for. This set me thinking, and my mind was quickly made up, that as soon as the breeding season started I would set to work to try and breed some greens without going outside my own room for the material.

The First Move.

My first move was to pair up two of the heaviest-marked yellows I had. Just about that time I was getting rid of my Crests and Crest-breds, and on looking round I found that among my Crest-breds were two birds—one a cock, the other a hen—heavily variegated, showing very little brow; in fact, not more than is seen on plenty of Plainheads to-day; luckily, they were two typical birds, not overburdened with body feather. These I placed on one side for the following season's breeding. From these two yellows I was fortunate enough to get two typical birds—one cock and one hen, both of them almost green. These I placed on one side until the next season, when they were to be paired to the cock and hen Crest-breds.

The next season rolled round, and the pairs were put together. To cut a long story short, I was fortunate enough to breed and rear several youngsters from these two pairs. Amongst them were two self Yellows and two self Buffs; one of the Yellows turned out a winner of several firsts in A.O.V. classes.

I might here mention, for the benefit of those interested, that my object in first putting together two yellows was to breed birds with veins full of yellow blood, as they were required to be paired up with the Crest-breds that were bred from double buffs for perhaps several generations. To have put a yellow bred in the ordinary way with one of the Crest-breds, the chances would have been that all their youngsters would have been buffs; whereas I was lucky enough to have more yellows than buffs. This is the only time Crest-bred blood has been introduced into my strain.

The Reward of Perseverance.

The novice who is likely to make the most successful fancier is the one who is blessed with plenty of patience; this, with perseverance, cannot fail to be of great assistance to any fancier. I remember on one occasion reaping the reward of perseverance. I had the misfortune to lose a hen through a broken egg. This hen had three youngsters barely three weeks old. The cock had been feeding them grand until I took the dead hen away from him; immediately he missed her he behaved more like a mad bird, bashing himself against the wires in the slide division, knocking the youngsters about in all directions. I tried all ways to pacify him, but without success. The youngsters were getting hungry and calling for food, but not a bit would he give them. I tried to transfer the youngsters to other hens, but they would not have them at any price, their own families being only a few days old. I managed, after a lot of trouble, to get a little egg food into the crops of the young, when I had to return to my work, leaving the young birds to take their chance until my return home for dinner.

An Inspiration.

No sooner was I home again than I rushed upstairs to the bird-room. There was the egg food untouched, and the old cock still flying on the slide calling for the hen. The young were getting gradually weaker for want of food. It then suddenly struck me that if the cock could only see the hen he might be tempted to feed his young. So I fished the hen's body from out the dust-bin, filled her nestpan with disinfectant, and gave her feathers a good dusting with the same powder, set her on the nest as best I could, and hung up the nest in its original position. Of course, the cock and youngsters could not get near her, they being in the other half of the cage, with the wire slide separating them from the hen.

The moment the cage door was shut down the cock was on the wires of the slide, singing to the hen for all he was worth, and in less than five minutes he was on the bottom of the cage cramming the youngsters with food. On my arrival home at tea-time, up to the bird-room I went again to see how things were progressing, and there were the youngsters asleep with their little crops packed with food. I waited until dark, and then removed the hen from the nest again, thinking perhaps, with a night between, the cock would be all right next morning. I got up a little earlier than usual the next day, only to find Mr. Cock going through the same performance as on the previous day; the youngsters' crops were again empty, and all three of them were crying for food. I again fished out the hen, gave her another good dressing with disinfectant, and then placed her on the nest, where I let her remain for more than a week when the young were able to look after themselves. Now, if I had been unconcerned and had not persevered to save those youngsters, they would surely have died, and I should have lost amongst them a buff cock that has won me more firsts and special prizes than any bird I have ever bred.

I mention these facts to illustrate to the novices the necessity of cultivating patience, also to impress upon them the fact that, without perseverance one cannot expect to make much headway.

The Importance of Correct Staging.

Just a few words of advice to the novice re staging, and I will draw to a close. If one wishes to be a successful exhibitor, there are many things which will require forethought and judgment, but I am afraid there is more indifference displayed over staging matters than the majority of exhibitors would care to admit. It is not at all unusual to see a good bird well washed, and in the pink of condition as regards show form, put on the bench in a dirty, dilapidated old cage, which has been neither washed out nor enamelled for years. For show after show out comes the same old wire-fronted box, and from show after show the owner goes home, disappointed and grumbling because he cannot get a first prize. Ah! my friend, that dirty cage has cost you more than one first prize; on more than one occasion your bird has been equal in merit to the one that has in the end been awarded that coveted first. The only thing to turn the scale has been the nice, clean, up-to-date cage in which your brother fancier has shown his bird, and had yours been as nicely staged, the turn might have gone in your favour.

Then, again, in regard to show cages, how often we see those thin, narrow splinters of wood taking the place of a good-shaped perch. A bird having hind toes at all inclined to weakness finds it impossible to balance himself on such skewers. What does he then do? He gets to the bottom of the cage and there stops, and the most patient judge in the world cannot get him to stay on the perch long enough to be compared with others competing in the same class. Time after time have I seen good birds left out of the cards for no other reason; and exhibitors have only themselves to blame.

Nothing should be left to chance; on the contrary, everything possible should be done to assist your birds to show themselves to the very best advantage, for where competition is keen the fancier who makes a study of all these little points is bound to come out on top, and those taking no interest in such matters are bound to go to the wall.

In conclusion, I would advise exhibitors always to have suitable cages and perches for whatever variety of bird they may put on the show bench. Let those cages and perches as well as your birds be as clean and as neat as possible; then you will have the satisfaction of knowing that you have done your very best to assist your bird to win for you, not only first in his class, but the special for the best staged bird in the show.

I must thank you for your kind attention, and trust if there is anything I have not made clear to the novice, he will not be backward in asking for an explanation, as I shall be only too pleased to answer to the best of my ability any questions that may be put to me.

Making Canary Breeding Pay.

How a beginner is achieving this end with just ordinary Songster Canaries.

F. J. YOUNG (Walworth).

At about 20 days after hatching, one of the chicks will be seen trying to stand on the edge of the nest. This is followed by a struggle to reach the nearest perch and in a few days the cage will be "alive" with the youngsters hopping and fluttering about. They soon find out where the hen gets her supplies of food from, and can generally feed themselves pretty well when about a month old.

As soon as they can keep themselves well supplied, they can be taken away from the hen and put in a bigger cage, where they will have room to stretch their wings. At this time I give them a supply of soaked Canary seed with the egg food, and as I see they are cracking the seed I gradually substitute unsoaked seed and diminish the quantity of egg food until at six weeks old I have got them on Canary seed alone, with an occasional treat of egg food every two or three days until they have moulted.

After removing the young from the breeding cage I put back the cock and supply a clean nest-pan, lining, and nest bag, and leave the couple to start house-keeping all over again.

I notice that the hens get costive quicker than the cocks; in fact, I rarely see a cock bird out of sorts. If a case of this sort does appear, I administer a pinch of Epsom salts to the drinking water, and in a day or two all is well. A liberal pinch of niger and linseed occasionally also helps to keep a bird free in its bowels.

Once I had the case of a hen which suddenly took to sitting about with its eyes shut and feathers puffed out all over its body, so that it resembled a ball, its wings hanging down at its sides so much that they nearly touched the perch. I could not diagnose the complaint, but I put the hen in a cage by itself, and gave a bread sop, with which was mixed about a quarter teaspoonful of cod-liver oil and malt extract. She did not take kindly to it at first taste, but after a couple of hours I noted she devoured it with apparent relish. I gave her some more the next day, and in a couple more days she was as "right as rain," hopping cheerfully from perch to perch, her feathers drawn tight and close to the body.

As to Cages and their Cost.

My stock cages were made from margarine boxes (now, you monied fanciers, don't turn up your noses, these hints are for starters, who cannot afford much), and their size is about 13½in. by 10in. by 7½in. deep. These boxes can be obtained at a penny or twopence each, and a decent cage can be made from one by any fancier who is at all handy with tools. The lid has just enough wood in it to make the tray, and the cross piece at front of cage. All nail holes should be filled with putty, and a few more nails driven in at the back and corners, and when the cage is well sand-papered and stained black outside and enamelled blue inside, with seed-box and water-glass fixed on, a neat and serviceable cage is the result.

The total cost of a cage of this description is as follows:—Box 1d; wire front, 2½d. (by the dozen); 2½in. glass-front seed box 2½d.; water pot 1½d.; painting, say, 1d.; total, 8½d. Sandpaper and nails are not included, as they are found in most amateur carpenters' outfits.

For a beginner who does not want to spend too much money for a start, I think German Canaries would be best. They are about the cheapest, and about the most easy to rear, also being very prolific breeders. Besides this, they can generally be sold amongst working men, as the cocks make lusty singers.

With regard to making a profit, I found that what I spent in starting—i.e., cost of birds, cages (I made my own), etc., was repaid by the sale of the stock I bred, besides leaving enough for upkeep and expenditure during the following season, so that I contrived to make my hobby at least self-supporting, and in the future I shall hope to always show a balance on the right side. In conclusion, let me state that I have found the keeping and breeding of Canaries very interesting, and I would not now willingly give it up.

The Young Naturalist.

Prizes of 1s. and two of 6d. each will be given weekly for the best three anecdotes about birds written on postcards. Competitors must be under sixteen years of age, and state whence stories are taken. Two stars indicate the Winning Contribution; one star the runners-up.

*A Clever Goldfinch Mule.

A friend of mine once had a Goldfinch. It was kept in a cage in the kitchen, and if the water tap was turned on and left to splash in the sink, Goldie would fly from his cage and have such a nice bath in it. Once he got out of the window, and flew across the road into a jeweller's shop. My friend took the cage across, and back Dickie went into it without any trouble. Another time he flew on to the servant's shoulder, went down the street with her to the butcher's, and came back quite safe.—Ivy Martin (age 11 years), 5, Sandhurst Road, Polygon, Southampton.

The Robin's Secret.

I'm little Robin Redbreast, Miss,
My nest is in the tree;
If you look up in yonder elm,
My pleasant home you'll see.
We made it very soft and nice—
My pretty mate and I—
And all the time we worked at it,
We sang most merrily.

I have a secret I would like
The little girls to know,
But I won't tell a single boy;
They rob the poor birds so.
Within our pretty little nest,
Arranged with loving care,
Are five sweet speckled little eggs—
Don't tell the boys they're there.

*Joey and Mary Nightingale.

We have a Nightingale in our workshop which we call "Joey." He is so tame he will sometimes come on my arm while I am at work, and he sings beautifully every day. Last week our instructor brought him a mate, which we call "Mary." At first "Joey" seemed very jealous of "Mary," and would not let her eat out of the same dish; but now they have become good friends, and "Joey" is carrying gentles in his beak and calling "Mary" to follow him into different corners of the room, where they sit together and twist their heads about and bow to each other in all sorts of funny ways. Our instructor says they are looking for a snug corner, where they can build a home, and we are taking a great interest in their movements. Sent by Clarance Devy. An Attentive Partner.

The Mute Swan takes his turn at incubation, and whenever the hen bird leaves the nest he uncovers the eggs and keep them warm until she has fed and thoroughly dried her plumage. When not actually sitting, he is always to be found in the vicinity of the nest, a watchful and careful sentinel, and a dangerous bird to approach.

Green Woodpecker's Nesting Site.

The favourite nesting site of the Green Woodpecker is a hole in a tree which the birds excavate for themselves. Dixon records that a pair of these birds once took possession of a large burrow in the cliffs between Paignton and Torquay; this was but a few yards from the summit, and was not in any way dug out by the birds.

Chiff-Chaff and Willow Wren.

Many bird-lovers find a difficulty in distinguishing the Chiff-Chaff from the Willow Warbler, and also in noting any difference between their nests. They both build domed homes composed of dead grass and leaves, and lined with horsehair and a quantity of feathers. The eggs are also very similar, both in size and marks. As a rule the nest of the Willow Wren is more open and hardly so compactly built as that of the Chiff-Chaff.

Jim Overend.

On my second visit to Mr. Overend I was favoured in meeting also an old partner of our friend, Mr. Spedding. They are brothers-in-law, and showed for some time as Overend and Spedding. So that, on the principle of two heads being better than one, I had an advantage—what one did not quite remember, the other could put a word in about; and between the two I got on well.

Jim in "Hot Water."

Mr. Overend was down to officiate at a certain show at Batley. He soon had a few to see him, wanting to borrow a few birds for this show; and, in the end, he lent eight to various fanciers, but not a money prize was there amongst the lot, and he got into very "hot water" for not judging them fair. Those he had lent the birds to never said a word, but those who had won first prizes had a lot to say about the birds lower down being better than some of those above. Fancy grumbling when they had got firsts! This goes to show that they would give our friend credit for judging, even when his own birds were there; and it shows the terrible extent to which borrowing was carried on. Mr. O., however, always made a hobby of the Fancy, and did not keep the birds for the money to be made out of them.

Prominent exhibitors at this time, besides Messrs. Overend and Spedding, were Jack Thackray, Jim Wilkinson, Pete Rawnsley, Ike and Meso Holroyd (two brothers), Bill Hutton, Jim Bastow, J. Baxter, and others of the Great Horton and Lidgett Green districts; Luke Belk, Mark Balance, John Holroyd, Bill Orange (Whittaker was his proper name), Harry Ellison, of Dewsbury; T. M. Read and Bottomley, of Halifax; Little Wick, of Huddersfield (a bye-name); Job Copley, of Kirkburton; Neddy Blake, J. Thornton, Billy Best, Jack Oddy, and others whom the present generation have never heard of—all thorough good sportsmen that could take a beating.

All in One Syndicate.

In those days the Great Horton-cum-Lidgett Green "skooil" were known as the "long firm." They were all in ono syndicate, and would buy any good birds in the country, if they could be bought, and, if not, they would borrow them, and none of the others had much chance against them. And these same fanciers used the present-day headquarters of the Great Horton O.S. as their meeting place; and, moreover, the present secretary, Mr. J. Holroyd, is a member of the same family as the Holroyd Brothers mentioned above. There is no doubt Great Horton is the oldest society in the North. This "long firm" went for every bird that could beat them. They at last proved invincible. They carried everything before them for some time, until at last they broke up, the birds being divided amongst the members, though for a long time, in consequence of their having got the best birds of the country in their hands, they had great sway at the shows.

Jack Thackray is the fancier to whom the present generation owe much. He came into the Fancy with a great amount of energy and a fair amount of money, and was not long before he got the prices up to a considerable extent; in fact, before his advent in 1874-5 birds could be had for from 3s. to 10s., the latter being considered a fair good price. Mr. T., however, would have tho birds, and freely gave up to £1, which amount was given for good, even marked birds at three weeks old, which were taken off the nest edge. The same gentleman was the first to put birds out to breed, and to pay for what were bred.

The first pair that Mr. Overend bought cost the large sum of 5s. 6d., the "odd tanner" being for the hen. The fact that it had not done anything the previous breeding season would probably have something to do with tho lowness of the price. For Jim, however, they did well. They bred somo rompers, one in particular, a yellow, won all over England, including the Palace, and then was borrowed by Jack Thackray for three years in succession, and £3 per year was paid for the loan (better this, than selling).

New Series by this popular Author.

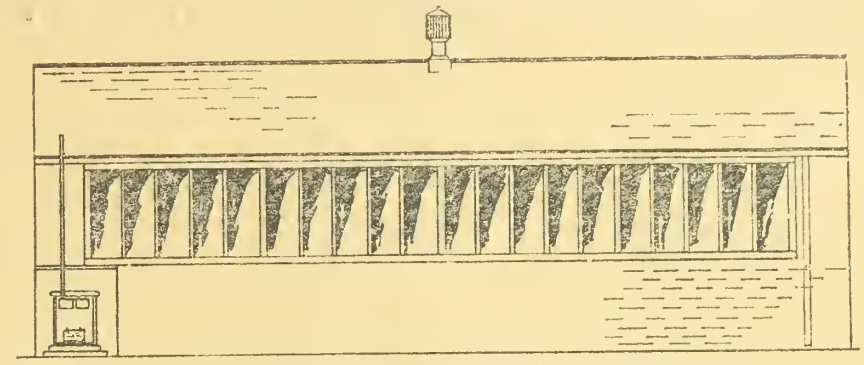
No. 2.—My Virginian Cardinals.

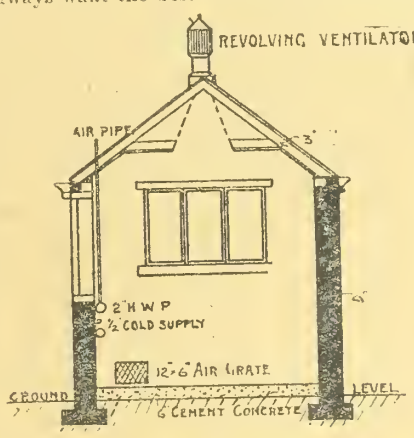


The atmosphere of Micklefield—winter and summer—is simply that of a roofed-in railway station open at both ends. Occasionally a breeze blows in at one or the other end, and stirs up the smoke a little. As for the air of Micklefield, it is mild and I like it; but its best friend could not call it dry. I was therefore a little undecided whether to try Virginian Cardinals or no. Looking at the Bird Books, I found that they were reputed peculiarly susceptible to fogs and damp. I decided finally to try them; on the principle that if they could stand Micklefield, they could stand "owt."

The initial difficulty was to get hold of what Artemus Ward once called "the vile body" on which to make my experiment. Many years ago—we won't be too particular about how many—Virginian Nightingales were the commonest of imported birds. Every spring saw them brought over in little German cages, each in his narrow cell.

For weal or woe,
These kindred spirits lived
And dwelt apart,

as Gray says in his Elegy of our rude forefathers. The reason was very obvious in the case of the Virginian Nightingales, for if put together they would have emulated the Kilkenny cats, and fought till there was none remaining.



Some years ago the American Government forbade the exportation of their native birds; some thought, not before it was needed, as the mortality among the emigrants was appalling. We aviculturists deeply regretted the move, as it cut us off from so many old favourites. I wonder how many years it is since anyone saw a Nonpareil or an Indigo bird. It is long enough since I did, at any rate; and yet 20 years ago they were as common as German Canaries, and fetched about five shillings each. Now I sometimes see an odd one advertised in the columns of CAGE BIRDS, but alas, the price is thirty shillings. It is the same with Virginian Cardinals. Now they fetch what anyone will give for them, and as many want the one and only one, his value is corresponding. At the time I am writing about there was no difficulty in getting a Virginian Nightingale, but there was considerable difficulty in getting a healthy one. A Virginian Nightingale kept in a close shop for a few days or a few weeks has a nasty habit of contracting asthma, and then he is a "goner." It is merely a question of time. I was fortunate in securing a very fine cock bird from a lady friend. She had had him two years and allowed him to fly about her room, and I should think generally made himself objectionable. She informed me he was such a sweet dear and would take a meal-worm from her mouth. I thought to myself, he won't do so from mine, but I did not say so, as I thought if I did I might not get him.

MR. OVEREND'S OUTDOOR BIRDROOM AT RAVENSTHORPE.
Front Elevation.

He arrived one morning in grand form, and I do not think I can better describe him than in the terms in which the polite courtiers of Henry VIII. spoke of Wolsey: "A scarlet sin." I wondered at the time how the lady had managed to keep his colours, as I have found as a rule that Virginians soon fade in captivity, much in the same way as bright coloured goods do in a shop window. I suppose they miss something in captivity that gives the colouring matter to their feathers.

The next difficulty was to find a hen. I happened to go to Hull for the day, and passing up the main street to the quays, I saw in the window of a stuffy little bird shop a very draggled and dilapidated hen Virginian Cardinal. She had no tail, hardly any wing flights, a most rakish looking crest of about three feathers, and was generally unkempt in appearance. It is, I am sure, a mistake to always want the best. As a matter of fact, I believe that Touchstone's advice is most sensible. The reasons of my belief are two; one is, that directly you have the best of anything you have closed an avenue of enjoyment—the enjoyment of waiting for a wish to be realised; the other is that one becomes sorry for the persons whom one sees stumbling along with the inferior article. Perhaps the perfect way is to have access to the best when you need it, as a Londoner has, for example, with books in the British Museum Reading Room, and go along cheerfully with the poor things that are your own.

Section of Birdroom.

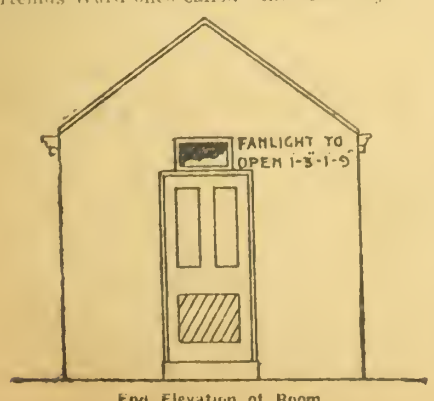
Unfortunately this does not apply to birds, as I know of no generous dealer that will lend you a hen for the breeding season. I wish I did. Accordingly, I felt that kind Providence had put this bird in my way; she must be mine, for better or worse. I did not see much better. I walked in accordingly and asked in my most simple country manner the price of the shabby looking brown bird in the window. The owner of the shop grunted that I could have her for three halfcrowns, and seemed glad to get shut of her. I at once closed with the offer, and thought I had got a good bargain, as she was perfectly healthy, though a bit shabby perhaps.

When I got home I put her into a roomy cage and showed her to her future lord and master. You never saw such a change come over a bird. Up went his crest, down went his wings, backwards and forwards waved his tail, and he began one of the most seductive whistles you ever heard. It was evidently based on Herrick's verse:

Come live with me
And be my love,
And we will all
Its pleasures prove.

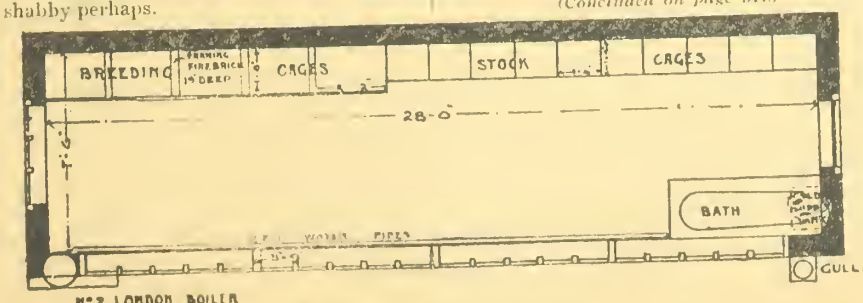
I believe Barkis was quite willing, but I knew that before they could come together the poor lady must grow some flights and a tail. I accordingly caught her, removed all stumps, gave her a thorough good wash with an old shaving brush; and then, when perfectly dry, returned her to the cage to recuperate and grow new feathers. This usually takes about six weeks, so for that period both I and the cock had to possess our souls in patience.

Meanwhile I fed them both up with plenty of fat mealworms, and I had a Demon beetle trap continually set in the kitchen for black clocks, of which, by the way, they are inordinately fond. In two months, or about the end of March, they were both as fit as fiddles, and the cock was whistling his head off, while by the gay and cheeky look of the hen I felt sure she would go to nest at once if she got the chance.



I had at the time a nice big garden aviary ready and unoccupied, save by a few small Finches. This, I thought, is just the place for the Virginians; so one evening I went in and looked round to see that all was secure, and the next morning I let the hen go. You should have seen how delighted she was, how she flicked about from bush to bush and examined every inch of ground. She evidently fancied that she was back in the valleys of Pennsylvania once more, and only needed a mate to complete her happiness.

In a few days I put in the cock and then awaited developments. I had not long to wait. In a few days I noticed the hen carrying about short lengths of fir needles, and by night she had laid the foundations of a nest in a big laurel. The work went on very rapidly, quite as quickly as it does in the case of our English Blackbirds. Within a week the nest was completed. It is rather small for the size of the bird and very round and compactly built. Three eggs were laid.



How did I find this out? my readers will say. You tell us never to look at nests or the birds will desert. I never do—directly. Walk into the aviary, divide the branches, peer into the nest, and—you will see the eggs, but that is all you will see. That is not the way to do things. This is how to go to work. Climb up the outside of the aviary and look down from above. There all will lie before you like a map. You will get all the information you want, and the birds will be none the wiser.

The hen sat in the most exemplary manner the cock whistling gaily and feeding his mate attentively, and on the twelfth evening I saw that something had happened, as the hen was quietly raising herself and looking at something underneath her. I felt sure she would not be looking at her own breast; there was only one thing she could be examining—youngsters. Of course I could not look to make sure. The only thing was to watch and wait and be patient. Several times I saw the cock visit the nest and give the hen mealworms, and soon after she popped her head down, rising slightly in the nest and evidently doing something. What could it be but feeding?

CANARY QUERIES.

Not Breeding.

W. H. Payne.—If the cock is a splendid singer, as you say, and in good health and active, it is very curious that he did not make some show of chivvying the hen about when mated last season, unless this really took place and you have omitted to mention it. But if he did not do so, I should try to get some experienced breeder's opinion about his sex, although his general behaviour is of a masculine character. The hen was clearly a "squatter" last season, and I would advise you to mate her this year with a lusty vigorous cock whose sex is quite beyond doubt or was proved last season. If you do this, I should be obliged if you would let me hear the result at end of season. Do not, however, trust wholly to this hen, but get a healthy and vigorous 1909 hen and mate with the other cock, if its sex is not in doubt, otherwise get a fresh cock too, to mate with the fresh hen. Give a staple diet as advised to "Miss B. K. F.," and a teaspoonful of egg food sprinkled with a mixture of equal parts gold of pleasure and sesame seed every second day until eggs are laid. On the alternate days give a similar quantity of equal parts hemp and inga and two leaves of dandelion daily. When hens are sitting give the staple diet only. "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d. post free, from our manager, will suit you well. You should also get the parts of "Our Canaries," now out, which will answer all your difficulties in detail. Read especially the contribution of "Squatting Hens" in the latter work.

Losing Birds.

Plodder.—It is almost useless speculating as to cause of the birds' deaths, as nothing but a post-mortem could reveal it with certainty, and if you have any more die off in the same way you would be well-advised to get the body examined. Another point, you omitted all mention of your general treatment or how the birds are kept, so that it is the purest guesswork to hazard any suggestion concerning the deaths. Judging merely from the most prominent symptoms, I suspect the recent snap of cold stormy weather was at the root of the trouble by setting up the condition described as broncho-pneumonia, and I should suspect that the victims were at least over the second moult, and in all probability exposed to cold draughts or great fluctuations of heat and cold. The best treatment would have been to put them at once in a quite warm and equable temperature, given a staple diet of bread and milk with maw seed for a few days, and added 30 drops of brandy and five of sweet spirits of nitre to the drinking water daily until the critical symptoms had passed off, when you should have gone on to the treatment advised in the "Annual" for acute bronchitis until the birds were again able to be gradually returned to the usual treatment. The sample of seed you mention did not reach me; probably you overlooked it at the last moment.

A Variety.

Yorkie.—(1) I do not think closed rings being put on will cause hens to bite off the toes of the young. There may be an exceptional case of its doing so now and again, but if it were in the least sense a general cause I fear we should have a vast number of toeless and footless Rollers, as these birds when bred for singing competitions are very generally rung with closed rings. On the other hand, you will probably find quite as many cases of hens biting off the toes of the young to occur among birds that are never rung at all as among rung birds. When a vicious hen turns up and commits this outrage on her young, if they should happen to be rung, it is rather human nature to blame the rings without going further into the matter, and thus they are apt to get a bad reputation undeservedly. (2) For weakly, ailing and thriftless young Parrish's Syrup is often of great benefit. But for all normally healthy birds I consider it a very bad practice to continually dose them either with this or any other medicine. (3) Lime water may be made by slaking a bit of quicklime, say, as large as a pigeon's egg, in a quart of water. Stir well after ebullition ceases and allow to stand until next day. Then decant off the clear liquid, which is ready for use. Chemists supply this very cheaply. (4) If you are not satisfied with the results obtained from all cold pepper add two ounces of hot Natal to the pound of tasteless and thoroughly mix and blend the whole together. (5) No, I see no useful purposes in introducing Cinnamon blood first-hand to improve tail. You could get all you want from your Yorkshires by selecting close, compact, pipe-tailed birds, and if you want the Cinnamon colour there is plenty in the Yorkshires of to-day, and you can get it from Cinnamon-marked Yorkshires without going direct to the Cinnamon breed.

Two Hens with one Cock (A. D. Long).—A fully detailed reply on this matter was given to "W. Skegg" in our last issue, which you have doubtless already seen. If not, allow me to refer you to it, as it will fully meet your case.

Heavy Wheezing (Mrs. E. E. S.).—I am afraid this bird is much too far gone to be cured. The most you can expect is to make its remaining days as comfortable as you can by palliative treatment. See that it is quite free from draughts, but do not let it hang near or over burning lights in the evenings, nor where there are great fluctuations of temperature. Keep it in a fairly comfortable place, neither overheated nor yet cold. Otherwise treat it the same as advised to "Miss B. K. F." for a fortnight, then suspend treatment for a week, and afterwards repeat the same for another fortnight. After this you may repeat the same treatment occasionally as may seem necessary. Do not attempt to breed with the bird any more.

What Result (E. B.).—Although you omit to say so, I take it that the male parent of the foul buff cinnamon cock was a buff cinnamon. If this was not actually the fact, then he certainly had a good percentage of cinnamon blood in him, and if the foul buff cock were mated to a variegated Norwich hen, the result would be green and heavily variegated, with possibly an occasional cinnamon or cinnamon variegated. All the latter without exception would be hens, but both sexes would be found among the green or green variegated birds. The best mate for him would be a yellow self-cinnamon hen, as sound as possible in wings and tail, and also sound cinnamon colour on throat, thighs, and vent. You would still get some foul young, but also probably a few self-cinnamons. The number of selfs would depend upon amount of foul blood in the cocks, and also the extent of his own foulness, neither of which points you elucidate.

Accommodation and Wheezing (Beginner).—The indoor aviary is really only a moderately large cage, and as it stands will accommodate only one pair of birds. If you were to divide it into two with a partition midway between top and bottom to form a second floor, so that you would have two cages of equal size one above the other, you could keep one pair in each section. The wheezy hen is really of no use for breeding: it is folly to propagate from such stock. You may give her six drops of syrup of rhubarb, and a pinch of Epsom salts every second day for a week, then the medicine advised to "Miss B.K.F." for a fortnight, and if not well in that time repeat the three weeks' course again in the same order. Also see that causes are removed as mentioned in the reply referred to.

A Trio (Roller Novice).—(1) Yes, there is an objection to mating two clear yellow Rollers together. Rollers, as a whole, are none too richly blessed in abundance of plumage, and a mating of two yellows is too apt to cause serious deterioration in quantity and quality of feather. I would not advise you to do so if you can possibly avoid it, and if done it should only be with two large well-feathered birds of a chubby type. A clear buff and clear yellow would be far less objectionable. (2) If both hens seem equally forward and anxious to start building at once, by all means keep one in each end of the three-compartment breeder, and run the cock with each one for about one-half of each day—say, with one from mid-day one day to mid-day the next, and then with the other until mid-day the following day, and so on. See reply to "W. Skegg" last week. (3) No, there is no necessity to try to restrict the consumption of Canary seed. You give quite a large proportion of rape, and the birds doubtless consume quite as much as is good for them.

Various (A. W. H.).—(1) Go on with the treatment advised last week for the cock. You might also stick a cube of lump sugar between the wires, or tie a bit of string on them for him to amuse himself with, which will help to break him of this unpleasant habit. (2) The greatest value of the foods you name lies in their convenience—saving the trouble of preparing good, honest, pure, home-made food, which, after all, I give preference to. See reply to "W. H. Payne" for bringing birds on for breeding. (3) I do not know whether the foreign flavour I mentioned attached to the Canary seed would prove harmful to the birds, because I have no idea what was the cause or origin of the flavour. It might, perhaps, merely have been stored close to some strong smelling goods. As I said before, I should regard it with suspicion, especially as it is otherwise a poor sample, and should not care to feed valuable birds with it.

Increasing Length of Yorkshires (Spot, Cardiff).—Although the Yorkshire owes much of its length, if not quite all of it, to the influence of the Lancashire during the period of its evolution, and the cross is still sometimes resorted to, I do not think it is either necessary or advisable for amateurs to introduce it direct, and in the vast majority of instances not at all. It is equivalent to going a long roundabout way instead of taking a short direct road. In these days there is plenty of ready made material available in the pure Yorkshire in the long stock birds, many of which may be obtained well over the standard length. The best and safest plan for you will be to get a pure Yorkshire as much over the standard length as you can procure—seven inches long at least, and if a little more so much the better. This would give you far more satisfaction than introducing a pure Lancashire. Next to this a first cross yellow Yorks.-Lancashire, a slim bird favouring most the Yorkshire type, would suit your purpose best.

Canary with Asthma (Miss B. K. F.).—The treatment you are giving is not likely to be of much use; neither is Friar's Balsam in water of much use. Try the following, but first of all see that the bird is kept in a pure atmosphere, fairly comfortable, but not overheated, temperature, and quite free from draughts. As staple diet give a mixture of three parts Canary to one part summer rape. Every second day for the next fortnight give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with two drops of cod liver emulsion and four of sherry mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed. Twice a week on the alternating days give a pinch of a mixture of two parts each hemp, inga, millet and teazle, and one part each gold of pleasure and linseed. Give a leaf of dandelion daily. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom Salts for three days, and afterwards 20 drops of the following mixture, which any chemist will dispense for you, every second day for a fortnight. Mixture: Two drams each of glycerine and oxymel of squills, one dram each of chlorodyne and ipecacuanha wine, six grains of iodide of potassium. At end of fortnight give sponge cake—without the above additions—or a little egg food instead, once a week only, and reduce the mixed seed also to once a week.

Rusty Wires and Removing Young (no nom-de-plume).—(1) Well clean the wires with a wash of strong soda and water, or go over them with sand-paper and rub off as much rust as you can, and brush them with a stiff brush to remove all dust. The latter would be the best method. Then paint them with two quite thin coats of black lacquer—Brunswick black or Castle brand black lacquer are both very suitable for the job. Put it on quite thinly with a small camel-hair brush such as you find in a box of water-colour paints, in order to avoid it running and forming unsightly beads or tears. (2) The earliest age to separate young from parents is when they are quite able to feed themselves and crack Canary seed with tolerable ease. Do not strive after removing them at the earliest possible moment, so long as the parents feed them and do not ill-treat or pluck them.

Recovery from Blindness (A Breeder).—I have heard of one or two such case of spontaneous recovery from blindness, and also of recovery after certain treatment, but they are certainly exceptionally rare cases. My opinion is—and the case of your bird seems to add colour to it—that the bird, taking your bird as a case in point, was not really blind, but, as it were, on the point of becoming blind from some degeneration of the optic nerves due to the constant absence of light rays to stimulate them owing to the dense heavy crest overhanging the eyes. Then, when you cut off the crest, which was probably done in the nick of time, the organs gradually responded to the stimulus of light and resumed their normal functions, more or less, which may possibly in a few weeks assume their full powers. It would be worth while trying the effect of a lotion composed of five grains of sulphate of zinc in one ounce of rose water, dropping one drop each eye every second day for a fortnight. In a week or two hence gradually bring the bird out into a good strong diffused light for the rest of the year before the moult again causes crest feathers to grow and over hang eyes.

Result of Mating and Seed (Norwich).—It is quite possible for you to get some clear birds from the pair you describe, but the proportion will probably not be high—somewhere about one in four, most likely. The exact proportion, however, depends solely upon the way the birds have bred and the amount of dark blood in the parents. Besides the clears you will get ticked and lightly variegated—chiefly about head, neck, and back. (2) The Canary seed is small and rather thin, but is quite sweet and of fair average quality. The hemp is old and rancid, and not fit to feed valuable birds with. It would be safer to use no hemp at all if this is the best you can get.

Cock Gone Wrong (Fancier).—As the bird was in such high condition it is quite likely that the excitement of his first "scrap" with the hen caused some slight internal hemorrhage, from which, as it would be only very slight, the bird will gradually recover, and the listlessness will pass off as it recovers. This is assuming that the bird was not taken from a distinctly warmer room to the bird-room to be mated, or that it was not likely to have got a severe chill when, or immediately after, being placed with the hen. Keep him in a fairly warm temperature now, as equable as possible, free from all draughts, and give a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with maw seed every second day until better, and a little chickweed, groundsel, or dandelion daily. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of buckthorn for three days, and afterwards four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and dilute sulphuric acid every second day for a week.

Will Not Sit (E. Wolff).—Sorry, but you can do absolutely nothing now as the eggs will be of no use by the time this appears. The only course open to you when she refused to sit was to give the eggs to another hen just beginning to sit, or distributed them among two or three other hens just beginning to sit. It is not improbable that you omitted to keep a dummy nest-egg in the nest when you began to remove the eggs. I have often known the desire to sit go off a hen when this has not been done. You should have put a dummy egg in when you removed the first egg laid by the hen, and left it in until the evening of the third day, when the real eggs should have been returned and the dummy taken away, leaving the hen to sit from the time she laid the fourth egg.

The way of the Hen (N.K.J.).—The apparently unpleasant way of disposing of the excreta you are concerned about is quite normal, and the way in which Nature has designed it for the first few days of the young bird's life. You do not need to try to stop the practice. As the young grow bigger and strong enough to climb up the side of the nest and void "overboard," the hen will cease these necessary attentions. If she still seems inclined to sweat when this reply appears, give her a bath daily for a few days, in which you have dissolved a teaspoonful of common salt. Do not make the egg food too moist, nor satiate the hen with too large quantities at one time, and give a variety of green food, but no dandelion, in small quantities several times a day.

Not Mating (Sandpiper).—Neither of the birds was anything like being in condition when mated, and are no forwarder now, hence the unsatisfactory state of things you describe. Separate them for two or three weeks. See they are kept quite free from draughts, and treat as follows; Give a staple diet of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Every second day give each half a teaspoonful of egg food with a quarter teaspoonful of mixture of equal parts maw, sesame, and gold of pleasure seed, and on the alternate days give a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, millet, teazle, and linseed. Give two young leaves of dandelion to each daily. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence for three consecutive days, and afterwards four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid, every second day for a week. Do not put the birds together again until the cock is in fair song and feeds the hen through the wires in partition, and the hen also is more active and appears anxious to nest.

Wasting Seed (M.C.).—When this reply appears, commence the same course of treatment as before, except that you give leaf of dandelion daily, and instead of the rhubarb and salts mixture in the first week, give six drops each of dandelion juice and syrup of buckthorn, and as much sulphate of soda as will cover a sixpence, or, if in clear crystals, a piece the size of a small pea. In the second week give the same mixture as before every second day, and this you may continue for a fortnight, if necessary. You may also give half a teaspoonful of summer rape separately every second day, on the days when you give the banana. Stick a cube of hard table salt in the wires for her to peck at. Examine your seeds carefully to see if they are sweet and good, and that there is no musty taste or smell. Glauber salts is merely another name for sulphate of soda, so you will gather from the above how much to give a Canary.

Seed Samples (C. H. D., Bexhill).—Canary No. 1 is an excellent all-round sample and well worth the price. Canary No. 2 is very good quality, but smaller in size and fair value as price named. The rape seed also is good value and a very good all-round sample. The hemp contains a rather large proportion of badly ripened grain, but the bulk of it is quite sound and sweet, and of good quality. The price is just a trifle high considering the light grains, but the quality compared with the general run of hemp samples I have seen of late should make it worth the price. If it were graded and the light grains removed, it would be a very excellent sample. All the seeds are suitable for feeding the best class of stock.

Outdoor Shed (Many Years Reader).—Being built of only three-quarter inch single walls, and in an open position, it is highly probable that the shed would be subject to extreme fluctuations of temperature, and to guard against this you would be well advised to line it inside with thinner boards, say half inch, and fill in the intervening space with sawdust to more thoroughly prevent keen draughts through the walls. If this were done, assuming, of course, that the place is free from damp, your birds, which are accustomed to the condition you describe, will thrive all right in the shed all the year round. I suppose you have seen to the proper ventilation of it. Though none are marked on your sketch, you should have exits for foul air at each end in the highest corner of the angle just below the roof.

Erratic Laying (Cymru).—If you had given some details of your general treatment and the age of the birds, I should have been better able to suggest some cause for the erratic laying. If they are young hens, it is quite probable they will begin again soon, and produce normal clutches next time. To give full details of proper treatment would occupy far too much space here, so you cannot do better than get a copy of "Canary Breeding for Beginners," from our Manager, post free 7d., or get the published parts of "Our Canaries," and meantime treat the birds as advised to "W. H. Payne." Keep a flake of cuttlefish in each breeding cage for the hens to peck at, and you might also smash up a little old mortar and mix with the sand on cage floor. If the box-room is fairly bright, dry, and free from draughts, the birds would doubtless thrive better there than in the living room, and if the hens are not sitting on the eggs laid, you might move them there at once. If they are sitting, allow them to complete the incubation, and rear the young if any are hatched, and remove them to new quarters before hens go to nest again.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

Sudden Death of Budgerigar.

T. A. Kay.—It is always best in such cases to send the body for post-mortem examination, as without such a definite pronouncement is not possible. At this season of the year, sexual excitement runs very high, pairing fever abounds (for it amounts to that), and is frequently the cause of the bursting of a blood vessel and consequent sudden death. This is common to all species of birds. Over-fat birds fall a ready prey, also to apoplexy. A sudden scare, with a fly up against top of cage, often results in an injury to the skull and sudden death: only a P.M. could reveal the cause, or indicate whether it was some serious internal malady which had reached a sudden climax. You must remove the odd hen or procure another cock; probably conflict between the two hens was the cause of the eggs being thrown out. It will be better to replace your worn husk with a new one. Budgerigars, so long as they are not subjected to draught, do not need heat at any time during the year; in fact, are better without it. If you could give them a small spare room to fly about in, you should have good breeding results. The changeable temperature of the kitchen is bad for birds.

Amazon in Poor Plumage.

Stumpy.—Do not give bread and tea, or, in fact, any slops, table scraps, or animal food of any kind whatever. Put as much Epsom salts as will lie on a sixpence into its drinking water for one day, and afterwards well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food for about a month or more. If at any time droppings should become stiff and hard, give another dose of Epsom salts. Individuals vary, some are more teachable than others, but if you take pains with it, it should increase its vocabulary. Diet: about a tablespoonful of boiled maize daily. This soon turns sour, and must be prepared fresh daily. Boil till soft and drain away moisture, but the grain should be whole. Seed mixture, two parts each Canary and white millet, and one part each sunflower and maize. Well mix and keep a supply in the cage. Also supply ripe fruit, nuts, and plain biscuit, or stale crust of household bread; the latter can be moistened in Chemical Food and water, but not in tea, coffee, or milk. Grit (a pinch with the daily supply of seed mixture), and cuttlebone, must be regularly supplied.

Small Foreign Finches.

F. Rendell Mason.—In an outdoor aviary of this size, I should certainly advise a hinged shutter, so as to be able to close up the entire front during gales of easterly winds and severe weather generally. It would accommodate 12 birds merely as a collection, and three pairs for possible breeding results. Here are three series for possible breeding: (1) Silverbills, Grey Singing Finches, and Zebra Finches, (2) Zebra and Ribbon Finches, and Bronze Munnikins, (3) Green Singing Finches, Silverbills, and Zebra Finches. If you elect to keep a dozen birds, choose from the above, or include all, and add a pair of Golden-crested Waxbills. Dietary: Canary, white millet, millet sprays, green food, little ripe fruit, grit, cuttlebone, and water for drinking and bathing. When obtainable, blighty sprays from rose, fruit trees, or any non-poisonous trees or shrub (laburnum is poisonous); the Singing Finches and Bronze Munnikins would also appreciate an occasional mealworm or other insect. "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1s. 1d. post free from our Manager, would assist you in the treatment of above species.

A Feather Picker.

Mrs. F. L. P.—Once a bird becomes confirmed in this habit, cure is very difficult, and it soon becomes vice. Every fourth day put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water so long as the voidings are not watery loose, and on the intermediate days well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. Twice weekly spray (use a fine sprayer) the bird with quassia solution, choosing a sunny, genial day for the purpose, and keeping strictly out of draught till dry. Diet: Seed mixture: Two parts each Canary and white millet, and one part each oats, hemp, paddy rice and sunflower seeds—well mix and keep a supply in the cage. Also supply ripe fruit, nuts: nd plain biscuit. Add a pinch of grit and crushed cuttlebone to the daily supply of seed mixture. Keep a piece of clean cuttlebone banging in the cage. You must persevere with the treatment, which should result in ultimate improvement at any rate. Our Nutshell Booklet, "The Grey Parrot," 2½d. post free, from our Manager, should help you.

An Excited Grey Parrot.

Miss H.—Change the diet as follows: Seed mixture, two parts each Canary and white millet, and one part each hemp, maize, paddy rice, oats, and sunflower seeds, the whole to be well mixed, and a supply continually in the cage. Also supply ripe fruit, nuts, plain biscuit, cuttlebone, and water. If the bird will not bathe, it should be sprayed twice weekly, keeping carefully out of draught till dry. Every fourth day for a month give one teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia in the drinking water, and on the intermediate days half a teaspoonful of Parrish's Chemical Food. Dissolve 3 grains of bromide of potassium in a little syrup, and administer direct to the beak; give two such doses on successive days, and then give another dose whenever you notice an attack coming on. As regards fruit, individual tastes differ, but few Parrots will refuse ripe apple, particularly the core. You can continue to give boiled maize, and if it eats sufficient for a time only give Canary and white millet seed; then as soon as its condition becomes normal, decrease the quantity of boiled maize, and diet as above. Do not give any tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever. Report progress a fortnight hence.

An Ailing Barbary Dove.

Nemo.—I should give the hen three drops of tasteless castor oil direct to the beak, and repeat the dose a week hence. Well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food for a month at least. Keep a piece of rock salt in their cage. Wash these birds with quassia solution, wiping off the superfluous moisture afterwards with a cloth; choose a genial sunny day for the purpose, repeating the operation in a week's time.

Foreign Bird Querists will find in our handbook, "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1/1, and "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," 6d. post free; a mine of information of use and interest.

A fly round the room occasionally would do these birds a world of good. Continue to give the Dove mixture, and also supply a mixture of Canary and white millet. Keep the cage well covered with gritty sand, also supply grit and cuttlebone, the latter crushed to the size of millet seed. As soon as you can get it, give them a sod of fresh grass to pick over frequently—you can do so now, but it should be kept indoors for a day in a room, where frost cannot get at it before supplying to the birds. As soon as the hen is fit, they will probably go to nest at once.

An Ailing Parrot.

A. Reaney.—Try this bird with a little boiled maize, boil till soft, and drain away all water. Boiled maize soon turns sour, so it must be prepared fresh daily. Give five drops of tasteless castor oil direct to the mouth, repeating the dose after an interval of three days. For one day, dissolve three drops of laudanum in a tablespoonful of water, and let the bird have a few sips occasionally. Do not leave the water in the cage, but let it take a few sips at intervals; the water should be well coloured with chemical food. As a stimulant, a few sips of very weak brandy and water (chilled) may be given two or three times a day. You must tempt it to eat by offering it the items of its diet it most favoured when in a state of health. Continue to supply the usual seed diet, and mix with same some cuttlebone, crushed to size of millet; also scatter some of the crushed cuttlebone on cage tray. Offer a little plain biscuit, sopped with warm water and chemical food, pouring off all liquid before supplying to the bird. I fear there is something radically wrong with your bird; which your details do not disclose, and if there is no improvement in a couple of days, I advise you letting your local vet. see it. If the bird should die, send the body to our Mr. Yates for post-mortem examination.

A Sick Grey Parrot.

Anxious.—Continue to offer boiled maize, and the other foods, which should suffice. Do not give milk, but try it with a little Osborn biscuit sopped with warm water, and chemical food, pouring away all liquid before offering to the bird. Do you give grit? A pinch should be added to the daily supply of seed mixture, and another pinch scattered over sand in cage tray. Do not leave water in cage, but let it have a mouthful of prepared water three or four times a day. For a week dissolve (daily) five grains of bicarbonate of potash in two tablespoonfuls of water, this will suffice for a day's supply. As a stimulant a few sips of very weak brandy and water (chilled) may be given twice a day. On receipt of this reply give five drops of tasteless castor oil direct to the mouth, and if this does not cause the bowels to move freely, you must repeat the dose next day. Keep the bird warm and quiet, and tempt the bird's appetite with such items of its diet as it is specially fond of. Report progress a week hence.

Avadavats in Cages.

"Sphinx."—Avadavats when kept in a cage are apt to pluck each others heads bare, and then by continual picking (sometimes mistaken for preening) to keep them so. The remedy then is to cage up the bald specimen separately, and not return it to its mate till in good feather again. Also when kept in a low temperature, with little or no room for exercise they gradually become nude and die. Diet: Canary and white millet, green food, grit, cuttlebone and water for drinking and bathing. When procurable free from frost, flowering (seeding) grass is the best green food, also during the summer months, blighty sprays from rose or fruit trees or any non-poisonous herbage are greatly appreciated, and tend to keep the birds fit. Keep a millet spray hanging in the cage, of course changing it as soon as the birds have extracted all the seed. On two successive days put half-a-teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water, and repeat this as may be necessary to keep the bowels moving freely but not loose. Follow this by keeping the drinking water lightly coloured with Parrish's Chemical Food. As regards song, they can hardly be accounted songsters but they have a pretty little lay, consisting of two or three soft, sweet notes, frequently repeated. Your bird should sing when fit. Our Nutshell Booklet, "Avadavats," 2½d. post free, from our Manager, would help you.

Cardinal Pulling out its Claws (A. Clark).—I am quite helpless in the matter, absolutely nothing to go upon—such a case needs the bird to be examined, there is evidently something radically wrong with the bird's feet for it to deliberately peck out its claw. I suggest you letting a vet. see it; take it round to him, his fee will not be large. You might try bathing the feet in tepid water, to which about five drops of carbolic acid has been added; dry the feet on a cloth before returning the bird to its cage. It will be well also to keep the bowels moving freely by an occasional dose of Dinneford's Magnesia. You say nothing as to diet. In addition to seed, it should have ripe fruit, and one or two mealworms or other insects daily. If you have it examined, I should be interested in the vet.'s report, if you will kindly write me per Editor of "C.B."

No. of Birds for Outdoor Aviary (J. Knight).—(1) About one dozen, but you must not mix Finches with them in such a limited space. There is only really room for two breeding pairs, as there would be continually the advent of young birds from the nest. (2) In such an aviary as yours, it is not possible to put cages inside it for the young birds—you can bring them into the cage as soon as they are able to feed themselves, and keep them indoors, when they should soon become used to you and steady down. When I kept this species in quantity in a large outdoor aviary, directly I entered with the daily supply of seed they were all over me, some eating from the seed pan, held in my hand, others taking seed from my hand, others dispersed about my arms and shoulders, and engaged in chasing each other from the seed vessel The other course open to you is to take them at about a week old and hand rear them. You would find our booklet, "Budgerigars and Cockatoels," 7d. post free, from our manager, very helpful on this topic.

Parrot with Parasites (Maconechy).—You are treating the bird correctly. Enclose the pellet of areca nut powder in some fruit it is fond of; it will doubtless take it that way, and if you find half gets wasted, give two pellets instead of one. You might also try damping a piece of plain biscuit with warm water and dust the powder on that. I prefer the use of Dinneford's Magnesia to Epsom salts; it is altogether milder, is also a soothative. Send the next parasite to our Mr. Yates—it will travel safely in a bottle in a little methylated spirit.

Birds for Aviary (A. E. T.).—If the end or ends of your aviary face either N. or E., they should be hoarded in, and only the front left open. There are two courses open to you, either to use your aviary for larger Parrakeets, or Doves and Pigeons. I think you would find it better for this purpose perhaps to divide it into two, by either a solid or wire netting partition, through the middle, or, say, leave one division 6 feet and the other 10 feet. In the smaller flight you could keep a pair of either Blue Mountain or Red-collared Lorikeets, Owing to very great pressure on our space we are regretfully compelled to hold over a number of answers to British and Foreign queries until next week.

both species are gorgeous in colouration, and hardy, and should ultimately breed. In the 10 feet section you could keep Red-rump and Rosella Parrakeets, also Diamond Doves, Indian or Australian Green-winged Doves, Australian Crested Pigeons, and Bronze-wing Pigeons, all of which would winter in your aviary out of doors. All of these should ultimately breed, but not with the same freedom, perhaps, as Budgerigars, and they would take longer to settle down. If the above does not meet your need please repeat query.

Outdoor Aviary Failing. Why? (J. Rich).—I cannot give you answer without further details. From your details I take it the flight about 6ft. by 4ft. and the roosting place about 4ft. by 3ft. Is this correct? What is the aspect of the aviary? What birds did you keep that failed, and how did you treat and feed them? What time of the year were they put out, and how long did they live in the aviary? I am keeping your plan and query by me, and if you will give the above details, I will try and assist you—the aviary itself appears all right, possibly you kept the wrong kind of birds, or put them out at the wrong period of the year. As the reply must of necessity be delayed, if you enclose a stamped addressed envelope, I will send you a copy of same.

A Squalling Grey Parrot (Parrot Lover).—Glad to note the remedy has proved efficacious. You are quite right in stopping sops, and so long as it is eating freely of the maize, etc., sops should not be given. If you carefully follow the dietary given in the booklet, your bird should develop into a strong, healthy specimen. Boiled maize will not be permanently required; as it gets older, and you find it eating freely of seed mixture, fruit, nuts, and plain biscuits, gradually wean it from the boiled maize; but if you follow the directions given in the booklet you cannot go wrong.

Is It Large Enough? (Amateur).—Yes, but you ought not at any time to have more than 25, or at the most 30, of such birds in it; this quantity is really too many, but no harm will result therefrom during the breeding season, but I consider you should keep the breeding pairs down to the number stated. The cere of a hen Budgerigar is brown, when the bird is in breeding condition, but during the moult and off season it is bluish, but much less intense than that of the male. These birds certainly should be in breeding condition in the course of the next two or three weeks, and if your bird's cere should then continue blue the bird is a male.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

Two Items (Regular Reader).—The Chaffinch must have its "watery eye" bathed at least twice daily with warm water, to which a few drops of Condy's Fluid have been added just sufficient to make the water the colour of port wine. See that the perches of the cage are kept scrupulously clean; scrub them with the Condy solution. It is quite likely that the red mites are responsible for the loss of the neck and head feathers of the Goldfinches. The constant scratching due to the irritation they set up soon reduce a bird's plumage (particularly in the regions mentioned) to a pitiable condition. Still, seeing that you have cleared out the pests and the birds are healthy, there is no reason why they should not successfully moult, and the "baldness" would not affect the Canaries if due to the redmite. A hot kitchen is just the place to encourage the latter—they like warmth. The Goldies will need to be in full, loud song before being paired up, and their beaks should be clear (that is, with no dark streak at the tip).

A Hawfinch Show Cage (Hawfinch).—The size adopted by the N.B.B. and M.C. is 14ins. long, 12 high, and 6 deep. Front of 14 gauge wire, three-quarter inch mesh. Bottom (wood) rail 2in. high, and one crossbar 2in. above this rail. This club's pattern has the front bowed at the top (for about 1in.), and it is fitted with two turned perches and a trough at right-hand end for the seed.

A Bullfinch (J. Cronin).—The sample of seed is a good one, taken on the whole; though the Canary seed is Turkish (small), it is of good quality. In my opinion, however, it contains too much hemp for a caged Bullfinch; better leave this out altogether (give it occasionally), and substitute teazle. You should certainly read the "Nutshell" booklet on the Bullfinch, and its management. Get a chemist to mix one ounce of each of the following: glycerine, oxymel of squills and ipecacuhana wine. Stir a small teaspoonful into two tablespoonfuls of the bird's drinking water (fresh daily). You must keep the Bullie in a warm room and out of draughts; don't hang him outdoors.

Linnet and Canary Couple (W. W.).—The stock mixture I like (for the hopper) is: Canary 3 parts, teazle 2 parts, and summer rape 1 part, linseed half-part. In addition make up these two special mixtures: (1) hemp and niger in equal parts, (2) rape of pleasure, maw, dandelion white lettuce, and sesame in equal parts by measure, I mean. Give the pair a good teaspoonful of these on alternate days in addition to a little egg-food. Then they should soon come into the essential "high condition." Of course, give early dandelion, chickweed (not in a frosted condition).

Hand-rearing Owls (W. F. Wilbee).—You are quite correct in assuming that the birds must have flesh food. Blackbeetles, cockroaches, are very much relished, too. Young Sparrows (nestlings) and small mice are also esteemed delicacies. Give them some rabbit flesh frequently with the fur on (the latter to assist them to make "castings").

An Overgrown Beak (F. J. P.).—Yes; this should be cut down to normal size and shape at once with a pair of sharp scissors.

A Hybrid Wanted (G. W. B.) It is very unusual to mate the cock Bullfinch to the hen Goldfinch, and this is not the best method of pairing—i.e., the likeliest to lead to success. You can put a cock Canary to the hen Goldie, certainly; but, better still, either a cock Siskin or Redpoll.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

A Phenomenon (J. P. Rooney). — We are much obliged to you for your interesting letter.

A Suggestion (S. J. Lees).—We will think your suggestion over, and may be able to do something in the matter. Thanks for making it.

"Fanciers, Beware" (E. Hutchings). — Your "poetry" is too terrible for type; you evidently intend to make us suffer "Payne," as well as yourself. However, "have on approval" is excellent advice. You had your remedy, though, and could either have put the matter in the hands of the police (who, we think, would soon have obtained satisfaction for you), or have sued for the value of the birds in the County Court. You should not have allowed the matter to drop; "Mr. Payne's" story was obviously untrue.

Will Hen Hawfinches Breed in Captivity?

Sir,—Will some of your readers kindly state their experiences with the hen Hawfinch, and say whether they have known her to build and breed in captivity? I shall be much obliged to them. F. A. M.

A Useful Protection Against Wind and Rain.

Sir,—I should be pleased if any reader could oblige me with the name and address of the makers of "Duroline." It is a woven wire, covered with a varnish-like substance, semi-transparent, rain and wind proof, and is especially suitable for outdoor aviaries that require shelter. W. Nicholson.

[This material, which is excellent for the purpose indicated by Mr. Nicholson, is made by the Wire Wove Roofing Company, 108, Queen Victoria Street, London, E.C.—Editor.]

Is it Cruel to Keep Birds in Cages?

Sir,—Re the above question, I think the following incident justifies a reply in the negative. A friend of mine (my father-in-law, in fact), caught a hen Goldfinch last December, and kept same in a roomy cage until it became used to cage life. Thinking, however, he would experiment, about a month ago he liberated the bird (early in the morning), leaving the cage hanging on a wall in the garden. When leaving for home in the evening he went to replace the cage in a shed, and was more or less surprised to find the bird roosting as usual on perch. This has been going on now systematically for five weeks. I may mention that the cage has been placed out of sight for two or three consecutive nights, so the bird has had to roost out on several occasions. At present it is partaking of its feed, which is thrown down on the ground daily in the vicinity of the cage, and to all appearances it is decidedly happy. I will advise you when it bids its final adieu. I have several witnesses to this, and can fully vouch for the truthfulness of this extraordinary occurrence.

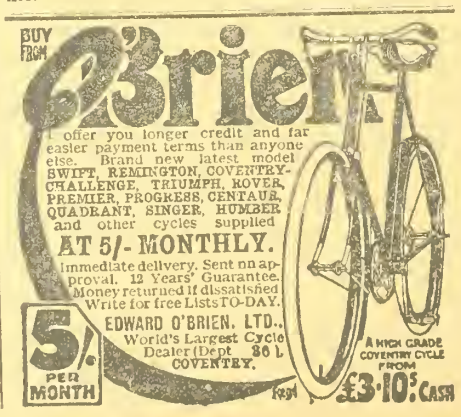
The British Bird Fancy in the South.

Sir,—What is wrong with the British bird fanciers and exhibitors down here in the South? That is what I am asking myself, after making a comparison between the entries during the past season at the various shows of the South, and those at the many splendid huge and enthusiastic exhibitions that have been held in the Midlands, the North of England and Scotland, where the fine entries received have been a credit to the caterers and fanciers alike. Take the Crystal Palace as an example, which was once looked upon as the Mecca of fanciers, and compare it with the Scottish National, the great annual event of Scotland. From within the whole postal radius of this gigantic London, only some sixty to seventy exhibitors supported the Palace Show, and as far as the immediately adjoining counties were concerned, the entries were equally ridiculous, and withal, very depressing to contemplate. In Edinburgh, nearly one hundred exhibitors from the City alone supported their annual event, and it seems to me Edinburgh could put up as good a show with her own city fanciers as could the Crystal Palace with the London fanciers and the whole of the South of England thrown in. Then again, look at the pitiful exhibition of British birds at the L.C.B.A. (Horticultural Hall) Show. Here was a show held by one of London's senior clubs, under the patronage of the National British Bird and Mule Club, in a hall that defies the rest of the kingdom as an ideal place. The Horticultural Hall is perfection itself as a venue for a bird show. I should judge that seven hundred British birds could be staged easily after all other sections are in their quarters. The classification, as classifications go nowadays, was generous—twenty classes, and that the birds would have every care goes without saying. Further, the British bird section was practically the annual show of the N.B.M. and M. Club, which has initiated and been the pioneer, and supporter of the most important reforms on the show bench: it has shown the way to other clubs, and has never tired of spending time and money in the interests of the British bird fancier and exhibitor; also it has taken up the cudgels of the British bird fancier and keeper at large, whether in regard to members or non-members of a club, and it is even now engaged in the preparation of a giant petition, which it is hoped will result in our having for the first time rational, instead of absurd and oppressive, bird laws—a matter this that affects the interests of thousands, besides bird-owners and other closely allied trades, workpeople, men, women and children, seed dealers, shopkeepers, etc. The above is a mere tittle of what has been done, and, so to speak, forgotten by the club; and the support that the club receives at its annual show, is truly a cutting reminder of the fact that one good turn deserves another. Now, how does the London fancier compare with others in respect of shows away from home? There were nearly sixty Scottish exhibitors alone who sent all the way to the Crystal Palace, including six Edinburgh City fanciers and about sixty British birds were sent down to ordinary open British bird classes. The N.B.B. and M. Club muster forty birds, with one hundred and twenty members at their own club show. And what of the Southerners at the Scottish National? If my memory serves me right, a mere matter of a dozen would not only cover London and radius, but the whole county of London. Why this small percentage of fanciers in a place like London is past my unravelling. We in the South have many advantages over our Northern friends. We live in a more temperate zone, and being geographically favoured, are visited yearly by birds that are rare in the North, or altogether missing; and it follows that it is easier to procure birds, notwithstanding the various Acts of Parliament. And yet the N.B.B. and M.C. Show could only get a response of two hundred birds at a place like the Horticultural Hall. The universal and natural love and admiration for our native songsters always make them a great source of attraction at all our shows to the public outside the Fancy; they stand by themselves, quite independent of the rows upon rows of Canaries; in fact, shows have been held upon more than one occasion (held by the N.B.B. and M. Club) without Canaries, and the entries, if my memory is right, in the British bird section broke the record. Also upon another occasion an amalgamation of British and foreign birds was indeed a pronounced success. The time is now ripe for British bird fanciers to insist on what we want—what we will have—and to generally force the pace. The classification, especially in the insectivorous bird sections, must be increased, and the new classes should be decided upon now by the various committees, and the additions notified in the Fancy Press instead of being kept back till the publication of the schedule a week before the show. Fanciers can then get what they want to fill the classes. If more species were separately catered for, and it were well known beforehand, there would be a greater success for the show. It would be a matter for regret should the Crystal Palace lose its old-time classic significance. But it must be remembered that there are a good many Richmonds in the field, and to keep its place the Palace committee should go ahead with the times, and not stand still (there has indeed been a decided trend of late years to cut down the classification in British Birds, especially in the softbill or insectivorous section). I know that some few of the desirable classes would show little or no profit, but as a whole the British section is a source of profit to all shows. Even this year at the Crystal Palace the five hundred odd entries at 2s. each in 27 classes shows a fair margin of profit, especially considering that in some of the classes only half prize-money was pair. Nuthatch.

[We have deleted a paragraph from the above letter which concerns the policy underlying the conduct of Cage Birds. "Nuthatch" must forgive us for reminding him that we consider ourselves best able to judge as to the matter in question.—Editor.]



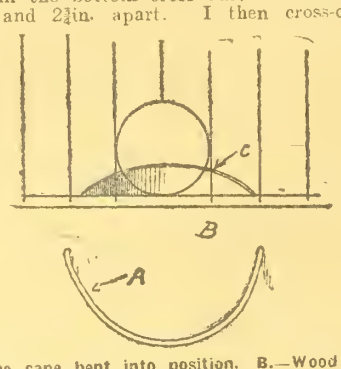
The Springburn and District Cage Bird Club.

Sir,—Re the above, I would suggest that we hold a meeting at an early date to make arrangements for the formation of this club. Of late I have been speaking to a number of fanciers, all of whom seemed anxious to call a meeting and appoint office-bearers. Now I beg to submit for the consideration of all concerned that we meet on Thursday, April 13th, at 8 p.m., at the Reid Hall, Queenshill Street, Springburn. Note.—Those interested and unable to be present might kindly drop a postcard to Mr. J. Waugh, 489, Springburn Road, which I know will be of great encouragement to those taking part in this important movement. J. McLeod.

The Making of Breeding Cages.

A Correction.

Sir,—There is a slight error in the measurements given in my article on "How to make a practical breeding cage." For the double breeder to take two 16in. fronts the wood for the back would be 33½in., and would fit inside the cage. The length of cage over all need not be more than 35in. As some readers may possibly have made the cages to the old measurements, they can still use them by procuring 17in. fronts (which any of the advertising cage-front makers will make), but if they have worked rather closely and find they have not sufficient room for the partition to slide easily, one wire upright in one of the fronts can easily be cut away, either with wire cutters or a sharp file. H. Norman.



A Canary's Sight Suddenly Restored.

Sir,—I have a Crested cock which was returned from the Crystal Palace Show marked "blind." It was a very heavily crested bird, and upon cutting off the crest I found I could put my hand on it without its moving, which, as I thought, proved it to be blind, as stated; in fact, I found the bird could with difficulty only get to its perch. What was my feeling a few days ago when I went into the bird-room to find this bird hopping from perch to perch nearly as nimble as any other bird in my room, which was a great surprise to me, and upon going near the cage it quickly skipped away from me. Upon catching it I find the bird to be perfect in both eyes. Can any other breeder give me any account for this? If so, I should be obliged. A Breeder.

An Inside Perch for Seed Hoppers.

Sir,—Instead of the cross bar generally used in cages for birds to feed from (which is rather troublesome to clean), I bore two holes in the bottom cross bar, 1in. from top edge, and 2¾in. apart. I then cross-cut a piece of cane about 4½in. long, and put into holes bored for same. This can be taken out at any time and cleaned with the greatest of ease. The springiness of the cane will be all the fixing that is required.

A.—The cane bent into position. B.—Wood cross-bar of cage. C.—Drinking vessel outside cage.

Towns Bombarded by Birds.

Remarkable onPhenomen in Ireland.

Sir,—During last week a remarkable phenomenon occurred in this country in connection with what was apparently a general migration of birds to Ireland, particularly in the south-eastern counties. From several of these counties come reports of unprecedented scenes having been witnessed on the night of March 30th between ten o'clock and midnight. On that night hundreds of birds of various kinds, including the Thrush, Blackbird, Curlew, and Starling, were found dead on the roads leading to Kilkenny and in the market place in the city, and a large number of dead and dying Thrushes, Starlings, etc., were also seen in the surrounding fields. The town of New Ross, Co. Wexford, was, on the same night, and about the same time also, the scene of a remarkable invasion of a swarm of Starlings. The night was foggy, and attracted evidently by the lights of the town, thousands of the birds swarmed down on the place. Many dashed against the windows of houses (which were broken by the impact) and were killed, numbers got into houses, hundreds were drowned in the River Barrow, and others were captured in the streets, which were simply littered with the winged visitants. An almost similar state of affairs prevailed in the County Carlow on the same night, and, strange to say, between the same hours. Some hundreds of birds flew into the town, presumably attracted by the light, numbers of them being killed and wounded by coming into contact with the telegraph wires, etc. The following morning the streets and the yards of the houses bore evidence of their wholesale destruction, Redwings, Starlings, and Thrushes being picked up by the score. Immense flocks of Curlews passed over the town during the night in a north-easterly direction, the flight continuing from about ten o'clock till well after midnight. The sky was almost obscured by the vast numbers of the birds, who were apparently panic-stricken. Later on, the Curlews were reinforced by Wild Duck, Woodquest, Thrushes, and Starlings, and in their wild flight hundreds dashed to their death against the church steeple, the house fronts, and telegraph wires. A leading Irish ornithologist, when questioned regarding the phenomenon by a representative of the "Irish Times," said that the birds had probably come from the Continent, their migration being due to the remarkable change in temperature. After their long flight they had become exhausted, and were unable to continue further inland. Attracted by the lights of towns like Carlow, Kilkenny, New Ross, and Athy (Co. Kildare), they dropped to earth, and became frightened by their surroundings. Their panic, however, strange to say, seemed to prevail by day as well as night, for I, continues Mr. Rooney, learn that on March 31 swarms of Starlings fluttered wildly over the Bagenalstown (Co. Carlow) district. In that district ploughmen who were working in the fields stated that Starlings continually lighted on the plough and on the horses as if fearful of impending danger. Sir John W. Moore, the eminent Irish astrologer and meteorologist, interviewed as to whether there was anything in the atmospheric conditions which might account for such a phenomenon as birds falling in large numbers over so wide an area, said that there was nothing so exceptional as to afford an explanation. At the same time, he added, the atmospheric conditions during the last week or so were interesting. Some barometrical depressions have been present, and these—contrary to the usual rule—have moved from east to west. Within the last few days the depressions have been slowly moving from the Continent over the South of Ireland. There was nothing in this, of course, to account for the very unusual phenomenon of birds falling in the numbers described. There has, however, been a change of temperature in the last couple of days, and this probably has hastened migration.

The Training and Treatment of Linnets.

Sir,—The Linnet is imitative, and may be taught the song either of the Lark or of the Robin. Indeed, to my way of thinking, the song of the Titlark and that of the Linnet are amazingly alike. If you desire to teach your Linnet the song of another bird, you have nothing to do but to hang the nestling and his tutor one above the other in a room where there is no other bird. It is quite useless attempting to teach an old bird, even a "brancher" or a three-months-old bird another's song, for when once the note of the parent bird is learnt, it is never forgotten. The Linnet is very fond of a bathe; let him have it three times a week—a saucer will do very well for a bath. Take out the "upper" bottom of his cage before you allow him to bathe. When he has done, you can slide it in again, and well cover it with sand; he will soon be dry and snug again. First of all, learn not to over-feed him. Though not a greedy bird, he is not able to resist the offer of delicacies, upon which he will speedily grow unhealthy and fat, and go off in a surfeit. Let the staple food be rape seed (summer, not winter seed) of the best quality, with teazle and plenty of Canary seed, of which he is very fond. Hemp seed may be given medicinally, but never at ordinary times; hemp seed is of a heating nature, and much indulged in will disease the bird's lungs.

Can Yellows be Bred by Double-Buffing?

Sir,—Allow me to sincerely thank Mr. Watson for his most courteous and instructive letter. Mr. Watson has (without stint) given your readers the results of his system of pairing to produce a greater percentage of yellows. With this one particular pair he refers to Mr. Watson may have been successful; but I am of the opinion, backed by practical experience, that were he to pursue such pairing throughout his stock, Mr. Watson would, at the end of a breeding season, get as the result of such pairing more buffs than yellows. Only last breeding season I matched a pair up in exactly the same way as those referred to by Mr. Watson, viz., buff cock bred from two buffs and a yellow variegated hen, bred from yellow and buff; result, three youngsters, all buffs. Unfortunately, I lost the hen, so the cock was idle for the remainder of the season. This season I have again matched him to a yellow bred in the usual way, so shall watch results with greater interest than last year. In common fairness to Mr. Watson, I must admit that once (and once only) have I been successful in breeding more yellows than buffs from such pairing. The pair used on this occasion were Norwich Greens. Mr. Watson proceeds to state, "I cannot say that a yellow bred from two yellows would, if paired to a buff, bred in the usual way, produce a larger percentage of buffs, as I have not tried it; but by the same rule I should certainly expect it to do so." Three seasons back I tried the experiment with two pairs. Pair No 1 was a ticked yellow cock bred from two yellows, matched to a clear buff hen bred from two buffs (the mother of the hen was bred from two yellows); result, ten youngsters, every one a yellow. Pair No. 2, ticked buff cock bred from yellow and buff matched to a clear yellow hen bred from two yellows; result, twelve youngsters, ten of which were yellows, the other two buffs. Mr. Watson goes on to say that he had never bred a yellow from two yellows worth the keeping. If Mr. Watson resides in or near London, and would care to call at my address, I should be delighted to make his acquaintance and gladly show him three birds bred from two yellows that are anything but weeds. Good birds can be bred from two yellows providing the proper material is made use of. I never double-yellow nor double-buff until I am satisfied in my own mind that I have the right stuff to do it with. It would be very interesting to know the experience of other breeders, and I am sure it will prove to be instructive to, also appreciated by, the novice breeders of Plainhead Norwich.

The Feeding of Insectivorous Birds.

Sir,—In reply to your correspondent, Mr. Harrison, my meaning was Nightingale singing every day at present time. It commenced about Christmas, 1909, and continued up to June following. Mr. Harrison wishes to know if I would tell my method of keeping up a supply of gentles. He should note that I offer gentles for sale. F. Fishburn.

Do Goldfinches Wilfully Waste Good Seed?

Sir,—I read in Cage Birds of March 25th the letter sent by "Disgusted," re Goldfinches wasting Canary seed, and I see that the letter is not answered as yet, so if you would kindly allow me a small space in your valuable bird journal, I should like to say how I feed my Goldfinch. First of all, I simply put a small parting in a wooden seed box. I put Canary seed in one compartment, and hemp seed in the other. Then I place the tit-bits in a finger drawer, such as inga, maw, teazle, and linseed, all of equal parts. This keeps the birds in the best of health. I may be doing wrong compared with what some fanciers do, but my Goldfinches have been feeding at the wires for three weeks now, like a cock Canary does when in breeding condition. So I think the above method, if adopted by "Disgusted," will prevent his Goldfinches from wasting seed. I cannot keep a Goldfinch alive under other conditions, although I have tried other ways.

A Novice.

The Exhibiting of Borrowed Birds in Ireland.

Sir,—I refrained from entering into this controversy re exhibiting borrowed birds in Ireland as long as it was not brought home to Belfast. Now that "Belfastman" says it is mainly confined to fanciers in Belfast, I, as one of the Belfast exhiibtors, emphatically deny ever in my life having exhibited a borrowed bird or a bird not eligible for competition at any show. I will send £5 to the Editor of Cage Birds, to be given to any charitable purpose he may think fit, if "Belfastman" can prove this statement to be incorrect in the least degree. He also accuses the "professionals" of charging novices an exorbitant price for birds. Now, I would like to know what "Belfastman" calls an exorbitant price for a bird, because one could not get (no matter how willing they were), even for a show bird, more than a few paltry shillings—not, in fact, as many shillings as fanciers in England can get pounds. "Belfastman" also informs "Catch-my-Pal" that he was a member of the Norwich Plainhead Canary Club of Ireland, and that the club is broken up owing to members buying and borrowing birds and exhibiting them as bred by themselves when competing for the cup presented by the Club for unflighted birds. In the first place, "Belfastman" never was a member of the club, and, secondly, he knows nothing about the Club or the working of it, as his own words prove. The Club has two cups—one for cocks and one for hens—given for most points throughout the season at shows getting the Club's patronage. Three nominated birds in each section count for cups. Now, up to the present the cups have been competed for by old and young birds alike, so long as they were the bona fide property of the exhibitor. The Club is in the position stated by me in last week's Cage Birds, and is not broken up, as "Belfastman" says. Jas. Stewart.

Sir,—Your correspondent, Mr. Stewart, should know by now that the N.P.C.C. is out of existence, although the few who have been the cause of it are still bolstering it up. He might answer the following queries: (1) In the year 1910 were there any officials elected, and if so, name them; (2) How many paid their subscriptions?; (3) Name any society that requested the patronage of the N.P.C.C.? "Belfastman" is a little mistaken; the cups are not for unflighted birds, but one each for cocks and hens, to be won by a member gaining most points with three nominated birds. Regarding the N.C. and Y.C.C., I would like to know if they have any restriction on members exhibiting at outside shows? If so, why did members keep silent at the meeting of March 4th who could have proved a member guilty of lending birds and another of exhibiting them at Sligo Show? Now, the "fat is in the fire." Regarding the Yorkshire section, I am informed it is alleged that the bird which won the cup was not bred by the exhibitor. Is it correct that the owner claims it was a clear yellow, while the owner of the runner-up says it was a ticked yellow? As the judge used no book and the society has no record of the colour of the bird, I would ask the owner to state through Cage Birds which of the two cages the cup special was attached to. It is also surprising to learn that the winner in previous years had no security to give for the cup, while the present winner (a Dublin man) had. If the corresponding secretary would oblige with his views, and so help to clear up this misunderstanding, they would be welcomed.

A Handy Door Fastener.

Sir,—I send you a sketch of my wire door, which I think is more serviceable than the ordinary one to slide up and down, as there is no danger of a bird getting its feet caught in same and hanging itself. "A" is the door;

"B" is the fastening—a piece of punch-bar (two holes), filed out to the shape shown in sketch, and soldered on to the last wire of the door. The door swings open on wire "E," which runs from top to bottom of the cage-front. R. P. Dent.

Keeping Birds in Small Cages.

Sir,—If ever a letter full of common sense was written, it was the one by "A. G." in your April 1st issue, whilst the one by "Scrutineer" is sadly lacking in that respect. Does he mean to say I am taking the side of those men who torture, plague and keep their birds in a dirty and filthy condition? But "Scrutineer" never made a bigger mistake in his life. Such men as "A Lover of Birds," "Scrutineer," and a few others come across a few bad cases and then make an attack on the Fancy generally, loudly crying for the hand of the law to stop us from keeping birds. When they come across these gross cases of cruelty, as stated by "Lover of Birds" and Mr. Tozer, why don't they fetch a policeman and have these birds confiscated; a conviction would then certainly follow, and the thing be soon stamped out? Would not that be better than writing about it and doing harm to 99 men out of every 100 who do keep their birds in a clean, healthy and perfectly happy condition, even by using small cages? Mr. S., I am going to use small cages this summer to keep and train my young birds in after they have moulted in the flight, and these will be 8in. square. Now, if my birds were going to be unhappy, or fret and die, should I use these small cages? No; it is because I have proved without a doubt that my birds are going to do better in them than in larger cages. A large cage means extra work, and owing to the great quantity of birds kept by a great many fanciers, this would prevent them from keeping them spick and span. Mr. "Scrutineer," a small, well-displayed stock will not keep a man and bring up his family. If it would, he would undoubtedly use larger cages, and not resort to the wicker cage, as he must do in these keen times of competition. It is perfectly cruel to keep birds of a certain species even when large cages are in use. Take, for instance, the wild-caught Lark. He will, as "A. G." says, beat himself more in a large cage than a small one. A wild bird of any species ought to be put in a small cage; if he doesn't take to it, give him his liberty. Then, again, there is the all-wire cage and aviary which look so nice when full of different kinds of birds, but which, if not placed in suitable places, are nothing but death-traps, as they afford the little inmates no protection from the draughts which are continually passing through the cage. These large and beautiful cages have killed thousands of birds, and I warn new beginners not to use them, but to go in for well-made box cages. "Scrutineer" can take it that Canning has no illusions, and only writes from experience, and is always willing to help the novice and give him a decent start, as I have done in hundreds of cases by men who have come in contact with me and my birds. I am sorry to say I have had an accident with my stock, but by the timely aid of Mr. Claude St. John, I am now upon my feet again. Some day I shall tell the story of this accident, as it will be a lesson to novices and "old hands" as well—it has lost me £20 worth of Roller Canaries, and I should have lost the lot but for this gentleman, who found the cause at first attempt. John Canning.

A Cure for Diarrhœa in Linnets.

Sir,—In answer to "Linnet" re diarrhœa in his Linnets, may I give my plan of treatment, having kept Linnets and many other kinds of British birds? My treatment is as follows: Prepared chalk is the best remedy I know of. Go to a good chemist and get twopennyworth of prepared chalk. Now mix half a teaspoonful with two tablespoonfuls of water. Take all water from the cage for two hours, then give the above mixture. Stir it well and let your Linnet take a good drink. Take it off for another two hours. Then no more that day, giving only plain water. On the next day, if the diarrhœa has not stopped, give the doses the same again, and the bird should be all right. But before giving the above, if your Linnet has diarrhœa very bad, clean his stomach out well first by giving as much sulphate of soda as will lie on a shilling in two or three tablespoonfuls of water. This treatment has not failed with me yet, and I have successfully treated four Linnets and two Bullfinch hens this year. Finally, give your Linnets plain canary and plenty of maw seed to eat—the latter is a really good preventative of diarrhœa. I trust this will help "Linnet."

Arthur H. C. Legg.

The Lancashires and Lizards of To-day.

Sir,—I read "L. B.'s" letter in your issue of March 18th. The Lancashire and Lizard fanciers all seem to be at "sixes and sevens." "L. B." accuses Mr. Fuller of "puffing" the Glossop fanciers up. Then he goes on to puff someone else up. The Lizard fanciers in Glossop that I know need no puff, nor do they want any. "L. B." says the way Mr. Fuller jumbles the birds up is a marvel. He is not in it with "L. B.," who jumbles birds, judges and fanciers up. In his opinion Mr. House judges these classes badly. Mr. J. Hampshire is reported as saying that the second prize in Clear Cap Golds was a poor one. Mr. Hampshire does not show poor ones, however, to try and win at Rochdale; he shows the best he can. There was one bird passed as having a hole in its cap, which Mr. Levi Butterworth said could have won in broken silver hens. Mr. Oliver's bird should have won in "L. B.'s" opinion. So that is three judges for three birds! "L. B" says that Mr. Ollerenshaw's bird was lucky to get a card, but he doesn't tell us what Mr. Ollerenshaw's opinion was. "L. B." also seems to have had the pleasure of seeing the Lizards at the Palace. He goes on to tell us that Mr. So-and-So should have been first and wasn't, and Mr. So-and-So second but wasn't. Had only "L. B." been judging, things would have been different; but he wasn't. So we will let this new variety of bunkum drop, "L. B." I think the best thing the Rochdale Society can do next time is to let the Lancashire and Lizard fanciers judge their own birds. Then we shall have some winners. There is neither sense nor reason in "L. B.'s" letter. "John Henry" asks for a lecture, and it seems to me there is something wanting. There is not the fancier-like spirit amongst the Lancashire and Lizard fanciers that there ought to be. Well, "John Henry," I will make a suggestion to the two Rochdale clubs, also the L. and L.F.A. and the L.C.A., and that is that they try to come to some terms and ask Mr. Barker Clegg to give a lecture on the Lancashire and Lizard. "John Henry" can take my word for it that Mr. Clegg has always been looked up to, if not as a leader, then as one of the best friends of the Lancashire and Lizard Fancy, and one who has never forgotten his Lancashire and Lizard friends of the old days. I think he is always willing to do the Fancy a good turn when in need. The lecture to be given in the Rochdale Ornithological Club Room, York Place, on some Sunday afternoon—there are plenty of fanciers who, through business, could not go unless it was on a Sunday. The four societies to ask all their members and friends interested in the Fancy to come to the lecture; each society to share the expense. Every fancier should have his chance to express his views, after Mr. Barker Clegg, if he so wishes. Can this not be arranged at an early date? I hope so for the sake of the young fanciers. I wish Mr. Swalwell a pleasant journey and every success on his holiday to America. Alec Donnelly.

Sir,—In Cage Birds issue of April 1st, Mr. Fuller says he does not know me, only having seen me or been in my company four times. You must have been a bad attender to the L. and L.F.A. meetings, also to the shows round your own district, Mr. F., or you would have seen me oftener. I am pleased to see that the fanciers of Rochdale are "good fellows." Mr. Fuller refers to my saying that Mr. House makes few mistakes. If it is so, then he (Mr. F.) does not know anything about Lancashires or Lizards. Well, it is so. As to some people grumbling, you will always find them at a show. There are always bad losers with the birds—you never hear those that win grumble over bad judging. You say you have been amongst the Lizards for thirty-three years. Well, there are some fanciers who could learn more in three months than others could learn in 43 years. I say again, some ten years ago the Lancashire fanciers were asking for Mr. House to judge the Lancashires, or the birds would be "all Crests." You say they never put Crests into the Rough Mongrels that were being shown then. Rip Van Winkle slept for thirty-three years; have you done the same? You say Mr. House has not tried his best to keep the Lancashires up to the standard every time he has judged. I say he was. Re Mr. Vickers' old Plainhead, it seems there is at least one bird to please you. But it is not the only one, or it would have won at the Good Intent Show! You seem to think it the only pure Lancashire living, but it could not win under a Lancashire judge, who has bred more winners than either you or the owner of the old Plainhead. You say you want advice neither from me nor Mr. Hardy, nor anyone else. You say you cannot breed a Lancashire from a Crest; well, you can breed a winner sooner from a Crest than you can from an overgrown Yorkshire. You have been breeding thirty-three years. Have you bred three winners in all that time in Lancashires? I said a good big Lancashire, with a "fat head," in my opinion, will always beat a flat-headed one equal in all other points. You say you have been going to a Lancashire fancier for 25 years and you have never seen a "fat-headed" one in his room yet. That will never alter my opinion. You say you like to give every man a chance, and you will give all judges a chance whom you have confidence in. I do not think it would trouble a judge much as to whether he had your confidence or not. You say you are sick of complaining over bad judging. Don't you think you have sickened others as well as yourself? No one except you seems to know what a Lancashire or a Lizard is, or how to judge them. Perhaps you are the "leader" that you said Mr. House was asking for? If fanciers follow you they will be led astray. You say your friends had a good laugh when I said a good heavy-feathered Lancashire would always beat an over-grown Yorkshire. The shoe must have been on the right foot for them. You say you don't want stock birds, or Yorkshires, or Crests. I think you would not refuse a good winner if it was bred from a Yorkshire or a Crest or anything else. If it showed Lancashire properties, I think you would breed from it and run the risk of spoiling your "pure strain," and show it to the best of your advantage, and if it was your luck to win with it you would not tell the novice it was a "mongrel." I would like to know how I and my few friends from Rochdale tried to break the old club up? I think you are still dreaming, Mr. Fuller. I notice you refer to Mr Dewsnap's "days gone by." It is not long since the Crystal Palace Show, and I think I saw the name of Dewsnap amongst the first prize winners.

Alex Donnelly.

To Save the Crystal Palace.

Now or Never.

Sir,—The public does not yet realise that the Crystal Palace is in most serious and imminent danger of total extinction.

The judge has ordered the receiver to sell it!

A housing and town planning scheme for its beautiful grounds—to be prepared at the public expense—is on the agenda of the London County Council (dated March 16th, 1911). Do the people realise that thus they are invited to pay a large sum to help to cover the grounds with houses and streets? Unless the King Edward National Memorial is supported, there is little doubt that the Palace will be closed to the public within six months from this date. And that means for ever. Shall the Palace be saved to the Nation and Empire? It is a case of now or never.

This Council, supported by very many persons most prominent in science, art, literature, the drama, the services, the church, and society in general, is most desirous of saving it to the people of the nation and empire for ever, as the King Edward National Memorial. They then desire it to be so run as to secure benefit to the nation and pleasure to the people. Its control is to be by fourteen persons publicly elected; whilst all profits are to be given to national and popular objects. (Here it may as well be said that no member of this Council has any financial interest whatever in the Palace, nor its sale or purchase.) The Palace can be saved within one week if each reader will send one guinea—either in one sum or in instalments, and to each subscriber of one guinea we give a life-free admission ticket to the Palace—which should be worth many guineas. And if for any reason we cannot acquire the Palace the money will be returned. Large gifts have been received, and others will be welcomed. Every subscription will be publicly acknowledged. Thousands are supporting the movement, but we need one million.

Special privileges are offered to firms and future exhibitors who subscribe large sums. Particulars are sent to inquirers. An anonymous donor has given one million (£1,000 worth) of Crystal Palace stamps, to sell at one farthing each. Every purchaser of 25s. worth (which may be purchased in instalments) will be given a life-free admission ticket. Thus, by selling the stamps, the life ticket will cost him nothing. All further particulars may be obtained from, and cheques, crossed "Lloyd's Bank, St. James's Branch," should be addressed to the Right Hon. the Earl of Kinnoull, D.L., The King Edward National Memorial Office, 26, Shaftesbury Avenue, Piccadilly Circus, London, W. The above privileges are offered to members of the nation, the colonies, dominions, and dependencies throughout the Empire. Will Colonial papers please copy?

Yours faithfully,

In the Courts.

A Cruel Scarecrow.

A farmer, Thomas Lamb, of Thingwall, was summoned at Neston (Cheshire) on March 31st for cruelty to a Rook. An inspector of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals said he found a live Rook tied to a stake to scare birds away. The bird had a broken wing, and the defendant afterwards destroyed it. The device, instead of scaring birds, would attract them.—The defendant pleaded that he acted innocently. He heard that such things were done 25 years ago. He found hundreds of Crows on the farm, and last year he lost two acres of turnips through the birds.—The Bench found that the defendant had acted unintentionally, but fined him 5s. and costs.

A Woolwich Dealer Fined.

William Owen, of Church Street, Woolwich, was charged on remand at Woolwich Police Court on March 27th with assaulting Sub-Divisional Inspector Williams, at Beresford Square, Woolwich, and further with causing unnecessary suffering to four Linnets, and having in his possession 48 Linnets, 2 Larks, 2 Chaffinches, 1 Jay, and 2 Thrushes, recently taken. Mr. F. H. Braund was for the defence.

Sub-Divisional Inspector Williams and a constable were recalled at Mr. Braund's request. Their evidence was to the effect that the prisoner was selling birds in Beresford Square, and that in displaying the birds to the public he was guilty of unnecessary cruelty. Mr. Braund put it to Inspector Williams that all the prisoner did was to display the feathers of the bird to the best advantage; but the Inspector declared that the prisoner submitted the birds to unnecessary suffering.

The defendant, on oath, stated that he had had a bird stall for over thirty years, and had never had a complaint before against his method of displaying the birds' feathers.—Mary Morris (Plumstead) stated that she saw the prisoner selling birds on the date of his arrest. She saw the inspector speak to the prisoner, and she saw the inspector take hold of the prisoner by the coat and pull him about, but she did not see the prisoner assault the inspector.—Similar evidence was given by William Knight (Plumstead) and John Skiggs (Woolwich).

Mr. Hutton dismissed the summons relating to the possession of the recently-taken birds; but with regard to the cruelty to the birds he ordered a fine of 10s. or seven days, and with regard to the assault a fine of 20s. or seven days.—"Woolwich Gazette."

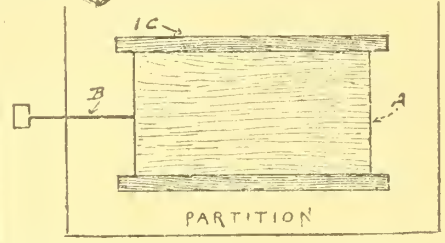
No. 496.
A Cage From a Tea-chest.
Sent by Mr. W. Paull, 70, Milford Street, Cardiff.



Three-ply wood is good stuff for cages, but is very difficult to secure at the joints. This is a good way. Procure a tea chest, one of the sort made from hard three-ply wood, and cut out the necessary pieces to size with a tenon saw. Plane the edges, and place the whole frame together in position. Then pass some thick twine a few times round the outside, pulling it tight so that it holds the frame in place. Now plane up some lengths of wood ¼in. or 1in. square, saw them across corners lengthwise, plane the saw marks out, and glue them in the corners, leaving them all night to set. Then drop the frame on to the back piece and glue the angle pieces all round, fitting them nicely up against the other similar pieces. Procure some fine ½in. wood screws, bore holes, and screw all corners to the angle pieces as shown in Fig. 2. Paint or varnish the cage to taste. Fig. 1 gives a view of such a cage, which wears well.—W. Paull.

No. 497.
Sliding Door for Breeding Cage.
Sent by Mr. C. P. Hamond, 8, Queen's Terrace, Otley, York.

Here is an idea which may be of use to your readers. The sketch shows the partition door of the partition of the breeding cages I use, together with the easily-made handle I use. "A" is the sliding door; "B" is a piece of cage wire, bent to shape, and fastened to the side of the door; and "C" shows the grooved wood (supports) along which the door slides. I trust the sketch will be clear to your readers. It will, I may add, be better if the wire handle is 2in. longer, so as to stick out 2in. from the front of the cage; then one can slide the door along without opening the proper cage door.—C. P. Hamond.

Wild Bird-Life.

An Early Migrant.

The past month has not been one of the kindest on record. The rain and snow and cold north-east wind have made country rambles anything but pleasant, but occasionally in between the storms we have had a little sunshine that has caused the Skylarks, Blackbirds and Thrushes to make the fields and woodlands ring with their music. From a Nature-lover's point of view we are now approaching the most interesting month of the year. The woods and hedgerows will soon be showing some trace of the lovely greenery of the coming summer; wild flowers will brighten the copses and fields; most of our resident birds will be busy nesting, and the influx of bird life from foreign lands will in a week or two be at its highest. It is difficult to say which of the migrants is really the first to appear, because let one watch over so closely, he may not detect or have the good fortune to see the first actual arrival—all he can do is to record the first he observes. The Ring Ouzel is possibly the earliest arrival to be noted in the West and North. By the middle of March he has usually returned to his upland home on some Yorkshire or Derbyshire dale. As he is restricted to the rough country of the North and West, he is an unknown bird to many dwellers in the Southern counties, who only occasionally get a glimpse of him, while he is on migration. White, of Selborne, noticed the Ring Ouzel in Hants; the earliest date for its arrival there being the last day of March; instances have been recorded of its breeding in the county, but as a rule Somerset, Devon and Cornwall are its only Southern haunts. The Ring Ouzel bears a close resemblance to the familiar Blackbird, although upon closer inspection its plumage is more or less mottled or laced, and it has also a white crescent, from which it derives its name. In its migration, Dixon says, "It arrives in flocks of varying sizes, but these soon disperse over the surrounding country in pairs, and nest-building commences almost directly afterwards. The nest is very similar to that of the Blackbird, and is made on precisely the same plan. First a deep nest of dry grass and a few dead leaves is formed, often strengthened by some twigs; this is then well lined with a thick coating of mud; and finally a second lining of dry grass is added, the whole forming a very strong compact structure. Although migrating in flocks, the Ring Ouzel is neither gregarious nor sociable during the breeding season, but several pairs may be found within a small area, each keeping exclusively to themselves.

The Busy Robin.

Our familiar Redbreast is a busy bird during the breeding season, and will generally rear a couple of broods, which require considerable attention, as they have particularly healthy appetites. A very early brood may sometimes be found in March, and a late one as late as July. The domestic cat, weasels, and stoats are his chief enemies, and during the season hundreds of young birds are destroyed by them.

Marsh Birds that Mimic.

The Reed and the Sedge Warbler are two of Nature's born mimics. The former will introduce into its song notes from the common birds, but good mimic as it is, it is far surpassed by the Sedge bird, which for variety excels almost any bird we have. Even the Nightingale is not spared by this little performer, and some of its notes are wonderfully clear and rich, and quite startling to the listener.

A Little-known Songster.

Few people have heard the Woodlark singing in the open, but those who have consider it to rank almost next to the Nightingale as a songster. Its song is not so loud, nor has it the variety of the Skylark, but it is far sweeter and much more mellow. Yarrell says that "its soothing notes never sound more sweetly than while the performer is mounting in the air by wide circles, or, having attained the summit of its lofty flight, is hanging almost stationary overhead."

THE R.S.P.C.A. FOILED.

A Commonsense Decision as to What Constitutes a Recently taken Bird.

Sir,—Lovers of cage birds and bird fanciers generally will be glad and also relieved to hear that the proceedings taken by the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals against Mr. Bennett have now been finally dismissed by the Divisional Court. If the Society's contentions had prevailed, no one could with safety have kept a Goldfinch, or any other pet bird coming within the statutory definition of a wild bird, in London. Nobody would venture to assert that this was the result intended by the legislature in passing the various Acts for the protection of wild birds, and it is regrettable that the Society should have employed its authority and funds in contending for such a construction of the law.

The case shows the great importance of carefully watching the proceedings taken by the Society, and of strenuously resisting any action which is against the obvious intention of the law as in Mr. Bennett's case.

We think that the bird trade generally owe a debt of gratitude to Mr. Bennett for having so strongly contested the case, which has involved him in considerable expense in excess of the costs which will be payable by the Society.

In conclusion, we would draw attention to the opinion expressed by Mr. Justice Bray in giving judgment, to the effect that he would be very slow to find that any bird that had been caught for 14 days was "recently taken." This expression of opinion appears to us to be a very valuable one for use in future cases.

Ody and Wilmot.

REPORT OF THE APPEAL CASE.

On the 30th March the Divisional Court gave a decision of great importance to bird dealers and fanciers in the proceedings taken by the R.S.P.C.A. against Mr. S. Bennett. The proceedings commenced in November last by a summons issued in the Lambeth Police Court against Mr. Bennett, under which he was charged with having in his possession in the County of London certain wild birds, viz., Goldfinches, recently taken, contrary to the provisions of the Wild Birds Protection Acts.

From the evidence given, it appeared that the birds were caught at Thetford about September 3rd, and were sent to Mr. Bennett in London, on October 20th, so that they had been caught nearly seven weeks when they came into his possession. The Society's representatives nevertheless maintained that the birds were "recently taken" within the meaning of the above-mentioned Acts, when Mr. Bennett received them, and they contended that a wild bird, if caught at any time within the previous six months, was "recently taken."

This contention went far beyond any construction which had hitherto been placed on the words of the Act, and it was obvious that if the Society succeeded in obtaining a decision confirming their view, it would become practically impossible to deal in any birds coming within the description of a "wild bird," as no buyer could possibly feel assured that a bird had been caught more than six months before. When it is considered that the list of wild birds affected by the Acts includes such common birds as Goldfinches, Linnets, Thrushes and Blackbirds, it will be seen that if the view of the Society were upheld, bird-keeping and bird-fancying and the trades depending thereon (such as cage-making and wire-working, bird seed and food dealing, etc.), would have to cease.

The Magistrate, however, decided against the Society, and refused to state a case for the opinion of the Divisional Court, holding that the birds were clearly not "recently taken." The Society therefore applied to the Divisional Court for a mandamus to compel the magistrate to state a case, and the application came on for hearing on March 30th, before a Court consisting of the Lord Chief Justice (Lord Alverstone), Mr. Justice Ridley, and Mr. Justice Bray. The Society were represented by Mr. Bevan (instructed by Mr. Pelhill), and Mr. Daldy appeared for Mr. Bennett (instructed by Messrs. Ody and Wilmot). The magistrate was not represented by counsel, but had filed an affidavit setting forth the grounds of his decision.

Strictly speaking, the only question before the Divisional Court was whether the magistrate was right in refusing to state a case for appeal, but as the magistrate's affidavit and the other evidence before the Court set forth all the facts which would have been given, if a case for appeal had been stated, the Court decided to deal with the matter, as if such a case were in fact stated, so as to give a final judgment on the magistrate's decision.

Counsel for Mr. Bennett supported the magistrate's decision, and contended that, inasmuch as the Act had originally fixed the 1st of March as the commencement of the period within which it should not be lawful to shoot, etc., a wild bird, and had also fixed the 15th of March as the date after which no one could lawfully have a wild bird in his possession, it was to be inferred that a period of fourteen days was in the mind of the legislature in subsequently using the words "recently taken," and that a bird which had been caught for more than fourteen days was therefore not "recently taken" within the meaning of the Act. Counsel for the Society urged, on the other hand, that the proper period was six months, and in any event longer than seven weeks.

In giving judgment, the Lord Chief Justice stated that he entirely agreed with the magistrate in thinking that he was not bound in law to find as a fact that the birds in this case were recently taken. It seemed to him quite impossible to endeavour to construe the Act as to this particular offence in any other than its natural meaning, and it was to be remembered that when the Act was passed it said that any who exposed for sale or had in his control wild birds recently taken was liable to a fine, and that Act stood with those six months picked out, it was quite clear that the legislature was not dealing with any lengthened period when it defined the offence. He agreed with Mr. Daldy that the words of the Act pointed to the word "recent" being used in its ordinary sense, that is to say, "not long taken," "which have only recently been in captivity," "not long killed," "which have only recently been killed," for the purpose of construing that part of the Act which prohibited the possession of recently killed birds after the close time. The period of six months was the whole of the close time originally fixed by the Act, and he had heard no argument to induce him to think that the Act, in using the word "recently" had in view the whole period of the close time as suggested by Mr. Bevan.

The learned Judge distinguished this case from that in Green v. Castang, as in the latter case the birds were in the man's possession on May 4th, and he was summoned for having them in his possession on May 24th, and the magistrate in that case thought as Castang had had the birds 21 days, he could not be convicted of having birds "recently taken"; and what was pointed out by the Divisional Court in that case was that having possession of birds for 21 days did not prove that the birds had not been in the man's possession "recently taken," and that the magistrate ought to consider if they were recently taken when he got them.

In the present case the summons was for having had in his possession on the 22nd October birds caught as early as the 2nd September. The magistrate thought they were not recently taken, and he so found as a matter of fact, and it was quite impossible for the Court to say, as a matter of law, that he ought to have come to another conclusion. The Lord Chief Justice thought therefore that this rule must be discharged.

Mr. Justice Ridley concurred, and Mr. Justice Bray also agreed, and remarked further that he should be very slow to find that any bird which had been taken for fourteen days was "recently" taken.

The rule was accordingly discharged with costs.

Some Diseases of Birds,

And How to Recognise and Treat Them.

G. YATES, M.R.C.V.S.

the appearance of the discharge there is usually a little feverishness, and the bird seems mopy and dull. Later the discharge loses its thin watery character and becomes thicker, tending to obstruct the breathing. During this time the bird continues to feed, and with suitable treatment the trouble will soon disappear.

Occasionally, however, the catarrh assumes a chronic form, and in this case the discharge is often confined to one side of the head only, and generally arises from disease limited to that one side. In the acute form there is little interference with health when the discharge becomes apparent, and it is seldom that death occurs from this cause; when it does it is generally due to the extension of the inflammation to the bronchial tubes and lungs. Exposure to draughts and moist conditions of the air are the principal causes.

Treatment should be early attempted by supplying warmth and by liberal feeding, with the addition of a little green-food, together with the administration of the following medicine:—Tincture Camphoræ Co., 3 drops; Sweet spirits of nitre, 3 drops; Glycerine, 5 drops. Give in the drinking water (four tablespoonfuls) fresh night and morning until the symptoms disappear. In cases that are of a chronic nature, attempt at treatment is useless, and it does not materially interfere with the health of the bird.

LARYNGITIS.

This is a localised trouble, an inflammation of the larynx, popularly known as the "voice box," though this is not the case in birds, for in them the vocal cords are situated in the syrinx which is a modification of the windpipe, situated at the point where the windpipe divides to form the two bronchi, and varying very much in its complexity. Birds subjected to draughts, cold air, etc., are the principal sufferers, particularly where the subject is delicate and predisposed.

The symptoms depend upon the degree of the affection. In mild attacks there will be scarcely any noticeable change, but at other times the symptoms become alarming, owing to the fact that the mucous membrane of the larynx becomes swollen so that the opening into the windpipe is considerably narrowed, interfering with the proper intake of air, and the bird is seen to breathe heavily, a mucous discharge appearing at the beak; and there is noticed a difficulty in swallowing. A bird so affected should be allowed plenty of air space, avoiding draughts, whilst four drops of glyco-Heroin, obtainable from any chemist, should be given in the drinking water (four tablespoonfuls) fresh twice daily until recovery occurs.

BRONCHITIS.

Bronchitis is a very common ailment in birds, and is more often encountered where birds are kept in insanitary surroundings, which, with overcrowding and bad ventilation, inhalation of dust (irritants), and adverse changes in the weather, all tend to produce this disease. Although in itself not often fatal, yet the disease has a tendency to extend and invade the smaller bronchial tubes and the lungs themselves, producing broncho-pneumonia which is in all cases fatal. But with early recognition and suitable treatment this should be avoided.

Singularly enough, there is not much interference with appetite, the bird feeding. But in the intervals between "meals" it assumes a listless attitude. In the larger species there will be observed a slight noise of a wheezy character; this is not always perceptible in the smaller birds, but in most there is gaping. Provided the disease does not extend, then recovery occurs fairly rapidly, and there is no recurrence.

The bird should be placed in a well ventilated room, at the same time ensuring warmth. No alteration in the diet is necessary, but a little green food, if procurable, will materially assist in recovery. Give a course of the following medicine:—Carbonate of Ammonia, 3 grains; Tinct. of Squills, 3 drops; Glycerine, 5 drops; twice daily in drinking water. This, of course, is for one dose. Enough can be dispensed by any chemist to last one for a

FOR YOUR

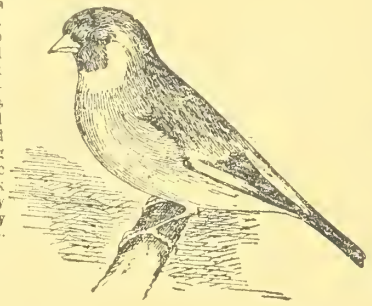
"CAGE-BIRD HYBRIDS"

Price 7/6 Carriage Paid.

Or 2/6 down and three payments of 2/- a month.



A STANDARD WORK.

This is a standard work. It deals with the most fascinating section of the cage bird cult. Its author has the highest reputation. It covers the ground completely. There are 128 pages, sixteen coloured plates, and many art illustrations. The combined brains of Mr. Charles Houlton and Mr. H. Norman have produced a work that will live for ever. A permanent record of human achievement in cage bird culture. What is a Hybrid? The most interesting form of cage bird in existence. Why is Cage Bird Hybrids the most delightful and fascinating book on the subject ever published? Mr. Houlton has given the result of a lifetime's experience. He has a practical pen, and his splendid exposition of the art and practice of hybrid breeding is a national work worthy of a casket of gold.

MARVELLOUSLY COMPREHENSIVE.

First of all are considered at great length the question of cages and aviaries for hybrids. All the various methods of housing are thoroughly and carefully described. So painstaking is the writer that even the perches are minutely detailed; nests and nesting material have a chapter to themselves. Mr. Houlton's special cage for hybrid breeding is clearly described and illustrated. All the foods, natural and artificial are enumerated. Egg and other soft foods and their feeding values dealt with. The selection of the stock is debated at length. The hens which need light and dark exhibition mules described. The proper breediug procedure for Dark Goldfinch Mules gone into. Egg-binding and its treatment. The food supply. Care of the youug hybrids. All these topics are treated with that experience and skill only an expert of Mr. Houlton's standing could bring to such a task.

Chapter VI. is a particularly interesting one. It deals with the production of the Light Goldfinch Canary Hybrid. Have you ever engaged in that alluring game—trying to produce such a rara avis? Mr. Houlton's remarks will entrance you and give you points that never before struck you. How to breed Sib. hens. The importance of Cinnamon blood. Results of in-breeding. All the various hybrids are dealt with in detail comprehensively and absorbingly. Chapter XXVII. is also a delightful one, and traverses the question of the hybrids that are awaiting production. The standard points of exhibition hybrids are set out at length. Right throughout this magnificent book on almost every page appear tricky little sketches happily illustrating the text. Mr. Norman is in his element. Every problem of feeding, moulting, management covered comprehenaively. How to Wash Hybrids—Illustrated.

In fact one glance at this superb present to bird-keepers is sufficient to make a Purchaser—every bird-keeper ought to secure a copy of

THE "ECLIPSE" SEED CRUSHING MILL.

Reg. No. 579671.

Acknowleged by the leading experts to be the Finest Mill everintroduced to the Fancy. The Mill advertised in 1910 is a mere toy in comparison with the "Eclipse." Read particulars—

The "Eclipse" Mill has the following advantages over other Mills. It can be entirely turned inside out, taken to pieces, thoroughly cleaned and overhauled and put back into action ready forgrinding either coarse,medium or fine grades. By using this Mill you do not harbour waste seed, which, in a few hours would turn sour, thereby being injurious to birds.

Another advantage in this Mill is that the bottom part of the mill being closed it acts as a receptacle for the fresh ground seed. This Mill is made of Metal throughout, and the above illustration is an actual photograph of same.

Price 1/6 each. Trade supplied.

HIGH CLASS NORWICH AND YORKSHIRE CANARIES.

John C. Barnes, Breeder & Exhibitor, 113, Northfield Road, Walkley, Sheffield.

THE SECRET

of successful spending lies in what you buy, rather than in the amount you spend; low price does not always mean cheapness; sometimes otherwise. It is impossible to obtain something for nothing; everything worth having has its value; therefore if by paying a little more you can obtain a much higher quality bird, to do you greater service, it stands to reason it is the best policy to do so. My Norwich have stood the test, a strain which has no equal; some grand size yellow cocks at 25/- and 30/- each, bouncers; several grand ones, trifle smaller, but same blood, 12/6, 15/- and 20/- each; grand buff cocks 10/- to 25/-; yellow hens 10/- to 25/-; buff hens 7/6 to 21/-; topping pairs, specially matched, 20/- to 45/- per pair; approval: Judge Silk, Whitstable.

VARIOUS CANARIES.

HAVE YOU BEEN DISAPPOINTED

by sending for Birds advertised, or enquiring about same, and then found the said Birds were not to be had? There is a lot of that kind of thing going on now. I do not advertise one thing to endeavour to palm off something else. I possess what and all I advertise, and

THAT IS WHERE I COME IN,

but I neither sell nor pretend to sell, the best birds or best colours at the lowest prices; but I do

GIVE THE BEST VALUE

obtainable, whatever price is paid. Below please note a few prices. For all others, see detailed illustrated Price List.

To Demonstrate

the above statements, I just give a few recent examples:—"11, Cork-st., Cork, April 3, 1911.—In my last letter I thanked you for the pair of Yorkshires, and now again I have to thank you for the beautiful pair of Norwich you have just sent me. They arrived in the pink of condition, and, though small, these two transactions prove at once your upright integrity.—T. Hurley to W. Rudd." "5, Railway Parade, George-st., Pontypool, April 7, 1911.—I received the pair of birds quite safe. They are marvels at the price. Thank you for the way my order was carried out. I shall recommend you to all bird fanciers that I come in contact with.—G. Jenkins to W. Rudd." "Kilmachane, Inistioge, Ireland, April 1, 1911.—I am pleased to acknowledge receipt of the hen Canary in perfect condition. I thank you for the courtesy and quick despatch which attended my order.—W. Walsh to W. Rudd." "Kinross," Thicker Crescent, Sutton, Surrey, April 3, 1911.—I had one of your beginner's outfits last year, and they turned out such grand value that I want you to send me one pair of 10/6 Norwich.—A. Mills to W. Rudd." "41, Kirkwood-rd., Nunhead, London, April 5, 1911.—I received bird safe, and in fine condition. I am very pleased to say it has proved to be a very fine one, which proves also what I always maintained, that a better bird can be had from you than from elsewhere. A. J. Simmons to W. Rudd." "6, Maple Bank, Formans-rd., Sparkill, April, 1911.—Birds arrived safe. I am more than satisfied with them. I think they are worth double the money paid for them. I did not expect to see such fine birds. The Crested cock is a picture. Everyone who has seen them marvel at the quality for the price paid and remark about the promptness you deal with your orders.—J. Brown to W. Rudd."

By Claude St. John.—This article represents the author at his best. The subject matter leads the would-be aspirant step by step from the bed-rock of his hobby to the very zenith of success. No bird breeder can afford to miss this highly instructive contribution, written as it is by such a popular and true-hearted fancier as Mr. Claude St. John. Read it before embarking on the business of the 1911 breeding season, and it will both help you to cut down your expenses to the minimum (by avoiding waste) and to breed young birds with greater ease and certainty.

BRITISH BIRD-KEEPING FOR THE WORKING MAN.

By W. J. Pitcher.—The experiences of a Yorkshire working man. The author shows in a most interesting way that it is not always the one with the big aviaries that derives the most pleasure, but often the working-man, whose only hobby after a day's work is his birds. He advises the various kinds of birds that lend themselves to the requirements of the working-man hobbyist, and how they should be fed and cared for.

HOW I PRODUCED MY WINNING HYBRIDS.

By J. Ovenstone.—A very interesting and valuable article. Gives the author's own experiences extending over a period of about ten years, together with an account of his system of feeding, management, etc.

A feature which conveys information that is of vital importance to the would-be successful keeper of birds—information of a kind but seldom available through the usual channels—telling the properties, etc., of most bird medicines, and how the ailments common to birds may be cured by them.

A CHEAP METHOD OF CANARY BREEDING.

By T. F. Morgan.—Emphasises the point that even "cheap" Canaries can be, and are, made to pay. The article explains in detail how a cheap breeding-cage can be made and fitted out, how the Canaries should be fed and managed, and closes with a few "Don'ts" that are very timely hints.

Some Diseases of Birds

And How to Recognise and Treat Them.

G. YATES, M.R.C.V.S.

the appearance of the discharge there is usually a little feverishness, and the bird seems mopy and dull. Later the discharge loses its thin watery character and becomes thicker, tending to obstruct the breathing. During this time the bird continues to feed, and with suitable treatment the trouble will soon disappear.

Occasionally, however, the catarrh assumes a chronic form, and in this case the discharge is often confined to one side of the head only, and generally arises from disease limited to that one side. In the acute form there is little interference with health when the discharge becomes apparent, and it is seldom that death occurs from this cause; when it does it is generally due to the extension of the inflammation to the bronchial tubes and lungs. Exposure to draughts and moist conditions of the air are the principal causes.

Treatment should be early attempted by supplying warmth and by liberal feeding, with the addition of a little green-food, together with the administration of the following medicine:—Tincture Camphoræ Co., 3 drops; Sweet spirits of nitre, 3 drops; Glycerine, 5 drops. Give in the drinking water (four tablespoonfuls) fresh night and morning until the symptoms disappear. In cases that are of a chronic nature, attempt at treatment is useless and it does not materially interfere with the health of the bird.

This is a localised trouble—an inflammation of the larynx, popularly known as the "voice box," though this is not the case in birds, for in them the vocal cords are situated in the syrinx which is a modification of the windpipe, situated at the point where the windpipe divides to form the two bronchi, and varying very much in its complexity. Birds subjected to draughts, cold air, etc., are the principal sufferers, particularly where the subject is delicate and predisposed.

The symptoms depend upon the degree of the affection. In mild attacks there will be scarcely any noticeable change, but at other times the symptoms become alarming, owing to the fact that the mucous membrane of the larynx becomes swollen so that the opening into the windpipe is considerably narrowed, interfering with the proper intake of air, and the bird is seen to breathe heavily, a mucous discharge appearing at the beak, and there is noticed a difficulty in swallowing. A bird so affected should be allowed plenty of air space, avoiding draughts, whilst four drops of glyco-Heroin, obtainable from any chemist, should be given in the drinking water (four tablespoonfuls) fresh twice daily until recovery occurs.

BRONCHITIS

Bronchitis is a very common ailment in birds, and is more often encountered where birds are kept in insanitary surroundings, which, with overcrowding and bad ventilation, inhalation of dust (irritants), and adverse changes in the weather, all tend to produce this disease. Although in itself not often fatal, yet the disease has a tendency to extend and invade the smaller bronchial tubes and the lungs themselves, producing broncho pneumonia which is in all cases fatal. But with early recognition and suitable treatment this should be avoided.

Singularly enough, there is not much interference with appetite, the bird feeding. But in the intervals between "meals" it assumes a listless attitude. In the larger species there will be observed a slight noise of a wheezy character, this is not always perceptible in the smaller birds, but in most there is gaping. Provided the disease does not extend, then recovery occurs fairly rapidly, and there is no recurrence.

The bird should be placed in a well ventilated room, at the same time ensuring warmth. No alteration in the diet is necessary, but a little green food, if procurable, will materially assist in recovery. Give a course of the following medicine:—Carbonate of Ammonia, 3 grains; Tinct of Squills, 3 drops; Glycerine, 5 drops; twice daily in drinking water. This, of course, is for one dose. Enough can be dispensed by any chemist to last one for a

LEEDS C.B.S.

Davis, chairman; Mr. H. George, vice-chairman; Messrs. C. Birks and E. Leadbeater elected auditors; Mr. J. Edwards, treasurer; Nallam and Lovatt, Secs., 5, Francis Street. LLANELLY AND DIS. C.B.S.

I have reason for once, as the hon. secretary, for being satisfied in my efforts to get a gathering of the clans. The meeting held April 8th, headquarters, was called for the selection of judges for our next show. A washing exhibition was kindly given by Mr. D. Jenkins (Swansea). We were quite surprised at the attendance. We had given an invitation to the members of the Felinfoel C.B.S. I beg to thank them for turning up, and also the non-members present; the room was full at the advertised time. The selection of judges was left over until next meeting. Our worthy chairman was voted to the chair, and after a few well-chosen remarks called upon Mr. Jenkins, who wanted no introduction. He first put the waters together, and same were tested by the members. He showed his mode of handling, and finished up with the washing of two birds. Mr. W. J. Harry was called on to try his hand under Mr. Jenkins' eye. The next gentleman called on was our worthy chairman, Mr. D. R. Jones, who did the same. It was now seen that the first birds were drying up; they were put on the table for the members to see, and all remarks and questions put to Mr. Jenkins were answered. By this time Mr. Jenkins had to catch his train. Mr. D. R. Jones proposed a hearty vote of thanks to him, which was seconded by Mr. S. Lewis. Mr. Jenkins returned thanks. I wish to thank the secretary of the Bromsgrove Society, who at present is in Llanelly, for coming.—D. John.

FALKIRK GOOD INTENT C.B.S.

Meeting held Oddfellows' Hall, March 25th, Mr. J. Muir presiding. Judges elected for annual show. It is with much regret we have to say good-bye to two of our members, namely, Mr. D. McFarlane (Grangemouth) and Mr. F. Jarvie (Falkirk), who are going to make their homes in America. The association wish them every success and prosperity. As Mr. McFarlane is taking six pairs of birds with him, we hope he will have a good season.—W. Clubb, Sec.

CINNAMON-MARKED Y.C.C.

Annual general meeting will be held on April 22nd, at 6 p.m., Market Tavern, Bradford (not April 15th, as stated last week, owing to Easter holidays). The business will require careful consideration for the benefit of the club and the Fancy at large. Rule 5 reads: Members who cannot attend, having any business to bring before the general meeting, may do so by writing the secretaries three days before the meeting. We hope full advantage will be taken of this rule, so that any controversial questions can be thoroughly thrashed out. In some quarters it is suggested we give our patronage to more shows outside Yorkshire. Then there is the burning question: Shall we "star" competing birds? There is also the questions of amateur and novice competitions, breeders' competitions, etc. It is to be hoped other questions will be suggested as soon as possible, to enable members to form an opinion. Other business will be election of officers and presentation of balance-sheet. A number of subscriptions are still outstanding, and it is hoped same will be forwarded at once. Intending members will be supplied with full information on application to Grayshon and Allen, Secs., Wormald-street, Heckmondwike.

In the Courts.

The R.S.P.C.A. and Braced Birds.

Joseph Lewis, of Burscough, was summoned for cruelty to three Linnets at the Ormskirk Sessions, held April 7th.

Mr. R. W. Brighouse said he had talked over the matter with Mr. Glover. All the R.S.P.C.A. wanted was to stop the use of braced birds for the purpose of decoying other birds. Mr. Glover was prepared to give an undertaking in the matter, and he (Mr. Brighouse) was prepared to accept it on payment of costs and with the consent of the Bench.

Mr. R. R. Glover said the undertaking was that his client in future would never use a braced bird as a decoy for bird catching. The defendant, if he committed any offence, did it innocently and did not admit he had caused cruelty to any bird. He had told the defendant that the practice did not suggest itself to the average mind whether of sportsmen or anyone else, and he had given the undertaking on his advice.—The case was withdrawn on payment of costs £1 6s. including advocate's fee.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red etc.

Owing to altered family arrangements, I regret to say I have left Dover, and as a consequence I have sent in my resignation as hon. secretary of the Kent County Cage Bird Association, writes Mr. Geo. Mr. J. Walsh (Blackburn) has, we hear, again been elected to judge the young bird show on July 1st and the old bird show on Dec. 2nd in connection with the Clitheroe C.B.S.

Owing to a dramatic entertainment in the Public Hall, writes Mr. W. Melvin, Assistant Secretary of the Stonehouse C.B., etc., Soc., our meeting notified for 8th April is postponed until April 15th, at 7 p.m.

Cheques have been sent to all prize winners at our late show, writes Mr. T. Lloyd Edwards, sec. of the Haverfordwest Show. Will anyone overlooked kindly communicate with me? The specials have also been despatched.

Will all members of the Birkenhead Canary Fanciers' Association who have changed their residences since the old show kindly send me word, as notices of changes are needed very shortly, writes Mr. A. E. Lloyd, the Sec.

The Stamford and Dist. F.A. have fixed on Nov. 23 for their annual open show, and have engaged Mr. J. Robson to judge, writes Mr. A. Harrison, the secretary. We hope to receive the support of the Fancy as on former occasions.

The next meeting of the Great Horton O.S. will be held on April 22nd, at 8 p.m. prompt, when all members are specially requested to attend as it is the last meeting to be held before sending in the list of members' names to the Union.—J. Holroyd, Sec.

Burnley Show, Oct. 6 and 7, writes Mr. R. Towler, the secretary, is being held under the Cage Bird Union rules, and we have elected Mr. J. C. Barnes to judge the Norwich (which are under the patronage of the Norwich Plainhead Club), and Mr. Roe the remainder.

The Cramlington C.B.S. have secured the services of Messrs A. Brown (Gateshead) and H. Seely (Choppington) as judges for their show on November 25th, writes Mr. J. R. Chestney, Hon. Sec. Also Mr. Brown has been engaged to judge the first Feather Show on June 24th.

We have received a copy of the balance-sheet of the 12th annual exhibition held by the Whitehaven C.B. and H. Society. We are pleased to see that there is a balance on the right side of 4s. 7d. The sec. is Mr. W. T. Douglas, 17, King Street, Whitehaven.

At our next meeting we are having a lecture by Mr. J. Morris, of Blaencelydach, Rhondda, and the subject will be "My experience and treatment of the Yorkshire Canary," writes Mr. A. H. C. Legg, secretary of the Mid-Rhondda C.B.S. I trust every member will be present, and I extend a hearty invitation to fanciers in the district to come along to hear Mr. Morris at the Parry's Temperance Bar, Tonypandy, on April 20th, at 7 p.m.

Mr. R. Kremner (104, Tib Street, Manchester) has just placed on the market a new seed-crushing mill—one which, we are sure, will be welcomed by users of such appliances. Several advantages are claimed for it. The chief is that the grinding barrel can be taken out and cleaned each time, so that the seed does not get fouled by stale bits left on the barrel. Another is that the mill can be manipulated for crushing either fine, medium, or coarse grain. After the seed is ground, on the top part of the mill being removed, the fresh-ground seed will be found in a separate receptacle underneath. This seed-mill is neat, strong, and efficient, and as it is being retailed at 1s. 6d., there should be a good sale for it.

The subscription for members of the New Cross and District C.B.S., writes Messrs. Barton and Hearn, the secretaries, 8, Warwick Street, Deptford, London, S.E., is four shillings per annum, or quarterly in advance. Fanciers are cordially invited to join our recently-formed society.

We have secured the services of Messrs. G. Hislop and W. Bishop, of Stirling, to judge at our annual show on November 25th, writes Mr. Wm. Nisbet, secretary of the Musselburgh O.S. Also the smoking concert will be held on April 15th at 7 p.m., in Gray Horse Tavern. All smokers and singers are cordially invited.

I have been a reader of —— for a number of years, and it is only since just before Christmas that I have taken CAGE BIRDS in. A friend then showed me a copy, and I found CAGE BIRDS was a larger and better paper, so I have ordered it ever since.—Arthur Turn (Willenhall).

It may interest readers to know that I received a letter from one of the large societies of Canary breeders in New York last week asking for the L. and P.O.S. rule book, writes Mr. Chas. W. Law, the hon. secretary, through seeing my name and address in CAGE BIRDS, thus showing the far-distant places CAGE BIRDS reaches. I may say the L. and P.O.S. are always willing to give their advice to anyone who may care to write to them.

HOLIDAY NOTICE.

During the Easter Holidays the offices of "Cage Birds" will be closed from Friday to Monday next, inclusive.

Will Advertisers, and Correspondents generally, kindly note that all matter intended for next week's issue should be posted early, to reach us on Tuesday, April 18th, at latest.

With reference to the translation published this week entitled "The Fashionable Roller Canary," the Secretary of the Leeds Roller C.C., Mr. Davis, writes that the club intends to deal further with this subject at the meeting on May 6th next, when those interested are invited to be present.

Kindly accept our sincere thanks for depicting our Crystal Palace winning Redpoll, "Little Wonder," in your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, of March 25th. The pose of the bird is as perfect as possible, which reflects very great credit on your esteemed artist, Mr. Norman.—Bell and Fisher (Frizington).

The Whitehaven C.B. and H.S. have fixed upon their old dates, viz., November 10 and 11, on which to hold their 13th annual show, writes Mr. W. J. Douglas, the sec. Mr. J. W. Metcalfe (Liverpool), Norwich and Yorkshire specialist, and Mr. C. Cubby (Carlisle), Border Fancy specialist, have been engaged to judge.

With the help of your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, from which I have gained so much helpful information, I hope one day to become a full-grown fancier. A friend of mine finds CAGE BIRDS of so much interest that although he does not keep a single bird at present, he takes in CAGE BIRDS regularly; and I find sometimes he can give me some useful hints which I may have overlooked. I wish CAGE BIRDS every prosperity.—H. E. Smith (London, W.).

OBITUARY.

Mr. F. G. JOHNSON (Blackburn).

It is with sincere regret, writes Mr. J. Cook, hon. secretary of the Blackburn C.B.S., that I announce the death of one of our members, Mr. F. G. Johnson, in his 34th year. His death has come as a great shock after only a few days' illness. Mr. Johnson was a well-known British bird fancier and exhibitor, his chief species being Goldfinches. The sympathy of all our members and of fanciers in general will go out to Mrs. Johnson and her young family in their sad bereavement.

The "Avicultural Magazine" for April is graced by a beautiful coloured frontispiece of the Snow Pigeon from the able brush of Mr. H. Goodchild. Notes on the species are contributed by Mr. T. H. Newman, F.Z.S., M.B.O.U. Other articles include "Two Uncommon Birds—the White-crested Turaco and Maroon Oriole" (by Mr. H. Willford); "The Lesser Spotted Woodpecker" (by Mr. P. F. M. Galloway), and "Practical Foreign Bird-keeping" (by Miss R. Alderson).

I regret that owing to an oversight in the report of the Metropolitan C.B.A.'s trophies and specials, writes Mr. J. W. Burgess, the Assistant Secretary, a case of spoons presented by Mr. Wood, for the runner up in the Ladies' section, was omitted to be mentioned. The whole of the prizes, etc., are to be won outright this year. Ladies and gentlemen wishing to join this progressive society may obtain full particulars of Mr. G. Harwood, 9, Frere Street, Battersea, S.W.

I must thank you very much for the valuable information I have derived through reading your splendid paper, CAGE BIRDS, for the last three years, and I put down my present success entirely to it. I put up a dozen pairs of birds last season—six pairs of Yorks. and six of Norwich—and reared one hundred and two; and amongst them are a couple of very promising ones which I think will hold their own at our forthcoming show. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success.—A. Congdon (Cape Town, S.A.).

What Becomes of the Wrens?

Where do all the Wrens go to? Each year a pair will rear from four to eight chicks in both broods, and yet they never appear to increase.

Cinnamon-marked Y.C.C.

Will Societies desirous of having the Cinnamon-marked Yorkshire Canary Club's patronage for the coming show season kindly apply as soon as possible to us, write Messrs. Grayshon and Allen, Secs., Wormald Street, Heckmondwike.

Midland Counties Y.C.C. Patronage.

Will secretaries who are intending to apply for the patronage of the Midland Counties Yorkshire Canary Club and have not already done so, please apply at once, as this matter will be brought forward at the next meeting? This club is now going strong, and the competition in both champion and novice sections during the coming season should be very keen. Will members, who have not subscribed to the Cup Fund and who would like to do so, please send on their subscriptions at once, as this fund will shortly close? We beg to call members' attention to Rule 3.—Beck and Andrews, Secs., School House, Rookery Road, Handworth, Staff.

Presentation at Brechin.

On 31st March, on the occasion of his departure to fill a situation in Musselburgh, Mr. James Skinner was met by a number of friends in the "South Port," writes Mr. Geo. Mitchell, secretary of the Brechin C.B.S. Mr. Tom Brown presided, and in the course of the proceedings a handsome fountain pen and pocket wallet were presented to the guest by members of the society. Mr. Skinner, who took a deep interest in the society, acknowledged the kindness of the members. Thereafter, with song and story, a pleasant evening was spent, and was closed with a vote of thanks to Mr. Brown for presiding, and also to Mr. Finlayson for handing over the presents.

A Great Record.

The interesting article in your last week's issue written by Mr. Thomas Smith, of Glasgow, relating to the handsome Goldfinch-Greenfinch and Goldfinch-Redpoll hybrids, should prove of valuable assistance to intending breeders, writes Mr. E. J. Lamb (New Malden). Mr. Smith's reference to my late champion Redpoll-Goldfinch recalls tender memories of his great career on the show bench, extending over nearly seven years, he winning three 1sts, 2nd, 3rd, and 4th at six consecutive Crystal Palace Shows. He was exhibited at fifty-six shows, of which he was forty times in the first three, and only on three occasions unnoticed; also only once beaten by one of his own species (exhibited by Mr. Denny Hunt, of King's Lynn), my bird lacking his usual polish that particular season. I feel sure that it must be a source of gratification to his late owner, Mr. Smith, from whom I purchased this hybrid.

Panic-stricken Starlings.

With regard to the "bird panic" in Ireland, I witnessed a somewhat similar occurrence here in the afternoon of March 24th, writes Mr. W. Edmunds (Coombe Farm, Langton Matravers), to the "Daily Express." A pony was engaged in working the gear attached to a root-pulper, when suddenly a flock of about a hundred Starlings swooped down from a great height, several perching on the pony and remaining there some minutes. The others hid themselves in a pile of faggots near. These birds were in a terrible state of fear, and could have been captured with ease. They remained in hiding some little time, and eventually flew off in twos and threes. I possess remarkably good eyesight, but failed to discover any hawk or bird of prey to account for this extraordinary panic.

Owl Causes a Fire.

An extraordinary case is reported from Kirkcudbright, where a serious fire was narrowly averted at Silvercraigs. The servant girl had occasion to leave the house on Tuesday night. She left a small paraffin lamp burning on the top of a chest of drawers, and on her return shortly after was surprised to see water coming from one of two tanks for supplying the house. She informed her mistress, who sent for a plumber. On investigating the cause of the leakage, he discovered that the servant's bedroom was on fire, and it was with the utmost difficulty it was got out. Next day the police made inquiry into the matter, as none of the inmates had been in the room during the servant's absence. The remains of the paraffin lamp were found in the debris, and near by was the dead body of an Owl. The bird must have flown in by the window, upset the lamp, and caused the fire, the heat of which caused the tank to leak. The damage done was trifling.—"Edinburgh Evening News."

Fourteen Years of Mule and Hybrid Breeding.

By J. T. MILLOTT (Mansfield).

My experiences in this hobby extend over about fourteen years, and my remarks here are the result of close observation and attention. In the crossing together of two different species of Finches, etc., we have what I consider the most difficult obstacle to overcome in the cage-bird Fancy. Still, it is the most fascinating. And what an open field there is for the ardent mule and hybrid breeder!

The Cages and Aviaries Described.

With regard to my method, my cages, small and large aviaries, are all cleaned as the time arrives, washed, painted and repaired, and all insect life destroyed. The birds as a rule enjoy much better health in consequence, and it greatly adds to the chances of success and a good breeding season. My cages are double breeders, 38 in. long, 15 in. high, 11 in. wide; the small aviaries are 36 in. long, 24 in. high, and 13 in. wide; the large aviary is 12 ft. long, 5 ft. wide, and 8 ft. high. In the aviaries at the back are nice assortments of bushwood, gorse, etc., which lend a very natural appearance to the aviaries. Besides this, I use wood nest-boxes, which I place in the bushwood for nesting purposes.

To the large aviary I consign two, three, or four pairs, as the case may be, and to the small compartments one pair of birds each.

The breeding of all crosses of hybrids is carried out on very similar lines, with the difference that many of the parents will sit, hatch their eggs, and rear their own broods if allowed to do so. I have been successful in rearing the Redpoll-Goldfinch, Siskin-Goldfinch, Linnet-Goldfinch, Goldfinch-Greenie and Siskin-Greenie; I have also had two young of the Linnet-Bullfinch hatch, but they died when five days old. The most gorgeous hybrid I bred was the Siskin-Goldfinch. It is one of the smallest of our hybrids, but a good specimen commands one's attention and admiration.

My Pairing Method.

My method is to pair up a large, bright, rich-coloured cock to a rich-coloured hen showing plenty of blaze; the more pronounced this is the better, for it will appear in the offspring and is one of the chief characteristics we have to aim for. I always select the best—that is, for breeding exhibition birds—which is the object, I think, of every would-be hybrid breeder. While breeding, the diet I supply is equal parts Canary, German rape and teazle seeds, with a little linseed, niger and hemp seeds added; also a little egg food with a small pinch of maw seed should be given two or three times a week, and daily when the birds are rearing young. I also give wild seeds in season as procurable, such as dandelion seed heads, flowery heads of groundsel, shepherd's purse, speedwell, knapweed, thistle, plantain stalks, chickweed, dock seed, etc., when procurable in the green succulent state; and in the dried state, as they can be procured from most seedsmen and vendors of bird foods. The bath I allow freely; it is most beneficial to the health and condition of the birds. I also allow my birds to sit, hatch, and rear their own broods, if they will do so; but I always keep an eye open for signs of poor sitters, feeders, etc., and should I notice any lacking on their part I at once place the eggs (or young, as the case may be) beneath a good foster hen, as I mostly have from seven to twelve pairs of Yorkshires up for breeding.

My personal experience is, when the young hybrids are doing for themselves, and also during the moulting season, it is best to give a little sunflower seed just ripe, in the undried state, daily; also a little of the following—blackberries, elderberries, privetberries, mountain ash berries, and the seeds (or cones) of the pines and fir trees, apple pips, etc.; I find these have a beneficial effect on the plumage and colour of the birds; and they are just as essential to feed the hybrid pairs with to be successful.

My Bullfinch hen built her own nest, and sat her own eggs until due to hatch. As I could not trust her to feed, I placed the eggs under a hen Greenie that had reared me two hybrids the season before. She fed well until the fifth day, when, on my return home from work in the evening, they were both dead. Never mind; I shall keep on trying for the Linnet-Bullfinch Hybrid.

Mule Breeding Methods.

I will now give my readers my experiences in mule breeding. My first aim is the comfort of the birds. Therefore, as I stated above, my cages are double breeders, and are all cleaned well before the birds go in for breeding; and all the places that are suitable for insects I give a good dose of benzoline after each nest of eggs or young; by so doing I am able to keep down the insects to a small minimum. I fix all my perches exact distances from the bottom, also sides; otherwise they will interfere with the working of nest pans, which should be about an inch above the perch. I always use sand, which is a most important factor at this period, with crushed egg shells from the kitchen.

I keep my muling hens in the flight cage or aviary from September until March, as a great deal of the success of the breeding season depends upon how they have been wintered. For winter bathing I always keep a pail of water in the bird room for to-morrow's baths; the water then becomes tempered by the normal heat of the room.

Points when Pairing.

When pairing my birds I examine the toe nails, and if they are sharp I cut off the sharp points, so as to avoid puncturing the eggs. I think there is nothing to be gained by having the breeding pans in the same cage for two or three weeks before they are fit. As to the time to pair up, I am guided by circumstances. When my birds are in good health and breeding condition I run them together, as it is no use mating up birds which are not in breeding form; they won't do any good.

At this period of the year, and until the breeding season commences, I give a little dandelion seed twice a week; it is excellent for keeping the birds in good condition and health.

In establishing a strain of birds to throw light mules, seven years ago, I put up four hens and two cocks, clear Yorkshires, all good strong and healthy birds. Three of the hens had thrown mules with a few light feathers. I choose the birds I think most valuable to keep. Each season I tested each hen with the Finch, and they produced nothing but variegated and dark mules. In my opinion, Cinnamon blood will be found most useful (so far as the production of light mules is concerned). Last season I paired a Greenfinch to a buff cinnamon marked Yorkshire hen, and they bred me two very nice lightly variegated mules. The hen was bred from a buff cinnamon Yorkshire (ten half Belgian blood, and a clear yellow Yorkshire cock, one of my Sib strain. I think I have tried all crossings, etc., both with the Norwich, the Lancashire, and the Yorkshire. In my opinion it is an exceedingly difficult and tedious affair, requiring the exercise of much careful judgment and commonsense. Only those who have tried know how exceedingly difficult in practice is the production of clear or light mules. I certainly intend trying with the cinnamon marked Yorkshire.

The Colour Problem.

I will now attempt to give my reasons why mules are, with few exceptions, dark in colour. In the first place, the colours of the domestic varieties of the Canary, such as green, clear yellow, clear buff, etc., are of newer origin, and on that account not so strongly inheritable as that of the original type, which gives the colour of the latter a dominance over those of the former. In the second place, the tendency to reversion which, as before mentioned, is peculiarly induced by crossing, is brought into play.

With such counter-influences at work, it may well be asked, how is it possible that we are now and then able to produce variegated and even quite clear mules? In my opinion, the sire has no influence in the production of clear mules.

When the hen has laid her third egg I run the Finch out and put him to another hen. The round that the Finch has to go should all be seen to before the breeding season comes round. I let the hens go to nest, hatch and rear their own young. When the young are from fourteen to sixteen days old, I draw the slide and let the Finch in. I keep a close eye on the Finch to see he is not rough on the young. I take the eggs from the nest every morning, as he is likely to be interested in them, and will probably put his long bill through them.

I find things are different with the Linnet, as he generally pairs up to one hen, and if you then separate them he will take it to heart, and more than likely do no more good. Some, I believe, would pair to two or more hens. But if I have a good Linnet, I pair him to one hen for the season.

As far as my experience goes, the Siskin can be paired to two or more hens, and he can be trusted with both eggs and young. The Greenfinch is a great favourite with me, I think he is rather rough with the hens, so I treat him the same as I do the Goldfinch.

While my hens are sitting, I feed them on plain canary seed only. Should I have a hen egg-bound, I put one drop of olive oil in the beak, and anoint the vent with a drop. I tie her up in a muslin bag, all but the head. This in most cases relieves her, and the egg comes away. Should a hen lay soft eggs, I give her lime-water to drink.

While the hens are rearing the young mules I use hard-boiled egg, crushed biscuits, and Spratt's cod liver oil bird food, with best canary seed, German rape, and hemp seed, and a little maw seed twice a week. After the young are three days old, I give dandelion, chickweed, or watercress as green food. I find the weaning-off of the young is a very important thing. I feed the same as when the birds are rearing, but I add a little powdered cuttlefish to the egg food, and crush all the seeds until the young get well on to cracking it themselves. Then, by the time they are five weeks old I commence to reduce the quantity of egg food gradually, also the hemp seed, and I give no green food until after the moult.

In conclusion, Cage Birds Annual contains full and up-to-date information, and the fancier, whether novice or "old hand," will find in it extremely valuable hints and instructions.

Wild Bird-Life.

The Return of Winter.

It is seldom we get such bad weather in the month of April as we have experienced during the last week. As soon as March is safely over, we look forward to the wild birds nesting, and the first of the migrants to put in an appearance. The winter has been so open that many resident birds have already nested, and here and there young ones have been hatched. With the coming of the north-east winds, bringing snow storms and frost, one wonders how these early broods have fared. In such times adult birds have all they can do to find sufficient food for themselves. As proof of this the writer noticed quite a number of birds, including many insectivorous species, round the poultry runs after the inmates had received their morning feed. As a rule, insect-eating birds are quite content to search the fields and hedgerows for their food. Birds that have young ones are naturally unselfish, and would strive at all hazards to feed their charges, even if they themselves starved in the effort. So possibly, in spite of the severe conditions, the stronger birds of the broods may manage to survive. One effect of the strong northerly gales will be the keeping back for a time of most of the migratory birds which are now due. Should we get an immediate change to a south-west wind, our woods and hedgerows will soon be alive with a twittering army of graceful warblers. Our bird life is plentiful all the year round; even in the dead winter months there are many species to be seen in an ordinary country-side ramble; but with many thousands of extra birds added to the population of the woods (to say nothing of the great increase from natural causes), our walks will be of tenfold interest. It seems hardly possible after the week of winter we have passed through that the Wryneck and Cuckoo are due, and that the Swallows and House Martins should be twittering round the eaves of some south-country cottages. A pair of Wild Geese have just passed, flying northward, at a great height. This is a hopeful sign, for birds as a rule shun the stormy area. These have a long journey to perform before their breeding quarters are reached, for they do not now breed in the marshy tracts of East Anglia, and only the very remote tracts of the north give the solitude and seclusion necessary to such large birds for the propagation of their species.

Stroking a Brown Owl.

The Brown Owl is naturally a very ferocious bird, yet it has been known to allow itself to be stroked while on the nest.

A Catcher of Fish.

The Heron is a grand fisherman, and will occasionally quite gorge himself with good fish. If surprised in this condition, he will promptly disgorge it before seeking safety in flight.

Ring Ouzel in Surrey.

A fine cock Ring Ouzel has been seen at Betchworth, in Surrey, evidently on migration. In consequence of the snow and cold weather, the bird stayed some days before proceeding further on its journey.

England the Birds' Paradise.

Small birds as food are much more popular amongst other races than among the Anglo-Saxons. Every continental market place is at times an ornithological exhibition. Along the South of Europe, all through the Mediterranean, Finches and Warblers, Chats and Thrushes, are at all times liable to become entangled in snares and nets.

An Old Institution.

The Pharoahs owned gilded aviaries on the Nile when history itself was only in bud. Assyrian monarchs had a leaning to "the Fancy" and the calm grandeur of Babylonian halls echoed very probably the pleasant ditties of caged warblers and cooing of Doves. Chinese Emperors have amused themselves with the brilliant-plumaged Finches of their flowery land for innumerable ages; while bird-catching and caging is as old as any institution from the banks of the Ganges to those of the Nile.—(From Arnold's "Bird Life.")

First Steps in Foreign Bird Keeping.

Sometimes Mischievous.

Java Sparrows, both the red and the white, I have sometimes found mischievous in a mixed collection, for a nip from their powerful beak is a somewhat serious matter; generally speaking, however, they may be trusted with smaller birds. Among themselves they are very sociable, and are no more trouble to breed than Canaries, especially those that are themselves aviary bred. The white variety owes its existence to the efforts of our Far Eastern friends the Japanese, who have evolved them out of the original grey, the ravager of the rice plantations in the land of its birth; the whites do not yet breed true to colour, and a nest from white parents may be either grey or more or less foully marked. On the show bench a pair of white Javas stands a really good chance of being placed at the top of a mixed class, but a pair truly without a foul feather or two is hard to find.

Of many of my own pairs that were purely white when I bought them, I have had only one pair which failed to reproduce foul feathers which had been "finger-moulted"; this pair I picked up for ten francs at a fair in Boulogne, and they won a good many prizes for me. It is not at all easy to decide upon the sex of an isolated specimen either of a white or a grey Java Sparrow. Seen together, however, the sexes are quite distinguishable—the beak of the cock bird is decidedly thicker at the base than that of the hen, and in profile he is quite "Roman-nosed" in comparison; in plumage there is absolutely no difference. Besides millet and Canary, Java Sparrows should be supplied with "paddy-rice"—rice in the husk.

Imposing and Gorgeous.

Quite an imposing and gorgeous collection may be made of Weaver-birds alone, and these also are birds that are better kept by themselves, or in association with larger birds, for when in breeding condition they are apt to be very spiteful. With one another they agree, or, rather, they show mutual respect.

Among them are many species, the cocks of which assume in breeding plumage the most gorgeous tints of yellow, orange, and crimson, contrasted in most cases against the deepest possible black, although when out of colour the cocks resemble exactly the modestly garbed hens. The commoner sorts may be bought for as little as two shillings a couple when out of plumage, and, if bought at this time by the dozen, a surprise or two may await the purchaser, for neither the dealer nor himself knows what the birds are, and the coming into plumage in due course may reveal some unexpected bargains. Many of them build the most wonderful nests; even in a cage they will justify their name of "Weavers," for, if supplied with grass bents, or bits of coloured string, wool, or silk, they will weave the most extraordinary patterns among the bars of the cage, pushing the ends of the material backwards and forwards in an incxtricable tangle; if a small travelling cage be hung within, the hen will push the ends of the material through from the inside, and the cock will pass them back to her from the outside, and the occupation tends materially to keep the birds in health. These birds, like many other foreigners, are the better for some insect food in addition to the ordinary mixture of millet and Canary seed.

One which would stand alone.

A collection which for sheer interest would absolutely stand alone, could be made up of those Whydahs which, in breeding plumage, have either all or some of their tail-feathers elongated to several times the length of their bodies. Because of these ornamental tails, the long-tailed Whydahs require a cage of considerably greater height than is necessary for birds not so decorated; nothing less than three feet would be high enough to enable them to keep their tails in proper condition.

Six species of these wonderful birds, not counting those Whydahs which do not develop long tail-feathers, are known to the show-bench—the Resplendent, Queen (or Racquet-tailed), Crimson-banded (or Cutthroat), Paradise (or Shaft-tailed), Pintail (or Red-billed), and the Giant (or Long-tailed or Twelve-tailed). The rarest of them all is the first-named, of which I believe only one specimen has ever been shown. Mr. Maxwell had the honour of introducing this beautiful bird to the show-bench, and it afterwards came into my possession. It was shown at first as a "Long-tailed Combassou," an appropriate, if incorrect, name, for, excepting for its long tail-feathers it very closely resembles the common Combassou, but the metallic sheen of its body plumage is even more remarkable than is that of its more humble relative, and it quite deserves its correct appellation, "Resplendent." The very beautiful Queen Whydah was at that time quite unknown at our exhibitions, and it is only during the last year or two that we have become familiar with it through the specimens shown by Messrs. Townsend and Watts, and the several members of the species which are at the Zoological Gardens.

The elongated tail feathers in this species have bare shafts for the greater portion of their length, the ends only being webbed; hence its popular name of Racquet-tailed Whydah.

The Crimson-banded may perhaps be said to be equally rare, for, although two or three of these were some years ago exhibited in the same season, the species is but rarely seen. I think the first ever shown was my own bird, and the story of its acquisition may be interesting, as showing that bargains are sometimes to be picked up by the observant.

A Lucky Moment.

When the now defunct Westminster Aquarium was "going strong," there was a bird-stall near the centre of the building. Here one evening I noticed two birds, which were just coming into colour, and the stall-keeper called them a pair of Pintail Whydahs. One of the birds was sufficiently advanced in plumage to make it certain that it was a Pintail, but the other was not so forward, and was presumed to be a hen of the same species. Looking closely, I saw a suspicion of red on the throat of the latter, and made a lucky guess that it was a cock Crimson-banded, although I had up to then never seen a bird of the species. I bought the "pair," and in due course had the honour of being the first to introduce the Crimson-banded Whydah to the show-bench, as well as the pleasure of winning a silver cup for the rarest bird in the show.

Not the least beautiful, although the most frequently seen of all, is the Paradise Whydah. Besides the long tail-feathers, the bird in breeding plumage has two tail feathers, of which the web is disposed vertically, and which give it the name of "Shaft-tailed." It has also two long filaments without web. There would appear to be two varieties, one of which has the "shafts" much wider than the other.

The Pintail Whydah is a very pretty species, and its four long tail-feathers are very curious; they each present in section a semi-circular groove, two being curved one way, and two the other, and the four feathers are frequently closed together to form a cylinder, hence the name "Pin-tailed." I have found this bird extremely pugnacious, especially when in breeding plumage, and it is certainly dangerous among birds of its own size or smaller.

The Giant Whydah, as its name implies, is the largest of them all; its body is about as large as that of a Starling, and its wonderful tail extends in old birds to nearly or quite two feet. All of its twelve tail-feathers are prolonged in season, and the web of each is waved in a most beautiful manner, so much so as to give each feather quite a spiral appearance. One of these majestic birds in a very large cage or aviary presents a most beautiful spectacle, as it flies from perch to perch. It is quite harmless to its smaller relatives, and may safely be kept in any collection.

The Whydahs present no difficulty in the matter of feeding; they do quite well on millet and Canary seed, but are all the better for an occasional mealworm or other live food; green stuff, of course, and equally, of course, the bath, for it is quite hopeless to expect them to keep their plumage in condition unless they can bathe frequently. A "Twelve-tailed" Whydah, when he is wet through, presents a somewhat ludicrous appearance; indeed, it is said that in their native Africa, when they are soaked by tropical showers, the Kaffir boys run them down and kill them with sticks for the sake of their ornamental feathers. Their toilet after the bath is with them a matter of great concern, and they will preen their feathers incessantly for a very considerable time until they have got them once more to their satisfaction.

The hens of all the Whydahs are soberly coloured birds, and the cocks, when out of plumage, exactly resemble the hens. It would take a keen judge indeed to sex or even to name a mixed lot of "out of colour" Whydahs, and they are best bought at that time, for, independently of the chance of an unsuspected bargain being among the lot, birds taken when out of plumage reconcile themselves readily to cage life, while those in breeding condition when caught are not nearly so likely to survive, and, in addition, the tails of such are nearly always very considerably damaged, and a whole season is lost, even if the birds live. In their first season in this country they come into plumage in the late summer, and moult into out-of-colour condition during our winter. This, of course, because the seasons here do not correspond with those of their native land, but each year afterwards they accommodate themselves more and more to our own seasons, and their moulting time gradually approximates to that of our British birds.

The Question of Water.

Now comes the vexed question whether you must supply them with fresh, clean drinking water. Some fanciers at various times have had serious losses amongst their young birds, which they attribute to allowing the water fountain to hang continually on their cages; consequently they added a few drops of tincture of gentian or Parrish's chemical food. Again, others will only allow the young birds to drink at intervals and then again remove the fountain. A few drops of gentian or chemical food has rather a beneficial effect than otherwise, but should you try the chemical food, do not make it too strong, as it has a tendency to set up diarrhœa in some birds; but these cases are isolated.

Personally, I have never experienced the slightest difficulty in this water question, for as soon as the youngsters are removed from the hen I hang the water fountains on their cages. If you will study this question for a few minutes you will arrive at the conclusion that, after the youngsters leave the nest you cannot prevent them from drinking, and the food does not remain in the hen's crop sufficiently long to become moistened. Watch a hen that is feeding a nest of chicks from three weeks to a month old; she will eat a supply of seed, egg food and green food and then off she goes and forces this up again in the mouths of the young birds; it is apparent that this food has not been in the hen's crop a sufficient length of time to allow it to become moistened. I also supply a hopper of rape, and it is surprising how soon they will begin to crack this seed.

If the hen shows signs of wanting to lay again, give her a clean nest-pan and a supply of nesting material, and introduce the cock again to her cage. Probably he will help the hen to finish off the youngsters.

When they are eating egg food and the crushed hemp for themselves, and have given up crying to be fed, remove them out of the breeding room and put them in a flight cage. After they begin to crack the rape seed, gradually lessen the supply of crushed hemp and egg food; your object will be to discontinue the use of the hemp altogether, and to reduce the egg food to just a small supply each day.

You will now begin to sort out the hens from the cocks, and remove the former back again into the breeding room; that is, if you have only a portion of two rooms at your disposal; but if you have a third room, put the young hens in this until the breeding season is over. All the hens can then fly together again in the breeding room for the winter.

Commencing to Train.

It is now time to introduce the training organ or the tutor. If your bird is songster good enough, place him in the same room as the young cocks. You will probably find his voice louder now, after being in the breeding cage, but you will find that he will sing quieter if you keep the cage shutters closed; but they must be opened at least once every day, say, for an hour. If you do not wish the young cocks to hear him singing loudly remove him to another room, out of hearing. But care must be exercised in this procedure at the back end of the year; so do not remove a bird into a room where there is any perceivable difference of temperature. Supply a bath again when the young ones are fully feathered, which can be ascertained by examining the body underneath the wings; the flesh will be entirely covered over with feathers. If you see the flesh between pen or half-grown feathers, wait a little longer, and for the first few times take the chill off the bathing water.

Young birds have a habit of sleeping at intervals in the daytime, but between naps they are bright and lively. If you find any that seem unwell, isolate them and give them a small quantity of bread soaked (or boiled) in milk; sprinkle over this a little fine sugar and maw seed. If this does not do any good, take all seed, egg food and water away, give them fresh new milk to drink, and supply them with nothing to eat but the prepared bread and milk. Young birds should have this latter diet (i.e., bread and milk) at least twice per week, this being given on different days instead of egg food. It should not be given too sloppy. This is a valuable article of diet, and the thanks of all Canary fanciers are due to its introducer.

You must decide for yourself what the staple seed diet shall consist of, but I would suggest that it be the best German summer rape; and in addition give in a separate pot a small teaspoonful of plain Canary seed per bird each day; and once or twice per week a small quantity of mixed seed can be given, made up of the following: Hemp, linseed, inga, white millet, gold of pleasure, lettuce and maw. Here you have a song mixture that will be beneficial in the moulting season and useful at any other period of the year. But this should be given sparingly, as it is a very rich mixture of seeds.

"Bide a Wee."

When the young fancier hears that all the faulty song tours are uttered with the beak of the bird partly or wide open, probably he will think that after examining his young cocks he has not one faulty singer. But bide a wee, until the moult is nearly over; then, oh! what a different view he will take of them.

Let them stop in the flight cages until the moult is over; this will help towards a good quick moult of the body feathers, as a young bird in its first moult does not cast its wing flights or tail feathers. In a natural way these are moulted in the moulting season of the following year. This exercising in the large flight cages makes the birds grow larger and stronger.

You will find as the moult is drawing to a close that the young cocks' voices are getting louder, and some are opening their beaks when singing; if they are bringing out a note or tour which you think is too loud, take the young bird uttering it out of the flight, and cage it by itself; this will stop it for a few days from singing, but if it still persists in singing this loud tour you will have to keep it right away from the other youngsters. But, of course, if your tutor has this fault it is of no use your removing a youngster for singing the same. Your object in choosing the tutor should be to get one without faults. As the other young cocks come forward in song after they have finished moulting, place them in shutter cages, putting those which you think are the best singers nearest the tutor. After a few days in the shutter cages they will begin to sing again. As soon as you perceive a bird bringing out a faulty or loud tour, take him out of the room immediately, or in a short time it will astonish you—you will find another has picked up this same fault.

After finding their seed and water in the new cages, gradually begin to close the shutters, say, half-way the first time, then a little each day afterwards, until they are closed up. Birds that are singing in a nice low and even tone need not be closed up in the dark unless they begin to get louder, and once they get loud in song you will not get them low again except for the actual time when they are covered up. If you can get ten or a dozen good singers out of every score of young cock birds, then you can assure yourself you are lucky.

Keep your eyes on those faulty singers you have removed, and if one should discontinue to bring out the fault bring it back again amongst your best birds; but should it go back again to this fault, remove it at once. I have known young cocks that have been backward in their song and have not sung until the spring to bring out a fault they heard in November of the previous year, and yet this fault was not in the strain. These young cocks had remembered it, and tuned it over many a time no doubt to themselves in the meantime.

You will naturally have a desire to exhibit one or more of your best and most forward singers. These will be from the earliest nests; and if you have not already done so, you will have to provide yourself with, say, a couple of show cages and a travelling case.

CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE.

The League Badge to be ready shortly. Some further interesting expressions of opinion from readers.

Last week we promised an important announcement concerning CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE. We were anticipating being able to publish a reproduction of the badge we have had designed and made as the official token of membership of the League, also to announce the date upon which those badges would be on sale. But the fates (in the shape of the manufacturers) have willed it otherwise. A short period must elapse—owing to the intervention of the Easter holidays—before the badges can be completed, but the reproduction of the design we shall put before our readers in our next issue.

The matters of rules, constitution and management of the League are receiving close attention, and shortly after the holidays we believe we shall be in a position to give the complete details.

In the meantime we shall be glad if Societies will discuss CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE at their meetings and send us any suggestions their members feel inclined to advance. We tender our thanks to the many secretaries and bird-keepers who have already written us on various points.

All on the Level.

Sir,—Having been a reader of CAGE BIRDS ever since its inception, I would like to say how pleased I was (although not surprised) to see your intention to form a Cage Birds League. On the lines you laid down I am sure it will be a huge success. In last week's issue of CAGE BIRDS I see Mr. St. John suggests a distinction of subscriptions, also a distinction of terms to apply to same, but with all due respect to his wide and varied experience, I think it would be a big mistake to make any distinction whatever. I say, let us all be on an equal level, let us keep to the one fixed subscription, and the result will be one great army of fanciers whose motto will be good fellowship, and faddists will think above once or twice before they attack us. In conclusion, let me congratulate you on the steady advance in our paper, CAGE BIRDS.—S. J. LEES (Hanley).

Sir,—Allow me to wish Cage Birds League a huge success. I intend to become a member. Wishing every brother member a successful season.—Arthur H. Cowell (Derby).

Sir,—I am glad to say that your Cage Birds League is causing a lot of interest amongst the members of the Reading and District C.B.S., and I believe will get a lot of subscribers.—W. H. Pyke, secretary.

Sir,—As I am already a member of Cage Birds League, I paid a visit to a brother fancier's on Sunday and began talking to him about the League. At last he had to say, Yes, he would become a member. I enclose you herewith 1s. contribution and sixpence for the badge. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success, also Cage Birds League. I have, I may say, got my eye on more prospective League members.—G. H. PECK (Bexley, Kent).

An Opinion from America.

I like your proposition with regard to Cage Birds League, and I think that the badge would be a mark of fellowship between members at shows and elsewhere. But I think that great care will have to be taken with regard to drawing up the rules, so that unscrupulous dealers and cruel bird catchers (for we might as well admit that while we have humane catchers, there are some heartless ones among them) could not hide from the law behind the League. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success.—R. Walker (Pittsburg, U.S.A.).

One of the Best.

I am pleased to see you forming Cage Birds League. I think it will be one of the best things done for bird-keepers. You may rely on me as a worker for the League in our district, and I trust the League will meet with the support and success it deserves. Kindly enrol me as a member, for which I enclose 1s. for subscription and 6d. for the badge, to be forwarded to me when ready. I wish Cage Birds League every success, also our ever-welcome CAGE BIRDS. May all fanciers have a good season.—G. H. Peck (Bexley, Kent).

Under the White Rose.

WIBSEY and District C.B.S. have issued their syllabus and lists of members' shows for 1911, and, as usual, it is a good and interesting one. Half a dozen members' shows are to be held, with a good classification for each; then several rambles are arranged for, and at two of them the ladies are invited. Good boys! But one is, alas! for gentlemen only; I suppose it is too far for the ladies. Other items are suppers and a cricket match. The first event took place last Saturday evening at their headquarters, Horse and Groom Inn, Wibsey—a meat pie supper; and they were doing full justice to it at about seven o'clock. Then they had a social evening. Their chairman was in fine form, and it would not have been his fault if things were not lively.

BRADFORD WEST had a good discussion on breeding, pairing, etc., under the leadership of Mr. W. A. Cowgill, who gave a good paper on the subject, and then invited questions, to which he gave interesting and useful answers, all quite to the satisfaction of the questioners. In the first place Mr. Cowgill prefers double breeding cages, as then it is much easier to keep the cages clean, without the necessity of disturbing the birds. You can put the nest in one compartment and the food in the other; then all stale food can be taken out as often as required. Pairing and matching he dealt with fully. He advises breeders to study their birds long before pairing up, and also to know as much about them as possible; also to have their own strain—not buy every time they want a fault remedying, but to study it out and breed each season with the object of getting some faults out and some good points in. He stated he had known many who had not put a lot of money into their stock, and they had been very successful in breeding winners; what they had put into their stock and work was brains and patience. Among the questions the most important were, "How can colour be got into a strain?" "What is the lecturer's opinion of double-yellowing and double-buffing?" The questioner stated that he knew a novice who, not knowing any different, had paired up two buffs, and from the progeny paired in the usual way the owner had been very fortunate in getting some good youngsters that had scored well during the last season. The discussion proved very interesting, the novice element present having a fair good time. A vote of thanks was passed to Mr. Cowgill for his able handling of the question under consideration.

SHIPLEY and District C.B.S. members are very sorry that one of their oldest fanciers, Mr. Hudson, has had the misfortune to lose his wife. The couple some two years ago celebrated their golden wedding, and during the whole time have seldom, if ever, been without birds, both of them taking a wide interest in the Fancy. One of their sons follows the birds also, and is a prominent member of the society, and, along with Mr. Whitfield (who has, I believe, been made an honorary member), was in at the formation of the society. Much sympathy will no doubt go out to the one left.

THE above-named Society have, after a hard struggle, got well into harness again. A couple of years ago they nearly floundered, but by dint of hard work on the part of the officials and members generally, they have now got the upper hand, and are sailing along smoothly. A balance of £9 in hand is what they start the new financial year with—not bad, this!

"STRAIGHT 'UN."

NORWICH C.B.A. ANNUAL SMOKER.

Suggested Coronation Present.

The Norwich Alliance (All England) C.B.A. held their annual smoking concert on April 6th at the Oxford Arms. The president, Mr. F. J. Lambert, was in the chair, the vice-chair being occupied by Mr. A. W. Russell, whilst amongst those present were Messrs. W. E. Keefe, W. W. Freestone, J. Parsons, F. Cullington, J. A. Alpe, E. Clarke, J. Freeman, H. Pippin, H. F. Nash, J. Howard, A. Payne, A. D. C. Lewer, R. Roll (secretary), H. Dunham, A. E. Edwards, and W. Hare. Song and toast were judiciously intermixed, contributors to the musical section being Messrs. Goodwin, Shearing, Clarke, Brooks, Burton, F. Clabburn, Fuller, J. Clabburn, and Wood (pianist).

"The King" having been musically honoured, Mr. R. Roll submitted the "Honorary Subscribers and Honorary Officers," to which were coupled the names of Mr. Lambert and Mr. H. F. Nash (hon. auctioneer). Mr. Roll said the association extended to Mr. Nash a hearty welcome on joining them and being there that evening. As to the honorary subscribers, the association owed them a great debt of gratitude.—Mr. Nash, in responding, congratulated the association on the eminence it had attained, and wished it every success in the future. They could rest assured he would do all he could to assist them.

The President, in proposing "Success to the Norwich Alliance Cage Bird Association," said its objects were the advancement of the Norwich Canary and improving the breed. As a show bird the Norwich Canary was recognised as the leading one in the world. The honorary subscribers were pleased to give their support to the association because it encouraged thrift among the members. The money realised by the sale of the stock at the end of the breeding season went to the purchase of extra comforts for the home, clothing for the children; and in the shoe trade, when work was scarce in the long winter months, it was often the means of keeping the wolf from the door, and was of real benefit to the tradesmen in various parts of the city. In conclusion, Mr. Lambert said he should like to throw out the suggestion that in view of the Coronation and the approaching visit of His Majesty to Norwich it would be a good idea to send one of the best Norwich Canaries as a Coronation gift to the Queen. (Loud applause.) The name of the secretary was coupled to the toast, musical honours being accorded.

Mr. Roll responded in suitable terms. He said he was looking forward to the time when the association would be the leading one in the kingdom. As an instance of what was being done, he mentioned with regard to one dealer alone that he had paid out no less a sum than £1,750 for last season's birds. This was an evidence, Mr. Roll said, of what Canary breeding was doing for Norwich.

Other toasts that were popularly received were "The Chairman," submitted by Mr. W. W. Freestone, and acknowledged by the President; and "The Visitors and Kindred Societies," presented by Mr. F. Cullington and replied to by Mr. A. E. Edwards. A most enjoyable evening was spent.

How to Breed Canaries.

A lecture delivered before the Hemsworth C.B.S. by Mr. H. Townley.

Mr. H. Townley gave us a lecture on April 5th. There was a very fair attendance of members and friends, but the rough, wintry weather kept a good number away. Those present enjoyed the lecture immensely. Mr. Townley went into details very minutely, and I think by the expressions of the members they were quite satisfied by the masterly way in which he handled his subject. The following is a rough summary of his lecture, as I jotted it down:—

In the first place, I assume you have the necessary birds ready that you intend to breed from. My own particular fancy is the Yorkshire Canary. We will deal with breeding from the standpoint of the Yorkshire, therefore, as almost all breeding is upon the same method of procedure. You want, in the first place, proper breeding cages, with plenty of room. Mine are 36 in. long, 18 in. deep and 11 in. wide; single breeders 18 in. by 11 in. by 18 in. They should have been well washed out and dried, and then lime-washed (I think lime-washing them helps to keep the parasites down). Nest pans should be made of tin lined with moss and horsehair, not cocoanut or wood, as they are only harbouring places for parasites, and try the temper of both the birds and the fancier. Now, everything being ready, I put my birds into the breeders—first a yellow cock and a buff hen, or vice versa—in each of the compartments, and when I see they are fancying each other I take the slide away and run them together, watching them for a time to see all is correct. Two clear yellows or two clear buffs should not be put together, as it tends to deteriorate colour as well as feather. A good clear buff or clear yellow should be paired up to a ticked yellow or ticked buff hen.

The cock should be a good big strong bird and the hen a good strong medium-sized one, full of quality. Little birds may be all right, but I prefer good big strong birds. Don't buy little birds; you can breed plenty of them.

The Eggs and the Young.

Supposing our birds have got nicely paired up, the next thing are the eggs. When the first egg is laid it should be taken away, also the second, and put into receptacles; then, after the third is laid, put the other two back again into the nest. The eggs will take 14 days to hatch, and egg food should then be given to the old birds. I make my own egg food from our own bread and boiled eggs that have been boiled for at least 10 minutes; these I put through an egg sieve. When the young ones have been hatched a fortnight I put a clean nest pan in rather larger than the first one and lined with Swansdown; this gives the young ones more room and prevents the old ones from smothering them. At three weeks old the old ones begin to want to go to nest again; so I put a hanging cage in front of the breeder and place the young ones in. I do this to prevent the old ones from pulling their feathers out for making their new nest with; and I give them plenty of boiled German rape, chickweed lettuce or watercress and plenty of egg food. The young ones soon learn to feed themselves, and the old ones will feed them through the wires, but keep plenty of clean grit in the cage, a small bit of beef suet, plenty of linseed, maw and niger seed, as well as good sound Canary seed, and you young fanciers will not be far out of it in breeding some good strong youngsters. An enjoyable evening was spent.—J. H. Gillings, secretary

CANARY QUERIES.

Bad Eye, and Sample of Seed.

C. L. B., Birmingham.—(1) See that the bird does not roost in a position where it is exposed to a cold draught through some chink. Keep the perches quite clean. Bathe the eye twice daily with a small quantity of a decoction made by infusing a poppy head in a half-pint of boiling water for about fifteen minutes, then strain and dissolve a heaped teaspoonful of boracic in it. Use it lukewarm, taking only a sufficient quantity for present need each time, and throw it away after use. Give ten drops of syrup of buckthorn in the water for two days to keep the bowels free for a time. (2) I cannot name the exact proportions in any mixture of mostly very small seeds from a small sample. The real proportions in the bulk may be very different from what appears to be the case in a small quantity taken from it. As near as I can judge, the sample consists of one part each Canary, inga, and broken groats, a half part each of hemp, maw, and gold of pleasure, a quarter part each of dandelion and lettuce, and just a trace of sesame and linseed. As an occasional tit-bit in small quantities, and for birds out of condition temporarily, provided over-feeding is not the cause of the loss of condition, it is a useful mixture.

Swelling on Abdomen.

Pickwick.—I cannot tell what this swelling is without seeing it, or knowing more definitely its position; character, that is, whether hard or soft, or apparently filled with fluid or solid matter; and its colour. The latter point alone would have given a much better clue to the cause of the trouble than I now possess. If it is of a yellowish colour, I should imagine it was an accumulation of fat, and if whitish, or white slightly mottled with greyish, I should suspect it was simply an accumulation of faeces. I am rather inclined to the latter opinion, and you can do no harm in trying the following treatment for a fortnight, and then report result, at same time giving the above-named items of information. Give a staple diet of plain Canary seed only. Every third day give half a teaspoonful of summer rape, and twice a week on the alternate days a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts maw, inga, and teazle. Give two leaves of dandelion, or a spray of chickweed or groundsel daily. On the first two days drop two drops of lukewarm castor oil in the vent morning and evening. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of buckthorn, and a crystal of sulphate of soda, the size of a small pea, daily for three days, and every second day for the remainder of the week. On the alternate days during the latter half of the first week, and every second day in the following week, give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid. Do not attempt to mate the hen until you have seen the effect of this treatment.

Cinnamons, and Roller Terms.

Tanager.—(1) No, I would not describe the Cinnamon as an unpopular variety by any means, though its popularity is certainly much less common and extensive than that of such breeds as the Norwich, Yorkshire, or Border. In a sense the Cinnamon colour as it appears in the Cinnamon-marked Yorkshires and Borders bids fair to become as popular, if not more so, than any Green or Green-marked variety, and it cannot be less than popular appreciation of the pure cinnamon that is bringing this about. The limited opportunities afforded for showing it is doubtless one cause why the pure Cinnamon is not more extensively taken in hand by breeders. (2) The terms you name are given to distinct and recognised tours in the song of trained Rollers. To enter fully into details is not possible here, and mere written descriptions are eminently unsatisfactory for the novitiate. To properly understand and appreciate them you would do far better to attend a few singing contests with someone who understood them, and could point out to you the various tours as the birds sang. Briefly, the explanations are: "Schöckel," is a tour somewhat resembling a hollow-roll, but with a shaking or rising and falling movement, given in rather quick time, and based on the vowel sounds u and o. This tour has been likened to the movement of a sewing machine, but not so fast. "Hollow-roll" is a deep, soft, rolling tour, based on the vowel sounds u, o, and a, in combination with the consonant sound r, a kind of rururururu. "Bass-roll" is a rolling tour which may be likened in character to the effect of a bass singer. It should be a very deep-chested, full, and soft sound, on the fundamental vowels, o, u, and a, with the consonant r. The "flutes" are so called from the resemblance of the bird's notes to the sound of that instrument, and are based on such sounds as dudududu or dododudu, etc. In each tour there are many subtle variations which it is impossible to go into here.

Seed Sample (Forth View).—No. 1 Canary is a very good all-round sample of excellent quality. But the presence of a solitary mouse spoor and a few stray bitter seeds suggests the wisdom of seeing whether the bulk is much frequented by mice, or possibly much contaminated by them. The sample does not suggest that this is so to any appreciable degree, but it is as well to make sure, if possible. No. 2 Canary, though not actually bad, is very small, and of decidedly poor quality. Much inferior to No. 1. No. 3 is a very good quality of summer rape. No. 4, hemp, is of excellent quality. The best I have examined for a long time.

Cutting Cock's Tail (A. C., Halfway).—Cutting the bird's tail shorter will not make the slightest difference to its powers or capacity to fill eggs. If this bird and his mate are in good, healthy, breeding condition, so that they would have had fertile eggs in the ordinary course without the tail being shortened, you may quite confidently expect them to have fertile eggs now. It would have been different had you plucked the feathers out, as in that case there would have been a drain on the blood supply, whilst the new feathers were growing, and in all probability that would have materially reduced the bird's fertility for the time being. But simply cutting the feathers shorter will have no bad effect whatever.

Another Unsatisfactory Pair (Seifert Rollers).—Probably neither of these birds was in good breeding condition when put together, but having been together so long, there is a chance that they may settle down to business almost any day, and the hen may be too forward to make it quite safe to separate them. Therefore, leave them together, and treat them the same as advised to "J. E. M. G." But in your case, give a crystal of sulphate of soda, the size of a small pea, in the water for two days, and also give four dandelion leaves daily to the pair of birds. You might also read the reply to "Downhearted," and see it any suggestion therein fits your case.

Loss of Voice (Border Fancy).—The bird has certainly been exposed to cold draughts, or got a severe chill in some way. See that it is now kept in a warm temperature—do not overdo it, but still keep it quite away from the cold side—as equable as possible, and do not allow it to hang near or over burning lights in the evenings. In addition to the seed diet, give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, with two drops of cod-liver oil emulsion, and four of sherry mixed in it every second day. Add a pinch of maw on the alternate days; and a spray of chickweed daily. In the drinking water give 20 drops of whiskey, ten of glycerine, and five each of oxymel of squills and sweet spirits of nitre, two days in every three for a week, and every second day for another week afterwards.

Canary Querists should send to our publisher for "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d.; "House's Canary Manual," 1/2; and "Yorkshire Canaries," 1/-, post free.

Shell-less Eggs (School Girl). You make no mention of the age of the hen, nor of giving anything in the way of shell-forming material beyond a good supply of gritty sand, which may, or may not, contain shell-forming matter. The cause may be due to immaturity or to some weakness in the lower portion of the oviduct, but from the hen's history and the appearance of the egg sent, I am strongly inclined to think it is merely owing to absence of the necessary material. Give her 20 drops of chemical food in the water every second day for a fortnight. Hang a flake of cuttlefish in the cage where she can conveniently peck at it, or stick it between the wires at the end of a perch, and leave it in all through the season, and renew the supply as often as necessary. When she is about going to nest again, also get a little old mortar from some demolished building and smash it up and mix with the sand you use on the floor of the cage, and scatter a pinch of millet seed on the floor daily.

Mopy Hens (H.W.B.). — You have been feeding these birds rather too sparingly for birds kept in a cold room. If they are quite free from draughts and damp, the following treatment will soon pull them round. Staple diet, a mixture of three parts Canary to one part summer rape. Every second day for a fortnight give each half a teaspoonful of egg-food or crushed sponge cake, with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it and sprinkled with a quarter teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts maw, sesame, and gold of pleasure seeds. On the alternate days give a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, millet, and teazle. Give two dandelion leaves to each daily. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea daily for three days, and afterwards four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a week.

Swollen Thigh (J.W.C.).—Sorry I cannot say definitely what is the cause of the swollen thigh without seeing it, or knowing something more definite as to the circumstances under which it arose. If the leg and foot are useless, I should suspect the thigh had been broken in some of the bird's courting "scraps." The swelling would cause the skin to show through the body feathers, if of much extent, but it cannot have lost the feathers off the thigh (or rather what is called the thigh), for the very good reason that it never had any on—at least, no proper quilled feathers, but only short and scanty down. Keep the bird quietly in a cage by itself for a week or two. Feed on a staple of three parts canary to one part rape. Give a little green food daily. Every second day give a morsel of bread and milk, slightly dusted with flowers of sulphur, and sprinkled with maw seed. Limit the diet to this for a fortnight. Occasionally add six drops of syrup of buckthorn to the water to keep the bowels a little free. Do not attempt any local treatment for the thigh. Rest and quietude will probably set matters right.

Marital Strife (Eggs and Bacon, Liverpool).—The first pair in which the cock molests the hen should have had the cock taken away when the hen began to sit, and the hen left to hatch and rear the brood by herself. As the eggs will probably be near hatching by the time this appears, you had better leave them together now, as it is quite possible his demeanour may alter when the heavy burden of being a responsible parent is forced upon him. But keep an eye upon him, and if he continues to behave badly after the young are hatched, remove him until they are out of the nest, and able to leave the hen. There is nothing you can safely give him to make him less vigorous. I suppose you are feeding them on a quite plain diet, whilst sitting as you ought to do. The other pair in which the hen is the termagent may be safely left alone. She is doubtless only bent on "keeping him in his place," during this interesting period. The same remark applies as to feeding.

Cock breaking Eggs (Luke Sharpe).—You did the correct thing in the circumstances by taking away the cock, but you acted wrongly in removing the three eggs afterwards. Even the last laid need not of necessity have been untertile, but if they were you have probably just as likely removed some of those that were fertile, as those that were not. You should have allowed them to remain until the end of the period of incubation, and removed them when it was quite clear they would not hatch, but even then an egg in the nest is no detriment, but rather an advantage for the first few days after the young are hatched. Next time you mate the birds remove each egg in the morning as laid, and return them on the evening of the third day, and remove the cock at the same time, and if a fifth and sixth egg are again laid, simply leave them to take their chance of hatching or not.

Opinion about Mating (J. E. M. G.).—Candidly, my opinion is that you materially postponed the fulfilment of your desires by separating the birds. Had you left them alone, I see nothing to suggest that they would not have quickly settled down and got to business. Give them both a staple of a mixture of three parts Canary to one part summer rape. Every second day give half a teaspoonful of egg food, with a quarter teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts maw, sesame, and gold of pleasure mixed in it, and on the alternate days a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, teazle, and millet. Give two leaves of dandelion daily, but see that they are free from night frosts, and not gathered wet. If the birds are still in good vigorous condition after a couple of days of this treatment mate them again, and leave them to manage the business after their own fashion. Continue the above treatment until the hen has gone to nest, then, whilst sitting, give the staple diet only.

Looking Unpropitious (Downhearted).—Really it is much too early to adopt such a non-de-plume. Unless you are keeping the birds in an unfavourable position, where perhaps they have got a bit of a chill since you obtained them, there is little to suggest that anything serious is wrong. The hen is probably not very forward, and only wants a little time and patience to get to work when, if she is a young hen, or anything other than a worn out crock, you may get quite favourable results. See that the birds are in no draught, as suggested; do not keep them where they will be exposed to extremes of heat and cold; nor where they are constantly disturbed by people moving about. Then treat them as advised to "J. E. M. G.," and exercise patience for a little while, when all may come right in the end. If the birds appear to be suffering from colds—coughing or sneezing—not otherwise, give 20 drops of whisky, six each of oxymel of squills and glycerine, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken, in the water for three or four days.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc

An Ailing Grey Parrot.

M.W.F.—Dissolve five grains of bromide of potassium in a little syrup and administer direct to the mouth; this may be given on two successive days, and then only after or during a period of excitement, as such usually precedes a fit. Give two doses of Dinneford's Magnesia—one teaspoonful to an ounce of water, as the day's water supply, having a period of three days between the doses, and then afterwards give a dose whenever there appears any tendency to constipation. When not giving the magnesia keep the drinking water well coloured with Parrish's Chemical Food, but previous to commencing this, put two drops of laudanum into its drinking water (one ounce) on two successive days. As the bird is rather thin, give a little boiled maize—boil till soft, but the grains should remain whole, drain away all moisture before supplying to the bird—it must be prepared fresh daily, as it soon turns sour; otherwise its diet should be confined to seed mixture, ripe fruit, nuts, and plain biscuit. As it is fond of small seed, give canary and white millet seed, in equal parts, with a little hemp and sunflower seeds as a change; a half teaspoonful of grit (not sand) should be added to this daily supply of seed, and a piece of clean cuttlefish kept hanging in the cage. Please report progress in two or three weeks.

Foreign Birds for Cages.

F. E. N.—Foreign species require more room than is usually given to a pair of Canaries, and a bird-cage, 36in. long, 15in. deep, 15in. high is none too large—a Hartz travelling cage makes an excellent nest receptacle for many species, with the fittings removed, screening it with a twiggy branch; use natural branches only as perches. All the following should succeed and breed with you: Zebra Finches, Cutthroats, Bronze Mannikins, Long-tailed Grassfinches, Bengalese, Silverbills, White Java Sparrow, and Budgerigars. As regards the latter, you need not fear their beaks, they only nip when handled, and a pair of garden gloves, when this is necessary, will obviate all unpleasantness. Our Nutshell Booklet, 2½d., from our manager, would give you all details re Budgerigars. In CAGE BIRDS, No. 470, January 14th issue, there was a full article on Breeding and Keeping Java Sparrows; you should get this if you do not keep back numbers. You will understand that the above cage is for one pair of birds only. The Zebra Finches, Cutthroats, and Bengalese might breed in an ordinary Canary breeding cage, but the larger size is the better and more likely to give good results. With a little luck, they should at any rate partly pay their way. As you are a novice with foreign birds, "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1s. 1d., post free, from our manager, would probably save you annoying losses—it fully deals with the above species

Birds for Outdoor Aviary.

Novice.—In an aviary of this limited size, it would certainly be better to have a hinged shutter or shutters, constructed of wood and glass, which could be closed on cold nights, and also during the day during periods of severe weather—if you are troubled with prowling cats, the shutters would be better closed winter and summer at nights, arranging of course for proper ventilation. For breeding purposes your aviary would accommodate one pair each of Budgerigars, Java Sparrows, and Cockateels, and merely as housing quarters, would not accommodate more than a mixed series of sixteen birds of this size. They will thrive and breed, but you will have to remove the young, as soon as they are able to feed themselves. It is no use my naming other species as Finches and Budgerigars do not agree together, at any rate, in a limited space. You could put in a cock Red-crested Cardinal for variety—he will not interfere with the others, and is able to look after himself. "Foreign Birds for Beginner," would help you, 1s. 1d. post free from our Manager.

Parrot with Swollen Joint.

Bombay.—Bathe the joint with hot water, and after drying with a cloth, paint the swollen area with neat whiskey; do this daily so long as the skin remains whole—if the swelling should develop into a sore, you must write again at once, giving the best description you can. Keep its bowels moving freely, but the voidings must not be allowed to remain watery-loose. A dose of Dinneford's Magnesia (2 parts water to 1 part magnesia), every fourth day should suffice, and on the intermediate days well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. Examine its mouth, and if there are any whitish spots on mouth or tongue, put a little honey and borax therein daily. Keep the bird warm and quiet, yet where it can get light and air without draught. Diet: Seed mixture, two parts each canary and white millet, and one part each hemp, paddy-rice, oats, maize, and sunflower seeds. Also supply daily ripe fruit, nuts, and plain biscuit, or a stale crust of household bread. Grit and cuttlebone must be regularly supplied. Report progress a fortnight hence.

Waxbill and Lavender Finches.

W. E. C.—You have done quite right to separate the birds, and do not put them together again till the Dufresne's head has renewed its plumage. Lightly anoint the bare parts with a little clean vaseline, but do not use sufficient to make its plumage greasy. Keep a millet spray in the cage, picking the seeds out will keep it active. Try it with a little soft food, and if it will take it, let it have a little daily, stirring in a pinch of flowers of sulphur after it is moistened. Give the bird half a teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in lieu of the Chemical Food every fourth day, but if the voidings become watery-loose you must stop the laxative at once. If the bird will not take the soft food, I should advise with the fingers spotting a little water over the seed, and then dusting them with the sulphur, it would get a little that way. Give a little lettuce daily, also a bit of ripe apple or other fruit, and when you can get flowering (seeding) grass free from frost, give this—a small mealworm morning and afternoon would be helpful if the bird will take it.

Care of Plumage.

Bristol.—Give this bird every fourth day one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water (one ounce) so long as the voidings are not watery loose; on the intermediate days well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. Stop your present seed mixture, and in lieu of same give Canary and white millet in equal parts. For the present give about a tablespoonful of boiled maize daily, boil till soft, drain off all moisture, and then dust with flowers of sulphur, stir up, and supply to the bird—this must be prepared fresh daily, as it soon turns sour. Also supply ripe fruit, nuts, and plain biscuit or stale crust of household bread, or both. Keep a piece of clean cuttlefish in the cage. The bird is biting off and pulling its own plumage; in conjunction with the above continue the quassia spray and report progress in a month.

Foreign Bird Querists will find in our handbook, "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1/1, and "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," 6d. post free; a mine of information of use and interest.

Outdoor Aviary and Birds.

England.—Of course, from your particulars I do not know all the details, but the aviary would be more practical and useful if, so far as the flight is concerned, the bottom was taken out, which would give the bird a flight six to seven feet high. Under any conditions I should not mix Parrakeets and Finches—the former sooner or later mutilate the latter. You have floor space for 25 birds the size of a Budgerigar, or about one-third that number of such birds as Cockatiels. I take it you have Green Budgerigars. Get, in addition, pairs each of Yellow Budgerigars, Cockatiels, and Blue-wing Lovebirds; this would make you a nice selection, a good variety of colour, and all birds which should do well with simple treatment, but the majority of the young should be removed as soon as they are able to fend for themselves; or they will become overcrowded and the breeding pairs' domestic arrangements interfered with.

Birds for Indoor Aviary.

Durham.—I take it your greenhouse aviary, 6 by 2 by 6ft. high, with sliding partitions and floors is equally divided, and that each compartment is about 3 x 3 x 2ft. There are two courses open to you, either to have merely a mixed series all flying together, or to keep birds of varying size as pets in the various compartments. A cock Shama would make a grand occupant for one compartment, he is a fine songster, very handsome, fearless and confiding. Diet: Soft food and live insects. A Gold-fronted Green Bulbul would make a gorgeously apparelled occupant for another; he has a fair song, of his own, and is a good mimic of other birds' songs. A diet of milk-sop, ripe fruit, little soft food, and a few live insects, will keep him fit and well for years. Both the above birds are long-lived, once they become acclimatised. A pair of Gouldian Finches should do well and breed in another compartment. You would get full details as to treatment from our Nutshell Booklet, "Gouldian Finches," 2½d. post free from our manager. Two or three cock Tanagers, say, Blue, Scarlet and Superb, would do well in the other compartment, and thrive on the same treatment as the G.F. Green Bulbul. The above birds should prove long-lived with you, once they have settled down, and prove "a sight for the gods." If you have a mixed series, all flying together, then such as Avadavats, Common and Green, Golden-breasted, Orange-cheek and St. Helena Waxbills, Gouldian and Cuba Finches, Long and Rufous-tailed Grassfinch, and Grey and Green Singing Finches, not more than 18 to 20 birds should be kept in undivided aviary. Foreign Birds for Beginners, 1/1 post free, from our Manager, would help you as to treatment, etc.

Keeping a Mynah.

Rekat.—This bird requires soft food, fruit, and a liberal supply of live food. Milk sop is quite wholesome for it, but so long as it lives on this alone voidings are sure to be watery. Soft food: Mix the following—3½ lbs. game meal, 1 lb. fine ground crissel, ½-lb. each dried flies and ants' cocoons. This will keep indefinitely in a tin in a dry place, and last some time. For use, take the required portion and make crumbly moist with boiling water. Mince a little cooked meat, also banana and carrot, and stir into the moistened daily supply of soft food; you will find it will ultimately take to this. It can also have some milk sop daily, but do not make it too sloppy. A little minced raw meat can be given once a week, and a little minced suet every other day. Live insects, it will take any of the following: Mealworms, cockroaches, smooth caterpillars, spiders, beetles, and almost any garden insect that is not of a hairy nature; it should have a liberal supply of live food of some kind. I should also from time to time try it with a slice of some kind of ripe fruit; let it hang in the cage till it ferments, and then remove it. He will take some sooner or later. As soon as it is steady, letting it out of its cage at convenient intervals will tend to its general well-being.

Quails, etc.

H. Harvey.—Californian Quails will agree with the Budgerigars and Lovebirds, and so would the little Painted Quails, but these latter might be bullied by the Californian. In two corners of the aviary you must pile a heap of brushwood over sand at least two inches deep. Send me a ground plan of your aviary and a stamped addressed envelope and I will send you a diagram how to arrange. The hen Painted Quail much resembles the Common Quail, but is smaller, and has a white throat. The cock is brown above, with white shafts to most of the feathers; the throat is black, with a white semi-collar round the front of neck, the sides of face are blue, with two sharply defined white streaks, breast and side of body blue, rest of under surface mahogany-red; wing, blue, red and brown. Size, about that of Lark, but stouter. You could also keep with the Budgerigars, etc., Cardinals, Diamond and Australian Crested Doves, Laughing Thrushes, Foreign Ouzels, Sibias, and so make a very varied series. Will send diagram, etc., of fountain with other diagrams, on receipt of addressed envelope.

Zebra Doves and Bulbuls.

Tanager.—(1) The—hen bird is slightly smaller than the male, and there is less of the reddish tint on her crown; but the difference between the sexes is not great. (2) Their song is not great, but they are interesting, active, and handsome birds. The Green Bulbuls (Chloropsis) are gorgeous in plumage and excellent mimics of the songs of other birds. (3) The Black-headed Siskin has been successfully paired with our English Siskin; the Abyssinian Yellow Sparrow, with the English Tree Sparrow, the Green and Grey Singing Finches, Alario Finch, St. Helena Seedeater and Hooded Siskin, have all successfully paired with Canaries. All the Foreign Serins and Siskins would doubtless readily mate with the domestic Canary. (4) The Firefinch is rosy-crimson, washed with brown on the upper parts, and spotted with white on the sides of the breast. The Masked Weaver has a black mask on the face, and is olive-green above, striated with blackish-green; the under-parts are mainly yellow. Bishops are also known as Weavers. The Napoleon is mainly yellow and black; the Orange is mainly fiery orange and black; the Madagascar has the head, neck, rump and entire under surface fiery scarlet, the upper parts are ruddy brown, with blackish streaks.

Re F.B.C. If you send me a stamped addressed envelope per the Editor, the matter can be satisfactorily arranged.

An Ailing Parrot (Mrs. H.).—Glad to note your bird is on the mend. Continue the treatment, and it should lead to complete recovery, but if there should be any relapse write again at once with fullest details.

Black-headed Nun (Learner):—This bird belongs to the Mannikin group, many of which are almost voiceless to the human ear, whatever they may be to each other. They make apparently prodigious efforts at song, with little or no audible result. They will agree with the Silverbills, and form a pleasing contrast with their light fawn coloured plumage. Diet: Canary, white millet, spray millet, green food, grit, cuttlebone, and water for drinking and bathing. Hardy and enduring, but must not be subjected to draught.

Budgerigars not laying (Anxious).—You must give them time to settle down; there are few species that go to nest with the regularity that Canaries do. They will not lay during the moult; this is somewhat out of season; are you keeping them where the temperature is very variable, if so, this would occasion an abnormal moult. They are hardy species, and so long as they are not subjected to draught, do not need artificial heat of any kind. As soon as the present severe spell passes, remove them to a cold room, and as soon as you can get it, free from frost, supply flowering (seeding) grass liberally. In the meantime let them have a slice of ripe apple to peck at. Our Nutshell booklet, "Budgerigars," 2½d. post free, from our manager, would help you.

Budgerigar Losing Feathers (Lovebird).—I do not retain queries by me, and I cannot recall the circumstances of your case; full details should always be given when repeating a query, but if there is no other way of giving the remedies, the bird can be caught, and instead of giving the remedies in a dilute form, give two drops neat direct to the mouth. However, you may not care to take such drastic proceedings, and with the warm weather coming on, things should soon naturally right themselves, as soon as you can get it free from frost, supply seeding (flowering) grass liberally, and in the meanwhile give a little lettuce or ripe apple, and supply Canary and white millet seed, oats, and millet sprays, also grit and cuttlebone. It is either constitutional weakness with your birds, or else a too warm or very variable temperature that is keeping them in continual moult. Whilst Budgerigars must not be subjected to draught, they do not need any artificial heat. Let your birds have as much exercise as possible.

A Sick Grey Parrot (Reaney).—Continue the treatment already advised. Glad to hear there is an improvement; this should continue, but during this treacherous weather keep it out of all draught. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, nor yet any kind of animal food whatever. If it craves for sop, soak a little biscuit in equal parts of chemical food and warm water, pouring off all liquid before supplying to the bird. Also a little boiled maize is permissible: boil till soft, but the grains should remain whole, drain off all moisture possible; it must be prepared fresh daily as it soon turns sour. You are quite right in giving the bath, but I should give an intermediate spraying with quassia solution for a few weeks. With the exception of sopped biscuit and boiled maize as above, confine its dietary to seed mixture, ripe fruit, nuts, and plain biscuit. Report progress a fortnight hence.

Cockatoo Picking its Feathers (Mary).—As it is only beginning to pick, you may be able to check this bad habit. Give one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the daily supply of drinking water every fourth day, so long as the voidings are not watery loose, and on the intermediate days, well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. Spray the bird twice weekly with a dilute quassia solution and keep strictly out of draught till dry. Diet: Seed mixture, two parts each Canary and white millet, and one part each maize, paddy rice, oats, hemp and sunflower seeds; well mix and keep a supply continually in the cage. Also supply ripe fruit, nuts, plain biscuit and little green food. Grit, cuttlebone, and water must also be regularly supplied. Do not give any tea, coffee or milk ops, table scraps or any kind of animal food whatever.

Aviary Queries (J. Rich).—Your aviary must be very exposed (cold), and I fear also almost sunless for the birds you name to fail. Yes, you must have a wood and glass shutter for winter and cold autumn and spring nights. Budgerigars and Cockatoels will succeed with you, but I'm rather doubtful of the Blue-wing Lovebirds; still, they ought to, and they are not costly, so it will be worth a trial. Keep a good thickness of sand over the stone floor; this can be merely raked over (with a short handled rake) every other day, and the bulk of the sand renewed about monthly. The Canaries were put into the aviary too late in the year to stay out last winter; they should have been put out in April or May. Am sending other details per post. As soon as you let me know what birds you decide to keep, I will advise you as to treatment.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by G. E. Weston.

A Chaffinch's Song (W. F. Wilbee).—Give this bird two or three fat mealworms daily (not more), and sprinkle a few really good ants' eggs on top of his seed supply. Let him have a dessert spoonful of cracked sunflower seed daily. If he is a steady, healthy bird, and you are managing him on the right lines (see the "Nutshell" booklet), he should quickly come on song.

Keeping Mealworms (J. W. W.).—After you have bought the mealworms, keep them in a good sized, flat-shaped tin (not a tall, narrow one) in a warm, dry place, such as a cupboard close to the fireplace. Get some bran and barley meal (mixed in equal part), and put a layer at bottom of the tin, then put in a piece of coarse dry sacking, folded over, then another layer of meal, with, on top, another folded piece of sacking. Arrange to have the tin about two-thirds full. The top piece of sacking can be soaked in sweetened beer and wrung out fairly dry. It will be necessary from time to time to replenish the supply of meal. Bore holes in the lid of the tin for purposes of ventilation.

About A Siskin (Porth Lad).—I expect your bird has laid on too much adipose tissue, a failing of the Siskin if too generously fed. The best thing you could do for him would be to turn him into a good-sized outdoor aviary for the summer months. I note you have now revised his menu, but I advise you to add some good sound teazle to the Canary seed, and a little summer rape. Every other day stir a teaspoonful of fluid magnesia into his drinking water (two tablespoonfuls). Give 4 or 5 doses in all, and I think you will find the condition of the bird very much improved.

A Mule Matter (G. D.).—For two or three days stir a few drops of Condy's Fluid into the bird's drinking water—sufficient to turn it the colour of light port wine. This should be changed (given fresh) three or four times daily, if possible. Use a glass or pot water-vessel (not a tin or zinc one).

An Agreement (No Nom-de-plume).—The pair of Bullfinches, the cock Goldie, and the cock Greenie would agree quite well with the Canaries in the room mentioned. You must provide (in addition to the canary and rape seeds, which presumably you will be using now), teazle and sunflower seeds regularly. They will only need hemp, niger, etc., at such times as you may be thinking of giving them to the Canaries.

Loss of Hen Bullies (J. M. W.).—Many Bullfinch hens are much troubled with egg-binding. Is it possible your birds succumbed to this last May? When the case gets to an acute stage the hen loses control of her limbs—the pain renders her unable to perch. If the trouble is egg-binding, then the hen must be treated in exactly the same way as an egg-bound hen Canary. Your feeding seems to be very good, though I do not think much egg-food is advisable for hen Bullies. My own get just an occasional taste. With regard to the hens you have now, are there no symptoms of illness? Have you handled them to see if they are plump and with healthy-looking flesh (particularly on the abdomen)? If a bird is ill, it must show some outward signs of it. Are they constipated; does the excreta look healthy? Pending further information, I advise you to stir 15 drops of tincture of gentian into two tablespoonfuls of drinking water.

The Best Thrush for Singing (Thrush).—The best all-round vocalist amongst our English Thrushes is undoubtedly the Song Thrush. But a really good Mistel Thrush is a fine songster, with very loud rich notes, and he is a bold, fearless fellow, becoming exceptionally tame.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harlow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

GENERAL.

Answered by The Editor.

A Mystery of Migration (G. J. F. Young).—Our Mr. Norman shall deal in his "Wild Bird Life" column with the matter mentioned in your letter.

Hen Hawfinches Breeding (F. E. Ben).—Presumably your letter is intended to be humourous, but the penalty for "humour" of this description ought to be a good sized dose of strychnine.

A Report (T. H. Tiffen). Many thanks; much obliged to you.

A Points Cup (H. J. L.).—In the case of cups to be won by points, whether scored by nominated birds or otherwise, it is usual for selling and gift classes to be "barred," as you put it. That is the common practice, we believe.

A Drawing (G. Thomson).—Thanks for your very kindly worded letter.

A Cage Rack (N. T. Corrigan).—We will deal with this matter in our next issue, if possible. Thanks for your letter.

The Border Fancy (Novice).—We have published a great deal of instructive matter quite recently concerning the Border Fancy Canary. We shall have a "Nutshell" booklet ready in a few days which deals with this breed; we can recommend you to invest in a copy.

Cuttings (W. Nisbet and others).—Accept our thanks for the newspaper cuttings sent us.

Several Matters (A. H. C. Legg).—Thanks for your letter. Contents duly noted and will be acted upon.

Paddy Rice and Kibbled Oats (L. F. Gaze). Any of the large seed merchants (vide our advertisement columns) would supply you with paddy rice and kibbled oats. Order them direct.

MANCHESTER & N. COUNTIES O.S

Meeting held April 3, headquarters, Mr. W. A. Bladon presiding over a good muster of members and friends. After the usual business (which included the election of Mr. A. Hirst, of Accrington, to judge first feather show), the last of a series of table shows for British birds was held. Thirty-six birds faced the judge, Mr. Bladon, and right well he placed them, his awards without exception satisfying all. After Mr. Bladon had judged he was asked to make a few remarks, which he did, and he complimented the exhibitors upon the grand condition of the birds. A very interesting meeting was brought to a close with a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Bladon. Will members please note that the next meeting falling on Bank-holiday, it has been postponed until April 24, when Mr. Richards will give us a paper on Mule and Hybrid Breeding, when we hope to have a good attendance? Friends specially invited.

SITTINGBOURNE & DIST. C.B.S.

Meeting held April 3, George Hotel. There was also a table show for British birds. The birds were judged by Mr. F. G. Wickham, who, at the conclusion, gave a very interesting address on the treatment of British birds. Mr. F. Chandler, the well-known footballer and fancier, also delivered an address on "How a Novice should start in Canary Breeding." Mr. Chandler entered into the many difficulties of Canary breeding. The right kind of food to use at different periods, etc. He also dealt with some of the causes of failure. His lecture was very interesting and instructive. At the conclusion he answered several questions. Mr. B. Tidy (the popular young secretary) proposed a vote of thanks to Mr. Chandler, and said he was sure novices and old hands too, could learn something from the lecture. He regretted that Mr. Chandler was leaving them, just when things looked so prosperous for the society, and he was sure all present would wish Mr. Chandler the best of luck in his new home across the sea. (Applause). Mr. Chandler replied.

FALKIRK AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held in Oddfellows' Hall, the president (Mr. T. R. Wallace) presiding. Secretary reported the society had been successful in engaging the following gentlemen to judge annual show, namely: Mr. J. Holmes (Edinburgh), for Norwich Plainheads, and to assist in the Crest section; Mr. J. Jeans (Camelon), for Borders and Crests; Mr. J. D. Gardner (Bathgate) for British and foreign. The President intimated that before we would meet again, we were parting with another of our members in the person of Mr. D. McFarlane, who is sailing on the 29th to make a home in the United States. He had been a true fancier, and a staunch member for a number of years, and a keen Norwich and Crest breeder. However, our loss is to be another's gain, as Dan is taking some of his well known Plainheads as Dan is taking some of his well known Plainheads with him. The members wish him, his wife, and daughter, who are as keen as himself on the Fancy, every prosperity. One new member was made, namely, Mr. C. Godfrey. Mr. R. Rennie, 19, Pleasance Square, was appointed secretary. We had a table show of Linnets, and O.A.S. British.

Correspondence.

Early Linnet Mules.

Sir,—In reply to your correspondent, Mr. D. T. Porter, I may say that I had a nest of Linnet Mules hatched on March 15th. The nest contained three eggs, two of which were hatched and the young Mules are now on the sticks singing. J. SCRIBBINS.

Do Goldfinches Wilfully Waste Good Seed?

Sir,—On looking through the correspondence columns of your valuable paper, I see that a fancier who signs himself "Disgusted" complains that his Goldfinches wilfully waste their seeds, and asks for the experiences of other fanciers. I therefore thought it might interest him to know that I have a Goldfinch and a Siskin; the former has been in my possession for a good many years, and the latter a couple of months; and during all the time I have had the Goldie, I have never found him to waste his seeds, but the Siskin, which is very tame, throws away almost as many as he eats.

GOLDFINCH LOVER.

A Triumph Over Adversity.

Sir,—Perhaps it would be of some interest to your readers to know that I have three pairs of Yorkshire Canaries, which I kept in a cold room, but on account of the room becoming very damp, at the end of November, I had to remove them to a warm kitchen. In consequence of the sudden change of temperature, they all seemed more or less upset. Then in February I had to leave the house owing to its damp condition, and the birds had to travel some distance in a furniture van—the weather being bitterly cold at the time—but the kitchen in my new house being too small to accommodate them, I was obliged once more to put them straight into a room without the means of using any artificial heat whatever. The outcome was, the cocks lost their song, and one hen became very wheezy. But for all that (as perhaps readers will be surprised to know) the wheezy hen has hatched 4 young birds from 4 eggs, which appear to be doing splendidly, and the two other hens are sitting on 5 eggs each, which I hope to see hatched in due time. I think your readers will agree with me that this is a remarkable and early start considering what extraordinary changes the birds had to endure.

Bird-life in Cumberland and Canada.

SIR,—The following may prove interesting to your readers. Mr. W. Nicholson, of Nicholson Bros., Flimby, caught a fine specimen of a male Waxwing, while out catching Bullfinches in Flimby Woods late in November. I cannot give the exact date it was caught as my brother does not say. I have just had a letter from him by the last mail telling me that he caught it in November, and that it is doing well. He says he was out catching Bullfinches when he heard some strange birds; so in looking around he found the Waxwing and another rare bird in company with it feeding on some elderberries. The other bird proved to be a Hawfinch. He set some limed twigs, and caught the Waxwing, when the Hawfinch disappeared. I might say that both species are very rare in Cumberland, and are seldom seen even by expert naturalists. This is the second specimen of the Waxwing we have taken in Cumberland. I shot one myself, also a cock bird, on the 2nd January, 1893, at Keswick. We have him stuffed, and set up in our private collection of British birds. With regard to Hawfinches I may say that it is over 30 years ago, since I saw or heard of any in Cumberland. I remember when a lad I was out in company with my brother William catching Siskins, Linnets, and Goldfinches, in the month of October, while they were migrating along the coast. We caught three Hawfinches then. I have never heard of any since. My brother William also caught a fine specimen of a cock Black Redstart, in the Allotment Gardens at Flimby in the spring of 1906; which specimen I had in my possession, when I left England for Nanaimo, Canada, over four years ago, when it passed into the hands of Mr. J. Wilson (Workington). I also notice the correspondence in CAGE BIRDS re another rare bird being taken in Cumberland, viz., the Two-barred Crossbill, which was caught at Maryport, and is now in the hands of an old friend of mine, Mr. J. Frostick, of London, and is disputed by Mr. Fulljames, who appears to take it for the White-winged Crossbill, of North America. I had the pleasure of seeing this bird while on a visit to England at either Harrington or Whitehaven Show, in Oct., 1909, and I am sure it is a true specimen of the European Two-barred Crossbill, as this bird has the two distinct white bars across its wings, whereas the American species has only one white bar across the black wings; and its plumage is more or less mixed with greenish colour, while in the former species the plumage of the male is rich rose red, with the wings, tail, scapulars, and the middle of the back black. Another very common Crossbill here is the Pine Crossbill, which is identical in every respect with its European cousin, except that it is a lot smaller—not much larger than the English Greenfinch. I caught a dozen cocks out of a large flock and sent them home to my brother's, but quite a few of them died in crossing the Atlantic, owing to their not being in expert hands to be looked after properly. They still have some of them in their possession. I sent those birds back to them, having an idea that if they paired them up with Bullfinch hens they might succeed in getting some hybrids from this cross. But all the eggs they had from them proved barren. In conclusion I might say that we have had a heavy fall of snow here in Nanaimo, B.C., Canada, since the new year came; consequently bird life is very scarce just now. I was taking a walk on 2nd Jan., and, going through the city, I saw a large flock of Hawfinches feeding on the ungathered fruit that is always abundant at this time of the year. I should think there would be quite one hundred of them. They are a very conspicuous bird by having so much white in their wings. They are not so large as the European Hawfinch, and are slimmer in shape. I also saw a very large flock of Pine Siskins feeding on the older seeds; there appeared to be thousands of them. They are just about the same size as the European Siskin, only there is not much difference in colour between the cocks and hens. They resemble the hen European Siskin in colour, only the cocks show a little brighter colour. Another beautiful sight I saw on my journey was a flock of American Robins, about fifty of them, which is an unusual sight. And what struck me most was that they were mostly all cocks, very few hens being among them. They were feeding on a hawthorn hedge that has been planted around the courent in this city, which produces abundant food for this class of bird, as this country seems to suit the growth of this tree. The haws or berries grow out here to an enormous size. The birds were mixed with a few of another kind of the same species, which are always called Robins here. They also are very beautiful birds, a little less in size, and greatly resembling the European Redwing both in colour and size. I also noticed a few other kinds of birds on my journey, such as Catbirds, Tits of various kinds, Wrens, etc., which ended in a pleasant walk out to see bird life among the snow.

Mules at Bangor and Menia Bridge Shows.

Sir,—In reply to "Fancier," if he were judge or secretary or official of the show, it would give me more satisfaction to know whom I was replying to, but as there is no name I cannot reply to my satisfaction. W. AITKEN.

A Competitive League for the West of Fife.

Sir,—A Conference of Cage Bird Societies in the West of Fife was held in the Masonic Arms, Cowdenbeath, on April 8th, when delegates were present from Dunfermline, Kelty, Leehgelly, Lochore and Cowdenbeath. It was decided to form an Association to be known as the West of Fife Cage Bird League, and to formulate a scheme for competition among the Societies represented. Mr. Geo. Penman generously agreed to provide a silver challenge cup to be held for a year by the successful Society. Mr. Joseph R. Reid was appointed Secretary pro tem, he was instructed to thank Mr. Penman on behalf of the League. Several rules were discussed, and delegates were requested to lay the scheme before their respective Societies for consideration, and in the event of each Society taking up the scheme the Secretaries to arrange next meeting.

Fife Shows and their Judges.

Sir,—Fife fanciers, if they are anything, are enthusiastic, and in the Bird Fancy are no exception to the rule. We were one of the smallest counties ten years ago, not only in area, but also in birdy matters. One has only to look up CAGE BIRDS in the show season, however, to see the strides we have made. We have shows on every Saturday, sometimes two (unfortunately), and all of them with good entries. But what amuses me most of all is the selection of the judges. In Glasgow and the west they seldom go outside of their own district for a judge, and the same applies to Edinburgh and the north. Why Fife cannot do the same I cannot understand, seeing they have some of the oldest breeders and successful exhibitors in Scotland. We never hear of Glasgow wanting them, nor Edinburgh. Most of the present-day judges at our shows have only been in the Fancy a few years. Of course, there is an older class, whom nobody can object to, but my point is, if Glasgow can command an entry with a Glasgow judge, surely Fifeshire can do the same. I think they could draw a larger entry than they do under the present system if they would only throw to one side the jealousy that exists amongst some of them. I am sure the integrity and honesty of the "Fifer" can stand alongside of either the east or west part of the country.

Nine White Canaries Reared by a New Zealand Reader.

Sir,—Some months ago I wrote to you telling you I had bred a pure white Canary, having bought a pure white hen 18 months before. I thought your readers might be interested to learn that I have succeeded in rearing nine more young white ones, which are all very hardy and well, and are now half through the moult, as the season is well over with us in New Zealand. My young ones were bred and reared out of doors, and always live out day and night, wet or fine, and show no delicacy of constitution. Three of them are entirely clear, the other six having some grey marks about them. Six of them are undoubtedly cocks; the other three I believe to be hens. They are double-buffed, so they are closely and thickly feathered.

Useful when Cleaning Cages Out.

Sir,—The sketch is of a cardboard box lid which I use when I clean my cages out; also when I clear the floor of husks, etc. It is handy and light, and cheaper than any shovel. Procure a strong cardboard box, say, about three inches deep; the lid will, perhaps, be about one inch deep. I just cut one side off and smooth with sandpaper, when I have what

I call a dirt tray. Just put it under your cage, and scrape on to the tray, empty into box, and replace lid, which looks better than a bucket and shovel in the bird-room. I have never used any other but this method for months, and I find it answers admirably. Fig. 1 shows the box lid and Fig. 2 the box lid with the slide taken out.

The Exhibiting of Borrowed Birds in Ireland.

Sir,—Would you kindly put in a few words in your paper for me under the heading of "The Exhibiting of Borrowed Birds in Ireland," as you will see that someone has written a letter signed "Ligoniel," which is my address? I may say that I am the only fancier in this district who shows, and I do not want the fanciers of Ireland to think that I have anything to do with this correspondence. Signing the letter "Ligoniel" is trying to make some of the fanciers think that I wrote it, which is very misleading. Any time I have anything to write, I will sign it by my name. If it is the same writer as "Irish Straight 'Un," he is doing more harm to the fanciers in general than any good he can do. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success; I have been taking it since it started, and have got many a good hint from it.

MALCOM FLEMING, JR.

Sir,—My attention has been drawn to a letter appearing in your last issue under the "nom de guerre" "Ligoniel." Under ordinary circumstances I would not interest myself in correspondence written by a person who apparently is afraid to come out into the open and give his proper name, but as the statements contained in the letter reflect in a certain measure on me as a bona-fide exhibitor, I take this opportunity to reply in a few words to the insinuations made. At the outset, I would have "Ligoniel" to understand that the C.N. and Y.C.C. is fully capable of managing its own affairs without his or any outside interference. Now, regarding the young bird which was awarded the cup in Belfast, the same was a clear yellow as far as I am aware, and was clearly stated as such in printed return. Further, let me add that all young birds shown by me at the above show were bred and owned by me, notwithstanding "Ligoniel's" allegations, and surely it is no fault of mine, however much I may sympathise with "Visitors," if they did not succeed against the "young Dublins." It must indeed have been a great surprise to find that winning Yorkies could be bred in Dublin. In conclusion, permit me to say that it is a dirty bird that fouls its own nest, and "Ligoniel" ought to understand that these discussions, far from tending to promote harmony in the Fancy, only serve to create dissension and disruption, which it has always been my personal ambition to minimise.

W. J. BIRSE.

Sir,—I have been just a little interested in this correspondence, and I have noticed that none of the persons making charges has had the manliness to write over his own name, but shelters himself by adopting a nom de plume. Such parties, in my opinion, should be taken no notice of, and therefore I do not intend to make any reply to them. At the same time, I consider it is necessary for the benefit of the Fancy at large who may read these effusions to say a word or two in defence of the Belfast Norwich, Crest and Yorkshire Canary Club. The sole aim and object of this club is to foster the breeds of birds named in its title, and it holds an annual show in November of the young Canaries reared during the previous breeding season by its members. What fanciers may do or not do at open shows is entirely outside its province. As a general rule, I consider committees in charge of open shows are quite able to safeguard their own interests, and do not require outside interference. In common with other clubs, charges have been levelled at some of our members of showing birds not bred by themselves, but such charges have always been investigated, and when properly substantiated the offenders have been dealt with according to our rules. I think that is all that can be asked of our club to do. That is all I have to say on this aspect of the question, but I must not be taken as countenancing the borrowing or lending of birds in any shape or form, as I consider such conduct highly disreputable. I still hold, however, that our club, as such, has no control over its members or their actions at open shows. I may take this opportunity of stating that as regards our cups, no new rules have been made, and even if allowed to drop into abeyance one season, or two, it does not prevent our rules being carried out when considered desirable. I trust fanciers in general will from the above understand our position in regard to the heading of this letter.

JAMES E. ADAMS,
President Belfast Norwich, Crest and Yorkshire C.C.

Successful Canary Breeding and Exhibiting.

SIR,—My experience as a Canary breeder and exhibitor is only of five years' standing, but I thought this would probably be as interesting and encouraging to beginners as some twenty years' experiences would, owing to the success I have met with. The effect of good management and cleanliness shows itself more still when I say that I have only spent a comparatively small amount in money for the stock I now have. Fanciers, especially those with short experiences, take a deep interest in the ways another new beginner is climbing up the ladder of fame, and this is why I make the above remark. Certainly, we need a certain amount of exhibition strain in our birds, but I remember once hearing a man, who is now prominent in the Fancy, say that a fancier does not require the amount of money to become successful that some people think is necessary, and my experience bears out to some extent this statement. My variety is the Yorkshire Canary. In this, as in any other variety, you must pay strict attention to the birds if you wish to be successful on the show bench. Cleanliness in regard to the seed hoppers, water glasses, and other utensils, and the cages generally, continually having the birds out in the show cages, to get them steady, and, above all, attention to the correct pairing up of the birds are essential points. When we see the faults of young birds off certain parents we must make sure that the partners we put to them when breeding next season arrives are all right in those points, so that we may be likely to get good young ones. Another point worth remembering is to note which way a certain bird is inclined to throw its young. If, for instance, its young are generally thin in neck, you know then that you should put a thick-necked partner to this bird, if you desire to have good young from them. I started in 1905 with one pair of common Canaries. Working with these for that year, I got a good idea as to how to make up the food for them, and deal with them generally. For the 1906 season I bought a hen for 11s., another for 7s., and a pair for £1. I paired up the cock bird with the 11s. hen, and when my first nest birds were a few weeks old I happened to meet the secretary of the Laisterdyke B.F.A. He asked me to become a member, and said he would come and look at my birds. He came, and said that I need not be afraid of anyone seeing my birds. I became a member of his society, and exhibited these four young birds in novice classes. They got 1st and two 2nd prizes and a 3rd. That season I sent one or two birds to Goole and Selby shows, and altogether I got fourteen prize cards, which I thought fairly good for the first season's exhibiting. Every season since then I have had a good lot of prize cards. In the 1907 season I was 2nd at Bramley, in a class of twenty-five, 1st and special at Bradford West, and had best bird at members' show either once or twice. I also sold two birds for 30s. each to a judge of Canaries. In the 1908 season I won 2nd medal in this association's (Laisterdyke) members' competition. This brought me out of the novice classes at the members' shows, and in the 1909 season, I competed in open classes at members' shows, having the satisfaction of gaining 3rd prize in this section, and I have now the best stock of birds that I ever had. I never had a large stock of birds to pick from for exhibiting, so here a beginner may note what good may be got from proper general management. A good bird may be bought now and again, and added to the stock with advantage when the fancier's pocket will allow this: and this, coupled with persistent attention to the birds, and proper general management, is the way to be successful in breeding your own exhibition birds.

HARRY SHOESMITH.

During the few short years of your production of CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL, you have yearly turned out one far excelling the previous effort. This year's ANNUAL is indeed the cage bird fancier's encyclopædia. Each page conveys a clear understanding on some point necessary for guidance in the bird room, and no fancier worthy of the name can afford to be without it.—J. Patterson (Chirnside).

Bird's Nest in a Sheep's Wool.

Sir,—Tho remarkablo sites sometimes chosen by birds for their nests are recorded from time to time, says "The Meat Trades Journal." Ono of the most remarkable, perhaps, is that recently given in the "Emu," and apparently authtntic. On November 10th last a sheep was being shorn on the farm of Mr. A. Burger, Telanga, Australia. In its wool was found a Starling's nest with one egg. A note in the "Field" adds that the nest of a small bird was once found in a horse's tail in Cape Colony.

The Confidence Trick Again.

Sir,—I advertised a Lark and cage in your Cage Birds last Friday week, and I am sorry to say a man represented he had come from Brentford Infirmary, and that ho had been sent hy the matron for the Lark and cage. If the matron did not approve of it he was to bring the Lark back. But I have neither seen the Lark, money, nor the man up till now. I have put the matter in the hands of the police, and I hope he will soon bc brought to justice. I am sending to you hoping you will puhlish it for the sake of other advertisers in your invaluable paper. I certainly expected an exchange, or I certainly should have had your deposit system.

The Virginian Nightingale.

Sir,—I have been reading the Rev. C. D. Farrar's article on Virginian Nightingales, and I think he is very hard on the cock in calling him a "scarlet sin." I havc kept them regularly for more than 20 years, and never knew them injure another hird. The first cock I bought for 7s. 6d. He lived in the dining-room, having his liberty all day and thoroughly enjoying life. He had a collection of treasures, a halfpenny, a bead tassel and other things, which he moved about to various hiding places. He used to steal my thimble, and sometimes helped himself to currants out of the cakes, beakfuls of jelly, a bit of cucumber, etc.—but one could not call those "sins." I have a hen now who must be quite eleven years old. She reared nests two or three summers. She is a sweeter singer than the cock and even a nicer bird. I don't find the cocks lose their colour, but they always have plenty of mealworms, and ants' eggs and Abraham's dried yolk of egg. They are very fond of fruit. Green peas they love, and they used them to feed their babies. The mealworms the hen seemed to drop into the little beaks, squeeze out all the inside and then remove the skin (she is so friendly that I could watch all she did), and she would take a mealworm from my fingers when sitting. The young cocks were not brown, but distinctly pink.

The Lancashires and Lizards of To-day and Yesterday.

Sir,—In reply to Mr. Donnelly's suggestion re Mr. Barker Clegg and a lecture on the Lancashire and Lizard Canaries. This would do no harm. I should very much like to hear Mr. Fuller give a lecture on the Lancashire Canary. Most of us have heard Mr. Clegg on the Lizard. Mr. Fuller's long experience should surely enlighten some of us. He might also bring some specimens. I could guarantee some of the winners of by-gone days.

John Henry.

Sir,—I see a letter in your last issue from Mr. A. Donnelly that I put down as "twaddle"; and it will serve no useful purpose. Mr. Donnelly suggests that they get my old friend Mr. Barker Clegg to lecture. Well, I don't think Barker will be able to teach us anything, as he used to belong to an old school of Lancashire fanciers, fanciers that bred Lancashires, not cross-bred mongrels; men that would not buy a stock bird out of a room where a Crest was kept; such breeders as the late T. Peacock, Sam Guest, Jackey Smith, T. Poulton, Bobby Chadwick, Ben Bardsley, Boh Allott, W. Hatton, and J. Sims. These were not mongrel breeders. Mr. Barker knows nothing about Crests or the quick breeding of show birds, but he knows it takes a lot of time to breed a good show Lancashire. I have had the pleasure to hear him lecture—he is all right on a clear bred bird, but on the mongrels he is off. Mr. Compston's lecture is about the same. I have been to two of his lectures, and also heard Mr. House lecture on breeding—all very good in their way, but what the Lancashire fanciers want to know is, why there is so much difference of opinion amongst the Lancashire men. Well, I have read Mr. Barrass's lecture, and smiled; also Mr. Hardy's, and had a good laugh, and thought of the birds his father used to breed. I was in his room and saw them. Now what I would suggest is to get Mr. T. Fitton, of Rochdale, to lecture, as I believe he has given up breeding and sold out. This is the gentleman that could teach Mr. Donnelly and the young fanciers something about Lancashires, as he has bred both sorts, clear bred and cross-bred, and was the first Lancashire breeder to put Crest in the Lancashire. Does Mr. Donnelly know that? This was the time when the Crest breeders bought up all the best Lancashiro birds to improve the Crests, and left tho Lancashire birds in a very bad way. So to get back the big birds quick, he bought a big Crest. Others followed suit, and that is where the mongrel breeding started. So I thiuk Mr. Fitton would bo the right man to lecture. But I don't think ho would care to lecture in the Rochdale club room. I don't think he has been there for about 20 years, or in the Town Hall show. He has walked with me more than once to the Town Hall from his home, hut would not go in. He might lecture at Oldham, which would suit all fanciers. If we can get him to do it, I hope ho will bring that letter with him that he received from the Rochdale Club, asking him to beg pardon for what he said to them. But he did nothing of the sort, and he did right, after the way he had been treated. Perhaps he would bc able to tell the young breeders how those mongrels were bred that Lady Ripon showed at St. James's Hall, Manchester, years ago—the only time her Ladyship showed the ones with black heads, wings, and tails. These were bred from Crested Lancashires in the early days of mongrel breeding. They got nothing. That finished her Ladyship's Lancashire breeding. They "killed the goose that laid the golden egg." I suppose the men who sold the stock hirds never gave it a thought that they would breed back to their Crest fathers and mothers! My old friend, Mr. J. Charters, said to me that they were in the wrong class; they ought to be in the Crest classes. I said they had no class at all. Now, Mr. Fitton, write a paper out and let the young ones know the hest way to breed a good show bird. You know, as you have bred a lot that you have never shown—others have bought and shown and won with them. I well remember those two grand clear yellow Coppies you bred, shown hy Mrs. Fitton at the last All England Show at the Wheat Sheaf, Derker Street, Oldham—two stormers, very few have been bred like them for many years. Write it out and (like a "Jim Overend"), if you don't care to read it to them, I will, and reply to all they want to know. Re Mr. Donnelly's other letter, I don't see much in it. He says I don't know anything; well, that is all right, if he says so it must be so. He also says you never hear those that win grumble; well, ask John Garner and J. Beswick, of Stockport. I should have said the members of the L. and L.F.A. must have thought I knew a bit, Mr. D., or they would not havo put me on the list of judges. It may be news to him to know that they wanted me to judge the last club show at Hyde. O yes, Mr. D., it was moved and seconded that I should judge; hut I wanted to show. I moved Mr. A. Wellings judge, and am very pleased he did, as he put your fat heads down, what few were shown. I am sorry I am so slow at learning, but if the Editor of the champion paper, Cage Birds, will grant me space, I don't think the readers will think me as slow as you try to make me out to be. You do not know how many winners I have hred, Mr. D., in my 33 years of breeding; and as for not seeing you, I was not a member when you was hon. sec. in the painting and faking of mongrel days. I was a member many years before you were hon. sec., and have been a member nearly ever since. You mention Mr. J. Dewsnap's name, but no slight to him was ever intended. I have always found Mr. Dewsnap a gentleman, hut I do object to him getting you to write to my friends as he said last week, after the meeting he would get someone to "warm" or show me up. I may say I have eight pairs of Lizards paired up at home, and 13 out of the 16 are Mr. Dewsnap's strain; also I have 6 gold hens and 3 silver cocks in Nottinghamshire hreeding for me, I think, the oldest Lizard breeder living, and all Mr. Dewsnap's strain, so you will see what I think of it. I may say 1908 and '09 winners have nothing to do with the winners of 1910. Don't say Mr. Dewsnap did not get you to write for him, as, take my word for once, I know all this is written without fear or favour.

E. Fuller.

Proposed League for North Yorks, South Durham & Dis.

Sir,—The following communication has been addressed to secretaries of societies in the North Yorks and South Durham District:—"Hartlepool C.B.S.—At our monthly meeting held on Wednesday evening, April 5, it was decided to write and ask the societies in this district if they think it advisable to form a league, or federation, for purposes of club competition, or otherwise, as may be jointly arranged. Will you please bring tho matter before your society at your next meeting, and, if favourable, suggest a date for a meeting of delegates if the suggestion is approved of?—Yours faithfully, Ernest Woodhead, Hon. Sec. Hartlepool C.B.S.' There may be some societies whose secretaries' address I have not been able to obtain: if so, I shall be pleased to hear from them re the above letter.

No. 498.
A Handy Perch.

Sent in by Mr. H. Pickles, 1, Baxandall Street, West Bowling, Bradford.

I send you a good hint for perches for fanciers who desire to let their birds fly out in the bird-room for exercise before pairing up for breeding. First obtain two pieces of wood about 12 inches in length by about half an inch in width, cut one of the pieces as in Fig. 1, then round and smooth off with a piece of fine sandpaper. Fix Fig. 1 by two small screws, but be careful not to let the screws project through the other piece of wood, Fig. 2. Next you require a piece of thin zinc or tin; bend this as in Fig. 3. Fix this to the end marked X Fig. 2 by screws; then you have a cheap substantial perch. If required, you may fix to the other end a seed hopper. The perch is fixed to the cage front (see Fig. 4).—H. Pickles.

No. 499.
A Useful Seed-box.

Sent in by Mr. W. Isherwood, 22, Railway Street, Farnworth, near Bolton.

I forward you a sketch of a seed box I have made and have been using for some time. I find it better than the ordinary square-bottomed box generally used; it has not so many corners in which to harbour dust and insects, and it is far easier to clean out. You are sure, too, the seed is quite within reach of the birds. I think the sketch will explain itself. Fig. 1 wants bending at the dotted lines at right angles for soldering the bottom part to; also for holding the glass. Fig. 2 wants bending as shown. Fig. 3 is for the top front. The figure on the right shows the completed seed-box.—W. Isherwood.

Classes for Foreign Birds.

Sir,—The Barnsley and District C.B.S. hold their annual show on November 11th and 12th, and as I am not a Canary fancier, but a foreign bird fancier, I should like some foreign bird classes. As we have not had them before, I wondered if some of your readers would please oblige me with some particulars of classification, as I am thinking of guaranteeing at least two classes, and shall try to get someone else to do the same (for one, at least). I should like to know what classes are the most popular and would be an attraction to the public. We have engaged a room that cannot be beaten for the purpose, being large, lofty and heated, also lighted, with electric light.

Keeping Birds in Small Cages.

Sir,—It is evidently Mr. Canning's opinion that those who agree with him have "commonsense" and that those who differ from him are without. Well, we are all entitled to our opinions, but "the truth is not in him" when he states that I "attack the Fancy generally" and "cry aloud for the hand of the law to stop us from keeping birds." I only attack those who keep birds in (too) small cages. I suppose Mr. Canning's "8 in. square cages" will be (if for Linnets) about 4 inches back to front, and I trust the law will shortly prevent him using such. He says "a larger cage means more work," and also that many fanciers keep more birds than they could attend to if in larger cages. The advice is often given in Cage Birds not to keep more birds than one can properly attend to, and that includes decent cages. Fewer birds means less chance of winning prizes, and so the birds have to suffer. Then Mr. Canning says "a small, well-displayed stock will not keep a man," and utterly gives himself and his case away by stating, "If it would, he (i.e., the dealer) would undoubtedly use larger cages." Why would he use larger cages (more work), Mr. Canning? Let me answer: Because he knows that it is cruel to keep birds in such miserable quarters. But in my opinion a small well-displayed stock would attract custom and pay, and by way of illustration I may say that I shall travel 50 miles this week to make a small purchase from a dealer who is noted for the cleanliness and hardiness of his stock, although there are a dozen ordinary bird shops within a mile of my office. I am pleased to hear that Mr. Canning has no illusions, owing, no doubt, to his common-sense, and I freely give him credit for all the good qualities he claims. I regret his recent loss, and am very glad to hear that Mr. St. John helped him so kindly and so well. There is one thing I should like to say to Mr. Canning, and that is, that I have not the least idea who he is, whether dealer or amateur, and that the only matter between us is a difference of opinion as regards the size of a birdcage. If I ought to know who Mr. Canning is, may I explain that I am a bird lover rather than a "fancier."

An Appeal for the Widow of a Blackburn Fancier.

Sir,—With reference to the death of our brother fancier, Mr. F. G. Johnson, we beg to appeal, through the medium of Cage Birds, for help for Mrs. Johnson and her young family. Mrs. Johnson is left in very bad circumstances, having five little children. One child was horn the day after Mr. Johnson's death, and the oldest is only nine years of age. Tho members of the Blackburn and Dis. C.B.S. aro doing the best they can, and will be pleased to receive any donation that any brother fancier can sparo for such a deserving case. All donations received will be publicly acknowledged by us. Donations received up to date: Mr. Jeff Walsh, £1; Mr. S. Tweddle, £1; A Friend, 1s.; Mr. J. Cook, 15s.; Mr. P. Walsh, 1s.; Mr. D. Cook, 1s.

Concerning Goldfinches and Goldfinch Mule Breeding.

Sir,—The Goldfinch seems to be the general favourite of the Finches, as the melody of his notes and beauty of plumage are very pleasing to the ear and eye. It may truly be said that he is the most beautiful of our native birds. He is also easily reconciled to captivity, and becomes quite familiar. Hemp seed is the food by which to familiarise them with the cage; be sure to mix canary and teazle seed with it, and vary their grain; in fact, on this point I think too little attention is paid in regard to cage birds of all descriptions. Variation of food keeps the birds in good health, lengthens their days, and brings them more to their natural way of living. The Goldie is naturally an active bird, and in a cage he soon finds work to do in removing everything that he possibly can remove; and from my own experience a single Goldfinch, if not mated and in an aviary, is sufficient to make all the other hroods fail in hatching. A tip from an old fancier: Keep your perches all at a similar height, as it is the aim of Goldies to have possession of the highest perches in the aviary. He is a bird much sought after for Mule breeding. I have found that Mules from this cross are more rohust than from other crosses. The Goldie-Canary Mule resembles the male in form of bill and colours of the head and wing, and the female in the rest of body. Isolated cases have been read of where Mules mated and produced fruitful results; but I have always had doubts if any authentic cases were known. It is due to this freak of Nature that the hen Mules are held in such little estimation. But tho value of the hen Mule in hreeding time is inestimahle; let her be used instead of your usual bad feeders, and the youngsters will be surprisingly well looked after.

*A True Canary Story.

We had a Canary which used to fly about the room. One morning the window was open and he flew out. Two days and one frosty night he stayed away, but to our great surprise the next evening he came back to his cage, which had been left open on the window sill, and sat quietly there until we brought him in.—Sent by Faith Rycroft (age 9), Lark beach, Camhridge.

*The Robins Song.

'Tis for us the gracious Hollies
Robe themselves in scarlet fine,
Holding up their leaves so stiffly
That we hungry birds may dine
When the cold, inhuman winter
Gives us frost instead of dew.
If the Hollies hid their berries
What would little Robins do?

—Sent by George Jenkinson, 18, Julian Street Grimsby.

A Bold Bullfinch.

One day, when I was fishing, I noticed a Bullfinch (as I afterwards learned) making a great fuss about something. I watched it for some time, and saw a weasel make a jump for the bird, but miss it. All at once the Bullfinch swooped down upon the weasel; then the latter seemed to catch it. The bird cried aloud. As I saw this I picked up a few stones and ran towards the spot. As soon as the weasel noticed me it ran, carrying the bird in its mouth. It ran a few yards, and then dropped the bird. I went towards the place where the bird lay, and when I picked it up its wing was broken and all the feathers out of its breast. I placed it in my fishing basket and went home. I kept it till it was completely better, then let it away. —John Macdougall (age 14 years), 9, Yarrow Gardens, Kelvinside, Glasgow.

PARKGATE & RAWMARSH C.B.S

General meeting held at new headquarters, the Sportsman Inn, Parkgate, April 8th, when we had a fair muster of members. We made two more members. After the business we had a discussion on the prospects of the coming breeding season. Several members have young ones doing well; and all report hens sitting on eggs. Next meeting at the Sportsman April 29th, 8.30; we hope all members will be present, and those wishing to join.—G. Watson, Sec.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Meeting held April 1, Fawcett-st. Cafe., Mr. Farrer presiding. Following were appointed markers to visit members' birdrooms, and make a note of birds. Messrs. J. and F. Riseborough (Monkwearmouth), W. F. Swan and C. Waters (West District), G. Davidson and W. Reid (Hendon District). Decided, that the visits be made in June and September, and that the markers report to the secretary at the first meeting following visit.—J. Jeffrey, Hon. Sec.

LEICESTER (Hand-in-Hand) C.B.S.

Last table show of the season, held White Swan, April 4th, but owing to the bad weather the entry was below expectations. Will members kindly note there will be no meeting on April 18th, it being Easter Tuesday? It has been decided to hold meetings monthly (first Tuesday in the month) instead of fortnightly during May, June, July, and August. I hope members will show their appreciation of this alteration by turning up in good numbers. A series of lectures is being arranged for these months. Nest Feather Show date will be announced at our next meeting, May 2nd.—J. E. Wood, Sec.

UDDINGSTON AND DIST. O.S.

Meeting held Reading Rooms, April 6th, Mr. J. Shepherd (treasurer) in chair. Rules were read over and finally passed. A motion to confine our show to a radius was discussed; it was agreed to make the distance five miles from post office. A proposal to compete for cup at First Feather show points to be added to annual show. Totals were left over for further discussion. Agreed to give a special to the member who secures most new members during the year. One new member was proposed and admitted to membership. All present signed the National B.B. and M.C. petition to Home Secretary. Next meeting first Saturday in May, 8 p.m. instead of Thursday, as formerly.—Jno. Kilpatrick, Sec.

PRESTON O.S.

Meeting held Tokio Cafe, April 6th, Mr. Dent in chair. Decided, after discussion, to appoint Mr. Dent delegate to the proposed meeting re the formation of a Lancashire and Cheshire Union on similar lines to the Yorks. Union. Decided to hold First Feather show St. Wilfred's Rooms on July 1st. Mr. P. Waring was once more elected to fill the post as judge. Reports as to success or otherwise in commencing the breeding season were numerous. Some appear to have made a good start, but the spell of cold east winds has made birds very backward; and irregular laying and non-sitters seemed to be the chief cause for complaint. Mr. Taylor promised to give us a lecture on Norwich, but owing to sickness at home had to disappoint us. However, time passes very quickly when a number of men with the same hobby are gathered together, and a very pleasant meeting was spent.—J. P. Leeming, Sec.

NORTHERN COUNTIES N. & C.C.C

First annual meeting held March 22nd. Chairman, Mr. R. W. Smith, presided over a good attendance. Balance-sheet showed a balance which was considered very satisfactory. Election of officers: Presideut, Mr. J. Currah; vice-presidents, same as last year; chairman, Mr. R. W. Smith; vice, Mr. W. Coxon; auditors, Messrs. Hooper and Davidson; committee, Messrs. A. Hermiston, R. Topping, T. C. Crawhall, A. Holden, F. Ayre, R. Hope, Hooper, Davidson, Laidlaw, Wellsbury (local), E. Cowling (Morpeth), H. Seely, J. Dixon, T. Griffiths, W. Woollett (Choppington). Decided to leave rules over until next meeting, April 19th; and also to have two table shows on June 7th and July 19th, judges to be selected later. A discussion arose on how it would be best to raise funds to get a cup for competition next show season. It was decided to have a prize drawing, some of the members present promising Canaries for same. Fanciers wishing to join can do so now. Subs., 2s. 6d.; radius, Northumberland, Durham, Cumberland, and Westmoreland. For further particulars apply to secretary, 60, Grosvenor-gardens, Newcastle.—W. Curry, Sec.

VALE OF LEVEN C.B.S.

Meeting held Village Schoolroom, Alexandria, April 4th, Mr. Hannay (president) presiding, supported by Mr. A. Lees (hon. vice-president), Mr. Bell (vice-president), and a good attendance of members. Ten new members were admitted, viz., Messrs. W. Davidson (Dumbarton), R. Todd (Caldarvan), W. Gillies, W. Gordon, A. Hamilton, D. Turner, W. Collins, F. Grier, J. McKenzie, and G. Stammers, all of Alexandria and Bonhill. The wild-bird petition having been handed round, was well filled up. The chairman announced the lecture for the evening: "Breeding Canaries for Exhibition." The lecturer, was an old breeder and exhibitor, whose advice was certain to be of much value. The lecturer dwelt on the pleasure to be derived from breeding Canaries. He pointed out that it was unnecessary to dwell on breeding cages, so many being on the market at prices to suit all, each doing the work for which it was intended equally well. Each should aim at providing a room for their birds. Good exhibition birds were each year reared in secluded corners of kitchens, sculleries, etc., care being taken to see they were kept free from disturbance as much as possible. The 1st of April was quite early enough to pair birds. He believed in taking away the eggs, replacing them on the third evening, so that they hatch out evenly on the fourteenth morning, when a little fresh egg food with green-food are placed in cage. Green-food he preferred to any in starting was with young dandelion leaves, then dandelion whiteheads, as many as they would take, finishing the season with chickweed. He gave egg-food at least three times a day, and saw that the young were properly on hard seed before taking away egg-food. As an evening was to be devoted to colour-feeding, and another to hand-washing, he would not touch upon these topics, but he advised the novice to study the points in the variety he intended breeding. Armed with this knowledge, let him select a bird from a good strain. His next step is to take note of the points see where it excels and is deficient, according to the standard by which his variety will be judged; then having made certain of this he will look out for a mate, who must be of the same strain. It should predominate in those points your other bird is deficient in; that is to say, the one bird should be strong in those points the other is weak in. In this way you equalise; otherwise you deteriorate. He believed in inbreeding on a proper basis, as it increases hereditary power, and stops variation. His motto to gain the coveted goal was: Gain knowledge, have patience, and study your stock. An enthusiastic discussion took place on the making of egg-foods, green-foods, and their value, various seeds, and other interesting items. A very hearty vote of thanks, brought a very enjoyable evening to a close. The secretary, A. H. McLean, will be pleased to hear from anyone desiring to join (annual subs., 2s. 6d.). At next meeting, May 2nd, Mr. A. Lees will give a lecture on the more popular of our soft-billed British birds. —A. H. McLean, Hon. Sec.

BEAMISH AND DISTRICT C.B.A.

Meeting held club-room, Mr. J. Boyle in chair. Mr. J. Hands was elected judge for our annual show, Nov. 25. We would like the new members to turn up at these meetings.—W. Knowles.

EDINBURGH AND DIST. C.B.S.

The following gentlemen and well-known fanciers have been appointed district delegates, and will be pleased to furnish particulars of membership, etc., to fanciers in their immediate neighbourhood:—Messrs. W. R. Dunn, Old Station House, Portobello; A. M. Gardiner, New Buildings, Newton Grange; G. Brown, 1, Coalhill, Leith; J. Allan, 13, Elm Place, Leith; J. Hamilton, 3, Corstorphine Park, Eskbank; W. B. Smart, 13, High-street, Loanhead; J. P. Thomson, Slateford; T. Porteous, 13, Saunders-street, Edmir (north side). Other appointments will be made later.—J. I. Mackie, Sec.

DONCASTER AND DIST. C.B.S.

Meeting held April 8th, Victoria Rooms, Mr. Trueman in chair. A very interesting lecture was given by Mr. A. Spencer on pairing, breeding and preparing young for show, which was much appreciated and enjoyed by a good muster of members and friends. Several questions were asked, and were very ably answered by the lecturer. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Spencer for the manner in which he bestowed the benefit of his long experience in the Fancy on the members. This brought a very pleasant evening to a close.—G. Beecoby, Sec.

CODNOR PK. & EASTWOOD C.B.S.

General meeting held Three Tuns, Eastwood, April 8th; Mr. Mitchell occupied chair. He placed before members the petition of the N.B.B. and M.C., which was signed by all present. Several interesting letters were read out, one being from the secretary of the Sutton-in-Ashfield C.B.S. asking the members to entertain them at headquarters on Easter Monday, which was heartily agreed upon—to give them a fancier's hearty welcome. Also to give a welcome to any fancier who would like to spend a few hours amongst us. The club room will be open to all fanciers from two o'clock; tea will be provided 5.30 p.m. Judge elected for open show, Mr. J. C. Barnes. Also arranged to give a silver medal to be competed for by British birds for most points shown at the two F.F. shows 1911. Also arranged to hold a table show of British birds on May 6th at Portland Arms, Jacksdale. Three classes provided: Goldfinch or Bullfinch, Twite, Siskin, Linnet or Redpoll, A.O.V. British Hardbill; birds to be staged by 6 p.m. Judge, Mr. C. A. Martin. Entrance fee, 1s. Will the committee please note that a special committee meeting will be held at the Portland Arms, Jacksdale, on April 22nd at 6.30 p.m.?—J. H. Mitchell, Sec.

GLASGOW AND DISTRICT C.B.A.

I would draw the attention of fanciers and members to the adjourned annual general meeting, which will be held April 18th in Duncan's Rooms, 71, London-street, Glasgow, at 8 p.m. Business: Election of office-bearers, date of show, classification, etc. All duplicates and unsold tickets, with cash, from subscription sale, must be handed in at this meeting. The tickets have gone so well that we expect to clear over £45, and after clearing the £21 deficit on show, this will leave the association in a strong financial position, and give the management every encouragement to continue holding another great open show. There is a strong feeling that the next show should be held during the New Year week, and there is no doubt that the gate money, which has been the principal failure at past shows, would then be greatly increased. In any case our old date is not available without clashing, as "Bathgate" have already taken this. A show of British and Foreign birds will be held on April 25th, at 7.45 p.m., in Mr. A. Muir's Rooms, 176, Saltmarket, Glasgow, with the following six open classes: Brit. Goldfinch, For. Goldfinch, Linnet, Greenfinch, Bramble, or Chaffinch, and Bullfinch hen; entry fee, 2d. each bird, open to all-comers. Valuable specials in each class, and we trust fanciers will support us with a good entry. During the show the prize draw for seven exhibition season tickets will take place; admission to show free on showing subscription sale ticket. Members and friends should attend the above adjourned meeting, and give the association the benefit of their views on the most suitable date for holding our next show. I have still a few books of subscription tickets for sale, and shall be pleased to forward a supply to any fancier requiring same.—Fred. Bowman, Sec.

NEWCASTLE C.B.S.

General meeting held April 6th, Mr. J. G. Hutchinson in chair. Our chairman announced he had a disappointment for us, as Mr. T. C. Crawhall was unable to give his impressions of the late Palace Show owing to a sudden and painful bereavement; but we hope to hear it in the near future. The members passed a vote of sympathy with Mr. Crawhall in his great loss, and instructed the secretary to convey the same. Six new members were elected, which augurs well for 1911, and if we can only keep getting a few each meeting night, Newcastle will soon be "on its own" as regards membership. The new members are: Messrs. R. H. Gills, A. Boyd, M. McEwan, G. Croft, W. Heslop, and J. Gillespie. Annual nest feather show classification was thoroughly discussed, and the classes increased to 33; so we have a classification now that should tempt members to bring their birds out and make it a success. The annual picnic, which was fixed for Whit-Monday, it was decided to hold at Hartford House grounds, through the kindness and trouble of Mr. W. Scott. Mr. Scott gave us a splendid description of the lovely grounds, which we have permission to visit. Altogether we have the prospect of a splendid day's outing. Secretary instructed to write and thank Mrs. Burden and her son for their kindness, and a vote of thanks was passed to Mr. Scott. It was one of the most enjoyable evenings spent by us, and as harmony is the soul of success we trust 1911 will be Newcastle's record year. Will members who intend going to the picnic kindly let the committee know at the May meeting? Subscriptions are now due, and according to rules should be paid now to enable them to compete at the annual show.—J. F. Atkinson, Sec., 8, Trewhitt-road, Heaton, Newcastle.

HEBDEN BRIDGE AND CALDER VALLEY O.S.

At a meeting held Nutclough Hotel, April 6th, Mr. W. Spencer in chair, it was decided to have a ramble on April 29th to Withers Reservoir, Cragg Vale, meeting at Nutclough at 2 p.m. All fanciers and friends will be heartily welcome. Also decided to hold annual show December 23rd, provided no Yorks. Union show is held on this date.—A. Pickles, Sec.

CRAMLINGTON AND DIST. C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held April 7th, but the attendance was unavoidably only fair. It was agreed to advertise our show in CAGE BIRDS under its guarantee scheme. Four new members were enrolled. The Society is open for membership to the whole of Northumberland. Next meeting, May 3rd, in the Ante-room of Co-operative Hall (the ordinary meeting room), when new members can be enrolled.—J. R. Chestney, Hon. Sec.

CHESTER C.B.F.A.

Meeting held Nag's Head Cocoa House, April 4th, Mr. Parker in chair. Letters were read from Mr. Hopkins re the formation of the Lancashire and Cheshire Union, which evoked some discussion. Decided to refer the matter for further consideration to next meeting. A circular from Mr. Ramsden was read giving details of the terms on which his specials will be granted to society. One new member was proposed and elected.—J. Swindley, Hon. Sec.

READING AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Monthly meeting, held Palmer Hall, April 3rd. There was a good attendance. On account of getting the birds dry early, the washing display was given first. Three or four birds were put through the tub in a masterly style by Messrs. Yates and Brooker. These were evidently not the first they had washed. The one secret the members wanted to know was how they kept the birds so quiet during the operation. Both gentlemen pointed out where novices were likely to go wrong, and it was felt we were very lucky to have two such good teachers. While the birds were drying we got to business. Two new members were elected, viz., Messrs. W. H. White and S. R. Holdaway. Sec. instructed to send a letter of sympathy to the widow of the late secretary of the East Reading Society. The petition of the N.B.B. and M.C. was passed round, and signed by all, and Cage Birds League was favourably commented on. The classification for Y.B. show on July 12th, was gone over and a new class for large Foreign and one for Novices, added, making 19 classes in all. Mr. G. H. Acton, with his usual generosity, offered 5s. towards special prizes, and the secretary would be glad to hear of any other member, who would like to give a special for one section, as he wants five more. Mr. J. Yates again very kindly offered to judge, which was accepted with great pleasure. Fanciers living in the Maidenhead district should see our cups now exhibited in Mr. Goldsmith's window. Would-be members should note there is no time like the present.—W. H. Pyke, Hon. Sec.

NORTHERN YORKSHIRE C.C.

Meeting held March 23rd, Mr. Shepherd chairman. Following gentlemen elected members: Messrs. J. Owen, J. Willis, Isaac Smith, J. W. Witherley (Sheriff Hill), J. Wood (Elswick), W. Westgarth (Benwell), Deighton (Willington Quay), and T. Leck (Crookhill). This looks well for the future of our club. The late secretary presented his report and balance-sheet, which showed a balance of 6s. 5d. to the good. Both were unanimously adopted. A letter was read from Mr. Coomber regretting he would be unable to fill the position of secretary owing to his removal from Newcastle. His resignation was accepted with deep regret, and Mr. Roberts Tindale was elected with great applause to the vacant position. In Mr. Tindale we have a good man as secretary. The report of the recent smoking concert and prize distribution was presented, and showed income and expenditure to balance exactly. The next feather shows are to be held as near as possible to the same dates as last year, the first June 7th, judge Mr. Shepherd. Mr. Potts offers a pair of polished horns for most points in novice classes at next feather shows; Mr. Crawhall a silver cup for most points in champion section. Mr. Tomlinson promised 10s. towards novices' cup for the autumn shows, and Mr. Coomber a like amount. Mrs. Leach has also kindly promised a pair of canvers in case for the best heavily variegated bird bred and shown by a member. Please note Mr. Tindale's address is: 14, Affleck-street, Gateshead, to whom all correspondence should be addressed.—T. C. Crawhall, late Sec.

LONDON AND PROVINCIAL O.S.

On April 6th, we were entertained to a lecture on British Birds, illustrated with lantern views, by Mr. Geo. Crabb. There was a very good attendance, some sixty members and friends being present. Mr. Crabb spoke for two hours, using 75 slides, in all, to illustrate his remarks. All the larger birds were mentioned in his remarks, also the smaller Finches, and Wrens and Robins. Mr. Crabb had some very good slides of the Great Tit. He spoke at some length on the Kingfisher, illustrating his remarks with a very fine series of nine slides. Included in Mr. Crabb's illustrations were some slides of curious nesting places. Some of the birds had built in letter-boxes, some in old boots, pumps, flower-pots, and such-like. The lecturer had some very good photos of birds and their nesting places, which were handed round after the lecture. Special praise is due to Mr. R. J. Pretty for the very fine slide of the L. and P.O.S. advertisement, which was distributed at the Crystal Palace Show. Mr. Crabb said his idea in regard to this lecture was that he might induce members to think of his cases of stuffed birds, and give him any birds that might have won at any time; birds of importance, which members might have the misfortune to lose. In passing a vote of thanks, Mr. Couzens said it was most gratifying, both to the lecturer and the committee, to see such a large number present. He hoped some of the visitors would be induced to join us. He said the society are arranging for a very fine cinematograph lecture on bird life, etc., to which he hoped all the fanciers in London would muster. Fuller particulars will be announced in due course. The following gentlemen were elected members: Messrs. T. Miller, J. Robson, A. Silver, W. Shakespeare, and D. W. Tatten.—C. W. Law, Sec.

Splendid Book

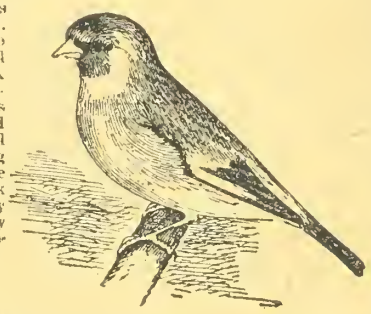
Easter Holidays

"CAGE-BIRD HYBRIDS"

Price 7/6 Carriage Paid.

Or 2/6 down and three payments of 2/- a month.



A STANDARD WORK.

This is a standard work. It deals with the most fascinating section of the cage bird cult. Its author has the highest reputation. It covers the ground completely. There are 128 pages, sixteen coloured plates, and many art illustrations. The combined brains of Mr. Charles Houlton and Mr. H. Norman have produced a work that will live for ever. A permanent record of human achievement in cage bird culture. What is a Hybrid? The most interesting form of cage bird in existence. Why is Cage Bird Hybrids the most delightful and fascinating book on the subject ever published? Mr. Houlton has given the result of a lifetime's experience. He has a practical pen, and his splendid exposition of the art and practice of hybrid breeding is a national work worthy of a casket of gold.

MARVELLOUSLY COMPREHENSIVE.

First of all are considered at great length the question of cages and aviaries for hybrids. All the various methods of housing are thoroughly and carefully described. So painstaking is the writer that even the perches are minutely detailed; nests and nesting material have a chapter to themselves. Mr. Houlton's special cage for hybrid breeding is clearly described and illustrated. All the foods, natural and artificial are enumerated. Egg and other soft foods and their feeding values dealt with. The selection of the stock is debated at length. The hens which need light and dark exhibition mules described. The proper breeding procedure for Dark Goldfinch Mules gone into. Egg-binding and its treatment. The food supply. Care of the young hybrids. All these topics are treated with that experience and skill only an expert of Mr. Houlton's standing could bring to such a task

Chapter VI. is a particularly interesting one. It deals with the production of the Light Goldfinch Canary Hybrid. Have you ever engaged in that alluring game—trying to produce such a rara avis? Mr. Houlton's remarks will entrance you and give you points that never before struck you. How to breed Sib. hens. The importance of Cinnamon blood. Results of in-breeding. All the various hybrids are dealt with in detail comprehensively and absorbingly. Chapter XXVII. is also a delightful one, and traverses the question of the hybrids that are awaiting production. The standard points of exhibition hybrids are set out at length. Right throughout this magnificent book on almost every page appear tricky little sketches happily illustrating the text. Mr. Norman is in his element. Every problem of feeding, moulting, management covered comprehensively. How to Wash Hybrids—Illustrated.

In fact one glance at this superb present to bird-keepers is sufficient to make a Purchaser—every bird-keeper ought to secure a copy of

THE "ECLIPSE" SEED CRUSHING MILL.

Reg. No. 579671.

Acknowledged by the leading experts to be the Finest Mill ever Introduced to the Fancy. The Mill advertised in 1910 is a mere toy in comparison with the "Eclipse." Read particulars—

The "Eclipse" Mill has the following advantages over other Mills. It can be entirely turned inside out, taken to pieces, thoroughly cleaned and overhauled and put back into action ready for grinding either coarse medium or fine grades. By using this Mill you do not harbour waste seed, which, in a few hours would turn sour, thereby being injurious to birds.

Another advantage in this Mill is that the bottom part of the mill being closed it acts as a receptacle for the fresh ground seed. This Mill is made of Metal throughout, and the above illustration is an actual photograph of same.

Price 1/6 each. Trade supplied.

THE SECRET

of successful spending lies in what you buy, rather than in the amount you spend: low price does not always mean cheapness; sometimes otherwise. It is impossible to obtain something for nothing; everything worth having has its value: therefore if by paying a little more you can obtain a much higher quality bird, to do you greater service, it stands to reason it is the best policy to do so. My Norwich have stood the test, a strain which has no equal; some grand size yellow cocks at 25/- and 30/- each, bouncers; several grand ones, trifle smaller, but same blood, 12/6, 15/- and 20/- each; grand buff cocks 10/- to 25/-; yellow hens 10/- to 25/-; buff hens 7/6 to 21/-; topping pairs, specially matched, 20/- to 45/- per pair; approval: Judge Silk, Whitstable.

THAT IS WHERE I COME IN,

but I neither sell nor pretend to sell, the best birds or best colours at the lowest prices; but I do

GIVE THE BEST VALUE

I should like all fanciers to note that our next open-to-all-England Linnet contest will be held Elephant and Castle, Bag Lane, Atherton, April 29, when £1 will be given to an entrance fee of 1s.; so I should like to make this contest a record.—J. McAllister, Sec.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red else.

BLACKBURN.

Open to all England, Easter contest, held April 15 Old Red Lion, Snig Brook, when we had a very good entry, birds coming from Globe Inn Linnet Leigh Club, of which some seven members belong to our club; also we had a very good entry from the Wigan Linnet Club, held Weavers' Arms; also members residing in Wigan; birds from Clitheroe, Rishton, Gt. Harwood, West Houghton. The singing was very good. Result: For quality: 1, Globe Inn Linnet Club; 2, Joseph Dobson; 3, 4, W. H. Topping. For time: Messrs. P. O. Neil, and R. Leyland. For quality, Messrs. Holmes and W. H. Topping. Referee, Mr. J Dobson.—T. Slater, Sec.

LEEDS.

Leeds Central Linnet and C.C.—Our club is progressing wonderfully, and is now in full swing. Open match for time and quality will be held at Plasterers' Arms, Skinner Lane, off North Street, April 22nd, at 2.30 p.m. Usual match April 23rd, 1 o'clock. Result of match, April 9th: 1, Tom Dobson; 2, B. Smith; 3, Dobson. Timekeepers, Messrs. Waite and J. Hargreaves. Very good contest held April 16th, when 18 good time and quality birds faced the judges, Messrs. Tate and Butler. Mr. (Old Tom) Dobson again winning. It will be interesting to some old Leeds fanciers to again see the name of the old man, counting again, as it is 15 years since he hung a bird. He has been a breeder and fancier for 60 years and has a well stocked aviary at Kirkstall. On April 9th he brought some of his Roller Canaries down, and a very pleasant evening was spent listening to his ancient birdy anecdotes.—Joe Hargreaves.

GREAT HOUGHTON.

Great Houghton and Dist. Linnet Association, held at Old Hall Inn, April 16th, a great Linnet Contest (open to all England), when 30 of the best picked birds of Yorkshire sang (time singing), for three good prizes, and three specials. Some extraordinary singing was heard. We had visitors from far and near. After a speech by Mr. Harry Allen, several gentlemen were made members, Mr. Allen showed us a great many points, including how he trained his Linnets in the field. Mr. Ben Midgley thanked Mr. Allen for his kind remarks. Mr. Midgley hopes to see the Great Houghton Club second to none. The following gentlemen won the prizes: 1st and special, Mr. Fowler (a young novice; it was the first prize contest he had ever entered), score, 72 secs.; 2nd prize, Mr. Busby (Barnsley), 66 secs.; 3rd, Mr. Ben Midgley, 63 secs. Judge, Mr. H. Allen. Timekeepers, Messrs. B. Midgley and G. Howell.—Jas. Halpine, Sec.

Wild Bird-Life.

Structure of Early Nests.

While rambling across the downs and the more exposed uplands, the writer found evidence of the severity of the weather during the first week of the month in the remains of several dead birds, which, although in fairly good condition, were unable to stand against the north-east wind, snow, and severe frost. On the other hand, some individuals must have passed through it quite cheerfully, for many nests in the bare hedgerows are completed, and some species are even sitting upon freshly-laid eggs. A nest in early April, although a thing of interest as being among the first of the season, has not by any means the beauty of a nest of the same bird later on. This fact particularly struck us while looking at a Thrush's nest which had been robbed of its contents, the broken egg shells lying scattered upon the ground. The nest was in the hedgerow quite bare of leaves, and although the branches upon which it rested had a nice sprinkling of ivy growing among it, the nest itself was composed of such ordinary looking material that what might have been a perfect picture as far as surroundings go, was spoilt by the main object. In these early nests dried grass or hay from the vicinity of the neighbouring rick forms the main substance, the nests being simply lined with mud in the usual manner. Some of the later nests will have a few twigs, leaves, and moss included, giving a little local colour to the whole; then, when surrounded by green leaves and growing branches, they form quite a different picture, especially when the lonely turquoise-blue eggs with the brownish black spots are included. The work the making of one of these nests entails upon the birds is not by any means slight. Journey after journey must be performed to the rick yard for the hay, which is placed in a strong, compact mass quite two inches thick all round; then the mud, for the interior, of the right kind and consistency, must be found and conveyed to the spot, to be gradually shaped by the mother bird's breast as it slowly dries. And to what end, after all this care and work? The first hooligan who passes by will ruthlessly purloin the contents and scatter them in sheer destructiveness upon the ground. To the poor birds, it is a case of "Love's labour lost."

Bird Parasites.

Swallows and Martins are two of the many species of birds which are very much infested by insects. It is supposed that they try to rid themselves of these pests by rapidly vibrating the wings whilst flying, and by frequently dipping into running water; but this latter is a rather dangerous proceeding, as occasionally one gets drowned while performing it.

Blue-headed Wagtail in Sussex.

For several years a pair of Blue-headed Wagtails nested in Sussex, in the neighbourhood of Winchelsea. But far too much publicity was given to them. Consequently, collectors made an annual rush to the spot—with the usual result. This is how many of our rare species become extinct. The collector is as much to be dreaded as the sportsman.

A Sad Loss.

I am sorry to have to report the loss of the Hon. Mrs. Bourke's "Dartford Warbler," writes Mr. V. Wynn. During Mrs. Bourke's absence in Venice, the cook, who was entrusted with the care of it, let it out by mistake into the room and then went down to dinner. When she returned, she found to her horror that the poor little mite had flown on to the fire that was burning in the room, and was lying dead inside the fender. It is needless to dwell on the remorse the cook suffered at this deplorable result of her thoughtless action. Mrs. Bourke feels this loss dreadfully, as the "Dartford Warbler" was the bird she liked best out of her select collection, and she fears she will never be able to replace it. This fine bird took 1st and special at the City and Suburban Show and 3rd at the Horticultural Hall (the only times shown), and it is interesting to recall that this and Mr. Frostick's are the only specimens ever exhibited in this country.

Allow me to thank you for the excellent drawing of my light Goldfinch-Canary mule which appeared in your issue of April 15, writes Mr Fred. Archer (Huddersfield).

Mr. W. Reid (Sunderland) has, we hear, been elected to judge the Houghton-le-Spring first feather show on July 1, and the Leadgate annual show on January 6 next.

Mr. J. Sheppard, sec. of the South Birmingham O.S., informs us that his society has decided to hold two shows, the first to be held on June 28 and the other on July 22.

Before our society is much older, writes Mr. Daniel John, the Sec. of the Llanelly and Dist. C.B.S., we shall hold a washing competition (open to members) for a suitable prize.

The Brighton Cage Bird Association annual show will be held on Nov. 8, 9, instead of Nov. 15, 16, as originally fixed, when Mr. C. A. House will again officiate as judge, writes Mr. Will H. Gibb, the Hon. Sec.

Mr. J. Symes (of 24, Church Lane, Hornsey, London, N.), who advertises in our columns, supplies an excellent honey (clear or granulated), which we can confidently recommend. It is sold at sevenpence, post free, per 1lb. jar.

The members of the Shettleston and Dist. C.B.S. are all pleased with Cage Birds Annual; they think it would be good value for double the money, and that no fancier should be without a copy of it, writes Mr. A. Berry, the Sec.

Kindly note that I have changed my address from Neville Terrace to 57, Nun Mill Street, Scarcroft Road, York, writes Mr. H. Thompson, Sec. of the York C.B.S. Mr. A. Hurst, of Accrington, is to judge at our open show on November 4.

Will Lochgelly fanciers please note that local membership closes on July 31, and that any member not paid up, or joining after that date, will not be eligible to compete for members' confined cup? writes Mr. Wm. Whiteford, Sec. of the Lochgelly C.B.S.

I wish Cage Birds every success, which it well deserves. I have been taking this journal for tho last 9 years, and am still as eager now for it as when I first took it up, and am off to my agent every week on arrival of mail.—C. Chamberlain (Port Elizabeth).

Will members of the Glasgow and West of Scotland N.M.B. and F.B.C. please note that the next meeting and show of British birds will be held on Thursday, April 27, instead of Tuesday, April 25, as previously arranged? writes Mr. F. Taylor, the Sec.

We keep getting fresh recruits in our society, and they all say they read Cage Birds. I am intending to send you a list of the members who are going to join Cage Birds League; the number, I think, will be about twenty.—R. Charleson, Hon. Sec., Leigh and Dis. C.B.S.

The Doncaster and Dist. C.B.S. have secured the services of Mr. J. C. Barnes (Sheffield) to judge Canaries, and of Mr. J. Maddison (Newcastle) to adjudicate in the British bird, mule, and hybrid sections at their annual open show on Nov. 24 and 25, writes Mr. G. Bescoby, the Sec.

I am sure readers of Cage Birds will be pleased to know that Mr. Alex. M. Gardiner has again been returned a member for the School Board here, writes Mr. Andrew Anderson (Newton Grange). He was third in the poll of nine for seven seats, and as he was fifth in the election two years ago this result speaks for itself.

The 1910 balance sheet of the Poplar and Dis. C.B.S. shows the society to be in a sound financial position, the balance in hand being £7 13s. 6d. The assets of the society, the secretary (Mr. H. W. Cook) informs us, are £11 10s. apart from the cash in hand. The members are to be congratulated on their financial standing.

Our annual show, writes Mr. T. Cameron, Sec. of the Bo'ness and Dis. F.A., is fixed for Nov. 4, and the following gentlemen have been appointed judges: For the Norwich section, Mr. S. Holmes (Fountainbridge); for the Border Fancy section, Mr. D. Hamilton (Hamilton); and for the British bird section, Messrs. A. W. Watson (Edinburgh) and R. V. Raine (Cathcart).

The judges for our annual open show on Oct. 28 are, writes Mr. John S. Harris, Hon. Sec. of the Dysart C.B.S.: For Scotch Fancies, Mr. John Thomson (Kirkcaldy); for Border Fancies, Mr. Robert Lambie (Whitburn); for Norwich and Crests, Mr. James Winter (Edinburgh); and for British and Foreign birds, Messrs. Robert Gilmour and Christopher Whiter (both of Kirkcaldy).

The 1911 programme of the Sheffield and Dist. C.B.S. is a very attractive one, including a question-by-ballot night, a talk on Crests, a washing exhibition, and a judging competition. Particulars of membership (the radius is 20 miles) may be had of the Sec., Mr. A. Hobson, 66, Langsett Avenue, Hillsboro', Sheffield.

Please announce through your valuable paper, Cage Birds, writes Mr. F. Whiting, of Brockford, Stowmarket, that owing to the growing demand for my seed-dressing machines, my stock is entirely exhausted, and I must therefore stop advertising for a few weeks until I have some more made up.

Having secured the services of Mr. J. Steel (Dalkeith) to lecture in the Co-operative Hall here under the auspices of Dunfermline and Dist. C.B.S. on April 29, I would like to draw your readers' attention to this, writes Mr. Robert T. Campbell, the Sec. We are throwing the meeting open so that all lovers of British birds may have the opportunity of hearing this able band at so interesting a subject. The lecture will be of special interest, as Mr. S. will have with him all the food stuffs suitable for the Softbills, and will show and explain the taking of the birds by the pocket apparatus. We are making an early start (six o'clock), so that all members may have full benefit of lecture and get home by late train and cars.

OBITUARY.

Mr. ADAM MELROSE (Galashiels).

As secretary of the Galasbiels O.S., I am very sorry to have to announce the death of our much-respected member, Mr. Adam Melrose, who passed away on April 11, at the age of 57 years, writes Mr. C. Lugton. His funeral took place on Friday. Among those present we noticed fanciers from Edinburgh, Duns, Selkirk and Walkerburn; there was also a large turnout of members of the above-named society, of which he was an active and energetic member for over 30 years. Scotch Fancies were his outstanding hobby, in the breeding of which he excelled, having bred many winners in his day. He was a great believer in pedigree breeding. Once when I questioned him on a doubtful-looking pair he had put up, he replied: "They are no muckle tae look at, but a ken hoo they are bred." His services as a judge were much sought after. We are sure his many friends in the Fancy will join us in offering kindly sympathy to the widow and grown-up family who are left to mourn his loss.

On April 11th, writes "J. E. N.," there was laid to rest at the Norwich Cemetery the devoted wife of Mr. T. Roberts, of Gloucester St., the popular local judge and exhibitor of Norwich Canaries. There was a large number of fanciers and friends at the graveside. By desire of many officials of local cage bird societies, the deceased lady was borne to the grave by members of the Canary industry, the sad duty being undertaken by Messrs. W. W. Freestone, J. Hall, E. Clarke, H. E. Dunham, W. Harl, and B. W. Pill, representatives of five associations. A large number of floral tributes were placed upon the grave. Among the large number of messages of condolence received by the bereaved family was one from Mr. G. H. Roberts, M.P. for the city of Norwich, deeply sympathising with them in the great loss they had sustained.

London Federation of C.B.S.

The council of the London Federation of Cage Bird Societies has instructed me to call a special meeting, to be held at the Feathers Hotel, Westminster, London, S.W., on Friday, April 28, at 7.45 p.m., to meet representatives of non-affiliated societies with a view to their becoming affiliated to the Federation. If I have omitted to send a notice to any society that is eligible for affiliation, will they kindly take this as an invitation to send representatives and let me know their intention? I should be glad if all concerned would note that I am now the secretary of the Federation.—James Bray, jun., Hon. Sec., 67, St. Dunstan's Road, Hammersmith, S.W.

Rare Birds for the Zoo.

Few people who visit the Zoo give much consideration to the means by which the wonderful tropical birds are caught, or of the great army of men who are engaged in searching for these rare birds, says the "Evening Times." One of these collectors, Mr. W. Frost, is now in Calcutta with thirty large cases containing cages with no less than 700 birds awaiting shipment for London. He is proud of the fact that he has captured specimens of the rare Sun-bird, some types of which have never been seen in England. To an interviewer he said:—"Once you explain the habits of a bird to a native bird-catcher, he can invariably get it for you. I have with me an old man, Parwani, who collected birds for the ex-King of Oudh. He has a marvellous knowledge of birds in his part of the country." Asked whether he had any other rare birds, Mr. Frost replied:—"Yes, the Minarets and the Maroon Oriole. Then there are some Blood Pheasants from the Himalayas, light green with splashes of red, blood-red splashes on the breast. I have also a large collection of Blue Fly-catchers, which are rare; there are only three of them in England. Then there are different species of Sun-birds; the Violet one is difficult to get, and the only one in England now secured a prize at the Crystal Palace show." No little difficulty is experienced in keeping the birds in good condition, and the question of feeding is a very serious one. The Sun-birds have milk and honey and the white of egg. The other birds are largely fed on green flies specially prepared for them, and Mr. Frost had to get no less than a ton of these insects.

My Experiences in the Bird Fancy.

FRED ARCHER (Huddersfield).

The writer of these instructive notes has had a very successful career recently on the show bench, his birds having won high honours at the leading English and Scottish Exhibitions.

In response to the Editor's request, I have pleasure in giving readers of Cage Birds a brief record of my experiences as a bird fancier. It is now more than twelve years since my interest in birds was first aroused, and through these years my enthusiasm for, and devotion to, the hobby has been of an ever-deepening nature. I have been a regular subscriber to Cage Birds, and I have derived great assistance from the advice and the articles which have been given with such unfailing regularity by the experts. From the weekly reading the desire to visit all the shows which distance and the shallow capacity of a working man's pocket would allow was but the natural order in the sequence of events. For years past I have visited all shows which it has been humanly possible for me to attend, and by close observation of the birds and their environments, and by a careful study of the methods of the different fanciers, and especially of those who have made for themselves a reputation in the hobby, I have learned much. And this knowledge has enabled me to estimate what kind of birds I should require in order to ensure success at the shows.

Points for Beginners to Note.

I have some diffidence in offering advice to your readers, but it may not be out of place for me to suggest to all new beginners that the following points are worthy of their serious consideration. First, never show your bird in a dirty cage. A clean and sweet cage will enable your exhibit to do fuller justice to yourself and to its own merits; for, however fine your bird may be, it is obvious that he cannot show himself at his best in dirty and uncongenial surroundings.

Secondly, put your birds down in the best possible condition, or don't exhibit at all; for it is not fair either to yourself or to your bird to enter a competition under such self-inflicted handicaps. To secure the maximum of condition the fullest attention must at all times be given to feeding and to the bath. In feeding I use the best Spanish canary seed, adding hemp, maw, summer rape, and dandelion, as experience and discretion direct in the case of each bird, and I find that my birds both like and do well on this mixture. I am a great believer in the bath, and have strong convictions that attention to this function, and to the keeping of the cage sweet and clean, are primary factors in securing the fullest condition for the birds.

Two Favourites and their Food.

In respect to classes for birds, the Redpoll-Bullfinch and the Greenfinch-Bullfinch are my favourites in the hybrid section. I have two of these birds, and have been exceptionally successful with them, as the undermentioned records reveal.

If I have shown both birds at one show I have invariably secured first with one and second with the other; or if I have shown them at different exhibitions I have secured firsts with both on the average of two cases out of every three. The cross of each is of a rare blend, and a good specimen will always command a high price.

Both these birds are fed on the mixture mentioned above; but to it I add a little sunflower seed, for which they show a decided partiality.

The light Goldfinch-Canary Mule is another specimen I am very fond of, and can honestly recommend. I have one in my possession now which has done exceedingly well on the show bench. Size is a most important factor of success in connection with this bird, and a good big one will, nine times out of ten, beat the smaller bird, however good. My Crystal Palace winner, as was seen in your drawing, was not the biggest Mule on show, but there was not another exhibit in the class which compared with mine for condition, and it was to this fact that his success was due. Readers will, therefore, see my reasons for so strongly advising attention to details which will secure them the maximum of condition in all their intending exhibits, and these are only to be secured by ceaseless attention to the necessary details, if they would have their efforts attended by success.

We have secured the services, writes Mr. Wm. Melvin, the Assistant Sec. of the Stonehouse C.B. and F.H. Society, of the following gentlemen to judge at our annual show on November 4, viz.: Mr. Allan Chalmers (Kirkintilloch) for Norwich, mules, and hybrids; and Mr. J. Patterson (Chirnside) for Borders and British birds. Our society is in a flourishing condition. We had four new members at our last meeting, and we have prospects of more.

No. 3.—My Crimson Finches.

A short time ago a group of workers among the poor of town and country alike were discussing the woeful state of the feeble-minded and the possibility of legislation to ameliorate their condition and restrain their production. Arose in the midst a man of education and influence, who ridiculed the idea of the Parliament of these Isles taking up its time with trifles of this sort—if, indeed, such persons really exist; and I must say, he went on, that throughout my wide and varied business experience I have never come across individuals corresponding to those you have described; and as a railway director I have unequalled opportunities of judging the characters of men in all stations of life.

As I read these words I thought of my readers; and I believe it will describe the expression of very many of them regarding Crimson Finches. A good many are rather sceptical as to whether they really exist.

These little birds very seldom come over from Australia, and when they do, not more than half a dozen at a time, and owing to their pugnacity probably some of these will be killed before the voyage is over. They generally arrived in a more or less pecked about condition owing to their friendly attentions one to another. Some of my readers will ask, what is the use of trying to keep these pugnacious little birds? I suppose much on the same principle as we do other apparently useless things.

Personally, I abominate golf as a hideous waste of time and energy, though of course I recognise that it has its uses in providing occupation and amusement for the local unemployed, and in keeping one's visitors out of the way during the day time. In the same way the importation of Crimson Finches enables more than usually enterprising dealers to get a living, and it also permits of people with more money than they know what to do with to buy them. And really, Crimson Finches are most fascinating. I can never resist their grace and beauty, although I know so well their evil disposition. If I see a pair I am bound to buy them.

An Ambition Unrealised.

My ambition for years has been to breed Crimson Finches, but so far misfortune has dogged my footsteps. I have had many a near shave of success; but what is the good when it all ends in disaster? My Crimson Finch hens have never seemed averse to what is today called "woman's special work," but luck has so far failed me. Generally it has happened that the cock has been the cause. In nearly every case he will scalp his partner sooner or later, or else leave her "in puris naturabilis," or, as the old lady said, not even in that!

Since I began keeping Crimson Finches, and growing reminiscent, it is quite sad to think what a lot of pairs I have lost. It quite reminds me of the little child who, called to muse upon the insecurity of mortal life, said with deep feeling "What a lot of people have died this year! Our two cows and the Princess Alice!"

But, you will remind me, Crimson Finches are so expensive. Well, they are in a way when you consider that they are not exactly free livers. Forty shillings a pair does seem rather a lot to drop on two ounces of feathers and a long tail; but alas! how it irks some people to spend. There are any number of people about who will cheerfully spend five shillings on a pineapple, but churlishly grudge the same price for a bird. What a good job it is that we can't borrow birds as we borrow books; what a poor time some dealers would have!

I don't like to remember how many years it is since I acquired my first Crimson Finches; but a lot of water has since flowed under the bridge of time. I bought them from a private source, and for Crimson Finches they were really in excellent condition, the hen having only had a few face feathers removed. Still he was very spiteful, and the slightest notice on my part led to the most wicked exhibition of temper on his part, and a fierce chase of the poor hen all round the cage. I had heard such terrible accounts of the quarrelsome temper of Crimson Finches that I did not like to trust them in mixed company, as I thought if a Crimson Finch will scalp his own lawful wedded wife, what would he do to an unprotected female? Accordingly I put them in a large box cage with fine front, and rigged up a snug nest-box in the top corner, well lined with soft hay. The cock soon made for this, and having snugly ensconed himself he began to invite the hen to join him in the most dulcet toues. The last I saw of them that night they were sitting snugly side by side like a small Darby and Joan; but, alas! these peace preliminaries did not last.

For a few days all went well, and then one morning I found the poor little hen dead on the cage bottom; and there was only one verdict that could be suggested Wilful murder; and the culprit, Master Crimson Finch. Why he did it heaven only knows; but why does anyone murder someone else? All that year he had to live alone, as I could never hear of a mate. Perhaps, like the lady to whom Henry VIII. offered himself after one of his wives had "died suddenly," they excused themselves on the ground that they had only one head to lose. At any rate, none were forthcoming. In the spring of the next year I got a letter from Mr. Hamlyn saying he had some good Crimson Finches on hand, would I like any? I wired "Yes; send me a good hen." And he did.

An Alluring Amazon.

She was a real beauty, a little gem, and I thought she looked well able to take care of herself. Still, I was going to run no risks, so I put her in a cage by herself where the cock could see her but not get at her, and watched what would happen, like Moses' sister. The cock assumed his most dashing air, and fairly swayed from side to side with excitement, his tail going like a little pendulum. He really looked so good and holy that I felt it would be a sin to keep them apart; so after a week I caught the cock and transferred him to the hen's cage, on the theory that a lady is generally mistress in her own house.

I was amazed to see what termagent airs she at once put on, and how she reversed the usual order of things, and fairly chased her suitor round the cage; but I suppose it was only a bit of flirtation and pretence, for next morning they were quite friendly, and sitting side by side in the nest-box.

Some weeks later, on a warm summer morning, I was delighted to see the hen lining the nest-box with feathers I had considerately supplied for this purpose; and now my hopes began to rise like the tide. What if I should succeed in breeding little Crimson Finches? What a feather it would be in my avicultural cap! In about a week the hen began to look a little thick, and I felt a bit anxious, as egg binding is so often fatal to these tiny Finches. One morning I was delighted to see her looking quite fit once more, and as she went in and out of the nest-box a good bit, I felt pretty sure there was an egg. Two more days went by, with more visits to the nest, and then the hen began to sit steadily. For twelve days nothing happened but the daily round, the common task, that falls to so many of us, and then on the following morning I saw a tiny fragment of egg shell on the floor, and then I knew that we had gone another stage on the journey towards success. I did not dare to show that I had made any discovery, as any foolish conduct of this sort always spells disaster. Still I knew that things were going all right, as the cock kept feeding the hen, and she fed the babies.

A Slump In Babies.

For a week all went well. The youngsters were fed on fresh ants' eggs for the most part. These I got by an advertisement in Cage Birds, and they were beautifully white, plump and fresh; and by spreading them out on a tray in a cool cellar I was able to keep them quite good for ten days at a time. The great thing is not to let them heat. They want to be spread out in a single layer and apart from each other as far as possible. I do not think Crimson Finches would attempt to rear without ants' eggs. They seem to care for little else—at any rate, in my case. The week came to an end, and then, alas, I found a little corpse on the floor.

I think that all little birds should be black in the skin; they are better than pink ones. They look more decent, more clothed, more respectable. It is the same in Egypt, where in the heat of the day the fellaheen shed their robes and bend hour after hour over their tasks. The brown and the black harmonise with the landscape, and there is no offence; pink skins are showy, pretentious, almost vulgar; thence the deduction may be drawn that all little birds, before they are clothed with feathers, ought to be dark in colour. Day by day a poor little pink morsel was dropped on the floor until, as the nigger song says, there were three.

That completed the tale of bricks so far as my baby Crimson Finches were concerned, and when I looked in the nest there was nothing. That ended my breeding chances; for that season the birds made no further attempt to replenish their earth, and before another season came round "the Man with the Scythe" had parted them for ever, and new interests and new species called off my attention before another breeding season. One can't breed everything. I got a good offer for the pair about this time, so I let them go; and for all I know to the contrary, they may by this time be the parents of a happy family.

This is the end of my story. The quest has not been accomplished; but what of that? As one grows older one begins to realise how impossible it is with our limited human experience to distinguish between real and ultimate good. The blessings of life come riding on storm clouds, its curses are often wrapped in silver paper and honeyed words. Life is a long pursuit, and in the end the prize too often eludes us. But, if increase of wisdom be the goal of existence to us poor creatures of earth, any way by which knowledge can be acquired or experience reverently used must be a gain.

That it may be so in this case is the reason why I have written this little experience. If every time we put up a pair of birds to breed, success crowned our efforts, how soon we should tire! It is the hope that springs eternal in the human breast that keeps us going. At any moment a turn in the road may bring us in sight of the longed-for goal; but, alas, how often we see only the long, dreary vista stretching out before us!

My Five Favourite - Finches. -

By I. THOMAS. (Otley.)

In writing this essay on five favourite British Birds my hope is to give instruction to the novice and to encourage the amateur in keeping and exhibiting British birds. This is one of the most healthy and interesting hobbies a working man can undertake. When he becomes thoroughly interested in this study he will find he is becoming a more healthy man and more humane; and he will begin to realise that life is worth living. Let him rise early on a Sunday morning in the beautiful month of May and take a long walk in the country. What joyous sounds he will hear and beautiful sights he will see! Let him study the Nature before him—the distant hills and clouds, the winding river, the swift running brook, the beautiful woodland and hedges, and above all the glorious morning song of the birds. All these scenes he will find full of bird life and harmony. Then he will remember that beautiful Psalm in which occurs the passage, "O Lord, how manifold are Thy works; in wisdom hast Thou made them all; the earth is full of Thy glory."

Warbling His Song.

No doubt the first bird song he will hear as he leaves the town will be that of the Starling, warbling his song to his mate on the vane of the church spire. Then, as he crosses the bridge over the river that leads him to the country, he stands and looks into the dreamy waters below; and while he is musing there he is aroused to his senses by the darting from under the arches of the beautiful Kingfisher, whose green back and blue wings shine brilliantly in the morning sunlight.

He does not journey far before he hears the "pink, piuk," of the Chaffinch; then the beautiful Wagtail runs before him, darting at the flies at intervals. Then he hears the croaking Rooks who are busy feeding their young in the trees of the park beyond.

Now he is in the country, and the Lark is singing his glorious song in the skies as a welcome to him to this Paradise of all bird lovers. Here it is he first covets these feathered beauties of creation; and then comes the thought: Why not have these with me always? Thus comes the advent of another recruit to the legion of bird fanciers, and he requires the instruction and encouragement of his elder and more experienced brother fanciers to help him forward in his new hobby. In giving this paper I shall deal only with the species that any ordinary working man can afford to keep without their taking up too much of his leisure time or demanding too much of his hard-earned money: I mean the hard-billed birds, or seed eaters.

The Poor Man's Cage Bird.

I shall take as my first subject the poor man's cage bird, the Greenfinch. This bird is perhaps the least interesting of the Finch tribe, but when once accustomed to cage life it becomes more interesting to his owner. He can be got remarkably tame by kind treatment and companionship. When buying British birds, get the biggest and the best you can always of whatever species, as a good bird takes no more keeping than a poor specimen, and he will pay you far better.

Although it is a common bird, I dearly love the Greenfinch, and when properly attended to he returns your love twofold. Feed him well and keep him clean, is my motto. As a good plain diet I believe in the following seeds: Sunflower in abundance—this is a fountain of natural colour for him (I generally crack or crush it for him)—also the best of Spanish canary at all times; a large percentage of rape, turnip and charlock seeds in summer and hemp and linseeds and crushed oats in winter. These will keep Greenie in the best of condition. Don't forget to let him have plenty of water for washing purposes, as he is a great bather.

In procuring a specimen for show I should recommend a wild caught bird: it is always larger and more robust than a hand-reared one. It is a bird that is easily tamed. I should recommend the fancier to get two cocks—one buff and one yellow. Select the largest you can (from the stock of a respectable dealer), having rich broad yellow grassy green breasts and large, broad, round heads; see that the wings meet perfectly down the back and that the ends are flat on to the tail. Make sure they are good in yellow of flights and that the birds are thoroughly even in colour, with no greyness on breast or light colour. Also take note of the feet, and see that all the nails are on, as judges want to judge whole birds.

Colour-feed the buff bird to the best of your ability with tasteless pepper in very small quantities, or he will refuse to eat; aye! and will pine away and die rather than touch it if once he turns against it. Then you have him for the colour-fed classes, and the yellow bird for the unfed classes. See that he shines like a Starling and is feathered like a Java Sparrow, perfectly steady, perk, and cheeky, before you enter him for a show, and then await and see what are the results of your labour.

You have now, we shall suppose, entered your Greenies in two classes—fed and natural colour. See that they are clean when sent off to the show, and that the perches and cages are clean. Paint your cages for the Greenies a French grey inside and also the wires, and the outside of cage black; or, if not French grey, paint the inside and the wire front with aluminium paint. This affords a splendid contrast to your Greenies, and will no doubt help your birds to take the judge's eye and demand from him some sort of congratulation.

How to Choose and Feed Bullfinches.

From the extreme richness of colour displayed throughout its plumage the handsome Bullfinch has long been a favourite of bird fanciers. The beautiful crimson breast, delicately shaded grey back and deep purple black head, tail, and wings, the latter crossed with a nice band of white, are known to nearly all bird lovers.

Now, in selecting this bird as one of your team, keep to the same rule as in the case of your Greenies. Select the biggest birds having the best colours, as a big good one will always beat a little good one. See that you get a bird of good size, rich, deep coloured breast, with grand, broad, round cap and bib, with good carriage. Having procured what you consider will be a fair specimen when moulted, you must consider his keeping in health and his education for the show bench. His staple food should consist of canary seed with sunflower, teazel, thistle, and hemp. Give also as a special luxury groundsel, dandelion, shepherd's purse, lettuce, and watercress in season; also in winter such wild seeds as dock, plantain, nettle seeds, privet berries, blackberries, elderberries, etc. If these are not procurable through living in large cities, you can always give them in preserved form, such as blackberry jam, black currant jam, etc. All these he will relish, and they will improve his colour.

When your Bullie is moulted, and in proper form and feather, you begin to prepare him for the shows. Handle the cages you have him in as often as possible; talk to him and gain his confidence; then he is ready to face the judge. Let him have a good run of his show cage previous to the shows; let him have a few hours per day in it; this will restore his confidence, and he will not feel strange when placed on the bench.

The Fashionable Roller Canary.

Its song; the selection of hens and pairs; breeding; feeding, etc: Being a translation from "Canary No. 12" by Herr Haupt (Dresden), read before the Leeds Roller C.C. on April 1, and procured by Mr. T. W. Walton.

May I be permitted to write of my long experience of this extensive subject—the breeding and rearing of Roller Canaries; and I trust that some of you may turn to advantage my ideas and practices. We all know, especially the older hands, that it costs a lot of trouble and endurance before we commence to reap any benefit from our work. Of course, we are not all blessed with abundance of cash, and we all, more or less, expect to get some incidental gain.

We can say that if you follow the experience of the older fanciers you can make some profit, especially if you breed for prominent song. Unfortunately, this is not always done, some breeding for quantity, which brings them very little gain; and they at last are glad to sell their stock to a dealer for a few shillings.

How can we alter this? I think, in the first place, by a thorough knowledge of your stock birds. I call special attention, in the first place, to the song. The bird "in song" you can expect to be healthy, and to sire healthy youngsters. The breeding cock should be slender, strongly shaped, and the abdomen low to the breast bone. The hens should have a full, plump breast, the breastbone not sharp. The abdomen should have a broad, oval ending; you should not find liverspots on same. The call note should be soft and deep, if possible. Hens like this will come into breeding condition first; but hens with rumps like the cocks should not be used for early breeding. They start later in the season, generally do not rear many youngsters, and often are a vexation to the breeder.

I would again point out the necessity of giving the utmost attention to the hens, especially in the winter time, and to their food.

The song of the cock stock bird should be deep and as full of variety as possible. You should not use cocks that bring scratched or hard aufzug, sharp schwirre, schnetterlike bell or acute sharp flute. It is from the cock that you expect to produce your best tours. He should commence his song with hollow roll or bass. None of the faulty tours just mentioned should be heard in a refined breeding room. Slight aufzug, soft schwirre, high bell, or thin flute, which are perhaps brought out at the end of the song or with the other tours make less mischief in the breeding room.

It is best to keep a good breeding register; otherwise it is nearly impossible to pair the birds together, according to their hereditary transmission. You should put the hens into the breeding cages at least a couple of weeks before commencing, in order that they may get used to the cage. You can then also observe their habits better, marking the cages with the book number. The cocks also should be put into larger cages for a week, so that they may regain their strength after their long imprisonment in the song box.

I prefer to run one cock with several hens, but be careful to keep the hens you are going to run with the one cock in cages as far apart as possible; then the sitting hens will take less offence when they hear the cock that was mated to them making love to the other hens.

Now comes the time when you intend commencing. You should choose the hens that are most forward (such as have been described). Give them pans and nesting materials, and watch carefully which hen starts building first. When the nest is almost completed, run the cock in, either in the early morning or evening. Very likely the hen will sit for him as soon as he starts to sing.

After the pairing, take the cock away. Continue this until the first egg is laid; this will ensure all the eggs being fertile. The following nests will be full if the birds are paired twice. The cock will be ready to go to the second hen after a day's rest. I always had better results thus, than by permanently pairing, as I consider that they waste their time and strength in useless fighting, which fighting you should avoid as much as possible. I will here say I have had great experience in all the different systems of pairing, and can therefore honestly recommend this way to all who read this.—H. T. Davis, Sec.

I have my copy of Cage Birds Annual for 1911, and I find it is the best sixpennyworth I ever had, as it is complete in every way. It is a wonder how you can put out such a book at the price. I have given some fanciers here "a read of it," and they have never seen anything to beat it. I wish your paper, Cage Birds, every success.—S. F. McIntyre (Airdrie).
